Russians in Pursuit Cross the San—Find Whole Batteries Abandoned in the Mud.

KONIGSBERG NOW BESIEGED

Germans Reported to Have Been Defeated with Heavy Loss Near Mlawa.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 14.—The following official communication was issued tonight:

"On the Austrian front the Russian troops are crossing the San River. In taking the position of Rava-Russka the Russian troops captured 309 cannon and 8,000 prisoners, and also enormous stores of war material and provisions. The results of the pursuit of the enemy in that territory are still unknown.

"In the marshes of Belgoral the Russians found some more Austrian batteries sunk in the mud, abandoned during retreat.

"The army of Gen. Broussiloff, while repulsing the last desperate Austrian attack, captured, the moment our troops took the offensive, a great number of prisoners and guns, the total number of which has not as yet been determined.

"Gen. Broussiloff declares that his troops gave proof of great energy, determination, and bravery. The commanders of the corps, he says, led their units with imperturbable coolness, snatching victory from the enemy on more than one occasion at critical moments. Gen. Broussiloff particularly commends the activity of the Bulgarian General Radko Dmitrieff in the fighting.

"On the right bank of the Dniester River the Austrians have been thrown back on Dorogobuzh, fifty-five miles east of Smolensk.

"Czernowitz, capital and chief town of the crown land of Bukowina, and all the neighboring regions have been occupied by the Russian armies without resistance."

Later the Chief of the General Staff issued the following:

"The rapid and energetic advance of Gen. Rennenkampff's army in East Prussia and our decisive successes over an Austrian Army numbering more than 1,000,000 men have forced the Germans to send back a considerable portion of their troops from the Western frontier.

"From Aug. 28 to Sept. 7 the Germans were continually bringing reinforcements to their eastern frontier. They then began an attack across the Mazur Lakes in a region which was well known to them. As they advanced their right wing threatened to develop great strength on the front from Nordenburg to Goldapp and Suvalki.

"This manoeuvre, which threatened to place Gen. Rennenkampff's troops in a serious situation, encountered resistance on the wings from our covering troops, which in a most self-sacrificing manner held up the enemy's pressure.

"Eventually after fighting, which cost the enemy dearly, our entire troops extricated themselves from this difficult situation and occupied positions with a view to later operations."

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 15.—The Russian Embassy in Rome, according to the correspondent of the Central News, says that the German Army commanded by Gen. von Hindenburg has been defeated near Mlawa, Russian Poland, and that the Germans are evacuating Poland with a loss of 50,000 men. The Ambassador adds that the Russians have assumed the offensive in Prussia and have commenced to lay siege to Koenigsberg.

A Berlin dispatch to the same agency from Copenhagen says that Berlin messages received in Copenhagen admit that the chief Austrian Army has suffered an absolute defeat, but assert that it is retiring in good order.

"Gen. von Auffenberg's army," the correspondent continues, "is said to be in a dangerous position, being cut off from the main army."

Telegraphic advices received in Rome from Petrograd are to the effect that the seventeen days' battle of the Russians against the Austro-German forces ended with the following result: Prisoners taken, 180,000; field guns captured, 450; fortress artillery captured, 1,000 pieces; transport wagons taken, 4,000, and aeroplanes captured, 7.

DENIES THAT RUSSIANS ARE AIDING BELGIANS

British Press Bureau Says There Are None in the Western Field of War.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—I am officially informed that reports relative to Russian troops having landed on either French or Belgian territory are absolutely untrue.

The formal denial of the Official Press Bureau reads as follows:

"There is no truth whatever in the rumors that Russian soldiers have landed or passed through Great Britain on their way to France or Belgium. The statement that Russian troops are on Belgian or French soil should be discredited."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 15.—The Daily Chronicle refers to the Press Bureau's denial of the reports that Russian forces have been brought through England from Archangel to the Continent as the last word in "the greatest 'spoof' of the war." One or two papers only treated the reports, which have been one of the most curious psychological phenomena of the war, as having a serious foundation.

An Associated Press dispatch received yesterday quoted the Ghent correspondent of The London Daily News as saying that he had confirmed the reports that Russian troops were operating in Belgium. These reports, he said, first obtained currency in the Ghent afternoon papers of Saturday, which published this statement:

"The German Army has been cut at Cortenberg, between Brussels and Louvain, by a Belgian army reinforced by Russian troops."

The correspondent said his investigations confirmed this, but he added: "Where these Russians are and what their numbers may be it would be indiscreet to tell."

GERMAN TARS SEIZE BRITISH CABLE STATION

Land on Fanning Island in the Pacific and Cut Line to Australia.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Sept. 14.—Definite news has reached Vancouver that the Germans have captured the Fanning Island cable station. Whether the men who landed on the island on Monday, Sept. 7, were from the cruiser Nürnberg or Leipsig cannot be definitely ascertained.

Communication was broken off so suddenly with the Bamfield, (Vancouver Island,) end of the cable that the Fanning Island operator was able only to send a message that armed men in uniform had landed and had entered the Superintendent's office. Here the message stopped abruptly and the cable has been silent ever since.

Presumably the Germans immediately cut the cable at the shore end and took off the coal and supplies that are maintained on the island for the use of the cable operators. Whether they took the operators as prisoners of war is also unknown.

It is understood that the British Admiralty is taking prompt steps to restore communication with Australia and New Zealand. Meanwhile business from Great Britain and elsewhere is being dispatched by the eastern route, through Persia, Further India, and by the transcontinental telegraph across Australia.

TENNESSEE CHEERS BRITONS

Her Jackies Send Back Answering Chorus of "Rule, Britannia."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—A Times correspondent in France describes an incident at Havre when the United States cruiser Tennessee lay in the harbor and a British transport, the decks of which were thronged with soldiers, passed her. The American cruiser dipped the Stars and Stripes, and suddenly the British Tommies broke into "Rule, Britannia."

Then, says the correspondent, "an amazing thing happened. I heard and was thrilled by it. The gallant American sailors took up the rolling chorus—'Rule, Britannia! Britannia rules the waves. Britons never, Never, never shall be slaves.' It was the most perfect act of brotherliness which I have ever witnessed."

BRAND WHITLOCK'S WAY.

Cornered Cattle Market for Belgians Against German Soldiers.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 15.—According to a letter from Brussels, published in The Courant today, German officers going to market in that city to buy cattle last Friday found that Brand Whitlock, the American Minister, had cornered the entire stock. Later arrangements were made by which the Germans could buy one carcass out of four.

Retreating Columns Harried by Cavalry — Victory Termed Greater Than Officially Reported.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 14, (Dispatch to The London Standard.)—The best view of the retreating German armies was obtained by a French military airman who, ascending from a point near Vitry, flew northward across the Marne and then eastward by way of Rheims down to the region of Verdun and back again in a zigzag course to a spot near Soissons. He saw the German hosts not merely in retreat, but in flight, and in some places in disorderly flight.

It was a wonderful sight to look down upon, those hundreds of thousands of moving troops, the long gray columns of the Kaiser's picked troops, some marching in a northerly, others in a northeasterly direction, and all moving with a tremendous rapidity eloquent of their desire to place themselves beyond the reach of the allied armies, which were harassing them at every step.

The retreat was not confined to the highways. Many German soldiers were seen running across the fields, jumping over fences, crawling through hedges, and wending their way through woods, without any semblance of order or discipline. These men doubtless belonged to regiments which had been badly cut up in the fierce fighting which preceded the general retreat. Deprived of a majority of their officers, they were a mere rabble of fugitives, many without rifles, having abandoned their weapons in their mad haste to escape the vengeance of the French and British pursuers.

These scenes of almost panic-stricken flight were witnessed at the end of a week's hard fighting. It must not be supposed that this incontestable victory, as justly it must be called, over the Germans was achieved without hard fighting of a destructive character at the outset. During the first few days of the battle of the Marne the Germans fought stubbornly and bravely and with all the efficiency characteristic of their military methods. Every inch of the advance of the allied armies was contested, and it was not until the superiority of the British and French troops was clearly demonstrated by the results of the four days' battle that the Kaiser's hosts began their precipitate retreat. Up to that point their retreat had been slow, steady, and orderly.

Turning Point of Campaign.

It is quite clear that the Germans did their best and that they were beaten in a battle which they themselves recognized as the critical turning point of the campaign in France. One feature stands out clearly, and that is that French troops are capable of meeting German troops on equal terms and beating them. If the battle of the Marne produced no other result than a realization of this fact on both sides its effect on the rest of the war still would be of incalculable value. But the defeat of the Germans will be supremely important in many other directions.

The vast quantities of military stores and ammunition which have fallen into the hands of the allied armies show clearly how disorderly the flight became in the last day or two. The loss of upward of 200 guns alone must be a severe blow to Prussian self-esteem. The advancing allied armies found large areas of ground littered with rifles, ammunition, belts, knapsacks, drinking flasks, ammunition wagons, boxes of flour, &c. Some of the Germans even had thrown off the coats as well as other portions of their equipment in their desire to lighten themselves and thus facilitate their escape.

After the superiority of the British and French troops had compelled the Germans to retreat, their retirement developed into flight, partly owing to the collapse of their supplies of ammunition and food. During the previous withdrawal of the French Army from the north of France to the lines between Paris and Verdun they took with them nearly all the available cattle, wheat, and other foodstuffs, so that the Germans advanced through regions almost deprived of any means of sustenance. Thrown back on their own supplies, brought up over greatly prolonged lines of communication, their commissariat was unequal to the Russians Said to Have Been Driven Out with Heavy Losses in Artillery and Men.

BERLIN, Sept. 14, (Wireless Dispatch to The Associated Press by way of Sayville, L. I.)—The headquarters of the German Army in Berlin gave out this official report late today:

"The garrison at Antwerp has been repulsed.

"The Crown Prince's army is now attacking the forts between Verdun and Toul on both sides.

"Prince Joachim arrived today in Berlin and has been lodged in Bellevue Palace.

"Last night's official details of the battle to the east of Paris cannot yet be made public. A new battle is in progress, which up to the present has been favorable to the Germans. Reports from Paris and London of a German defeat are declared untrue.

"The retreat of the Russian Army in East Prussia appears to be developing into flight and demoralization. Gen. Hindenburg reports the capture of 150 guns and between 20,000 and 30,000 prisoners.

"The London Times confesses that the attempts at recruiting in Ireland have failed.

"Prince Ernest of Saxe-Meiningen, mortally wounded, gave to a soldier in the sanitary service a paper, expressing a wish that his body should not be buried in the ducal mausoleum, but laid at rest with those of his fallen comrades. The note concluded with the words: 'I salute my Emperor.'"

Tells of Crown Prince's Success.

A previous report, issued today, said:

"The German Crown Prince has captured the enemy's fortified position southwest of Verdun, and is now bombarding with heavy artillery the outer forts lying to the south.

"A battle is in progress between Paris and the River Marne over a front of 125 kilometers, stretching from Nanteuil, in the west, where the English forces are, to Vitry. The Crown Prince's army is separated from the main battle by the forest of Argonne.

"The armies of the Crown Prince of Bavaria and Gen. von Heeringen are in formal battle near the Upper Moselle.

"James W. Gerard, the American Ambassador to Germany, has given out an interview to the press, denying persistent reports that the United States was preparing to join the Allies; that Mr. Whitlock (American Minister at Brussels) had attached the Mayor of Brussels to his staff; that the American flag had been raised at Ghent; that the Tuckerton incident was unfriendly discrimination against Germany, and that he is advising Americans to hurry away because the United States was going to war.

"Gen. Hindenburg has defeated the Russians, has crossed the Russian frontier, and up to the present time has taken 10,000 prisoners and captured 80 guns and many machine guns and aeroplanes."

A New Battle Going Favorably.

ROTTERDAM, Sept. 14, (by way of London.)—A dispatch from Berlin says the German General Staff announced yesterday that a plan of campaign in the western theatre of the war, of which no details had been made known, had led to a new engagement which so far was favorable to the Germans.

ANXIETY IN BERLIN.

People Fearful Despite Good Reports Given Out by General Staff.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROTTERDAM, Sept. 14.—(Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—Berlin is not allowed to know the exact facts of the last few days of fighting, and public opinion in the German capital is not only ill-informed, but anxious and fearful. Not until yesterday were any details given to the public, and the statement then issued only covered partial developments. The German General Staff declared that movements had taken place which led to a new battle favorable to German arms, adding:

"All the news published by the enemy stating that the battle is unfavorable to us is untrue. Since Sept. 9 a new battle has begun on the Paris-Verdun-Nancy front, and the French Lorraine German Army has kept its position. Upper Alsace has been cleared of the enemy by the army of Gen. von Heeringen."

The German story of the operations between Sept. 5 and 9 is interesting. The General Staff asserts that the Allies' sortie from Paris in the direction of Crépy was repulsed by the army of Gen. von Kluck on Sept. 5 and 6, notwithstanding that sortie on the second day was supported by French artillery.

The statement continues:

"At the same time the field army attacked on the line of Meaux to Montmirail. The weak parts of the German right wing at Crepy have withdrawn, owing to the overwhelming force of the enemy, notwithstanding the French attack has been broken. The withdrawn German wing has captured fifty French cannon and 4,000 prisoners. The French have not succeeded in breaking through the German centre, but, on the contrary, have been forced back on Verdun. The outer defenses of Verdun already have been taken. The attack on the line of Verdun to Toul was begun at the same time from the east and west ends."

GERMANS REPORT 25,239 LOST.

Latest of Berlin Casualty Lists Is the Longest.

BERLIN, Sept. 14, (via Copenhagen and London.)—The most extended list of German casualties yet published has been made public here. It comprises 784 killed, 2,190 wounded, and 814 missing.

The total of all German losses up to date, as published here, are now as follows: 4,184 killed, 15,985 wounded, and 5,070 missing. The grand total is 25,239.

SAYS GERMAN LINE HOLDS.

Recent Fighting in France as Described by German Correspondent.

ROTTERDAM, Sept. 14.—The report of a German war correspondent with the general headquarters in the field, as received here from Berlin, says:

"Toward the end of August the French endeavored to arrest the advance of the German troops through Belgium by attacking their forces at Epernay and on the German left wing at Metz and Saarburg. In these attacks the losses of the French and British were very heavy. The German right wing, composed of three corps, then attempted to outflank the Allies by a movement to the left past Amiens, which movement was successful and led to a rapid advance on Paris.

"Since Sept. 5 there have been heavy engagements in many places. An attack on the Germans from the direction of Paris over the town of Crecy and the Department of the Aisne was successfully withstood by Field Marshal von Kluck.

"On the following days the attacks were renewed, this time with the support of heavy French artillery. At the same time the French made an attack from Meaux and Montmirail. The result of this was that the weak German right wing of three corps fell back, breaking, however, the French onslaught and taking fifty guns and 4,000 prisoners."

The French forces, the correspondent asserts, made a notable attack on the German centre, but were thrown back on Verdun, whither the Germans followed and took the outer works.

According to the correspondent, since Sept. 9 a new battle on the Paris, Verdun, Nancy, and French Lorraine line has been in progress, with the Germans holding all positions. Upper Alsace, he says, has been entirely cleared of the enemy by Gen. von Heiringen.

GERMAN FORCE WEAKENED.

Ten Corps Sent to Prussia—Belgians Keeping Two Others Busy.

Special to The New York Times.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Evidence accumulates that the German Commander in Chief has been forced to weaken his force in France, owing both to the Russian menace on the east and the Belgian attacks from Antwerp.

Petrograd dispatches speak of ten German corps having been transported east, and at least one German division has been fighting with the Austrians in the Lublin district.

Amsterdam advices tell of the Belgian Army, which conducted a four-day vigorous offensive in the triangle of Brussels, Malines, and Louvain, retiring under the shelter of the Antwerp forts with the satisfaction of knowing that they had contributed to the defeat of the German right in France by compelling the Germans to concentrate all their available forces in Belgium, and recall their Third and Ninth Army Corps, which had been sent southwest, presumably to reinforce the Germans in the North of France.

Although the Belgians have again fallen back toward Antwerp, they keep in close touch with the Germans, and continue to occupy the attention of a great body of troops which they would like to send south.

ALLIES BEGIN NEW FIGHT

Germans Confront Eager Pursuers on Line Through Rheims.

FRESH FORCES PUSH THEM

Troyon, Which Has Been Under Fire Several Days, Retrieved by French Advance.

PARIS, Sept. 14, 11:09 P. M.—This official bulletin was issued late tonight by the War Office:

"On our left wing we have everywhere caught up with the rear guards and even the main body of the enemy.

"Our troops have re-entered Amiens, abandoned by the German forces.

"The enemy appears to be making a stand on a prepared front along the River Aisne.

"On the centre, similarly, it would seem as if the enemy intends to resist on the heights to the northwest and to the north of Rheims. In the region between the Argonne and the Meuse he continues to retire.

"On our right wing, in the Woevre district we have succeeded in relieving the Fort of Troyon, which has been stubbornly attacked time and time again during the last few days.

"In Lorraine our pursuing detachments are keeping, as everywhere else, in touch with the Germans.

"The morale and the sanitary condition of our armies continue excellent."

Passed One Line of Defense.

The official statement, issued in the afternoon, said:

"First—On our left wing the enemy had prepared, to the north of the Aisne, between Compiegne and Soissons, a line of defense which it was forced to abandon. Some detachments which it had held at Amiens now have retired upon Perrone and St. Quentin.

"Second—On the centre, also, the Germans had taken up a defensive position behind Rheims, but were unable to hold it. In the Argonne region they turned back toward the north beyond the Forest of Belnoue and beyond Triaucourt.

"On the right wing the retreating movement of the Germans is general from Nancy to the Vosges. Yesterday evening French territory in this vicinity had been completely evacuated."

Germans' Stubborn Resistance Vain.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The Official Press Bureau this afternoon issued this statement:

"All day yesterday the enemy stubbornly disputed the passage of the Aisne by our troops, but in spite of the difficulty of forcing the river in the face of a strong opposition, nearly all the crossings were secured by sunset.

"On our right and left the French troops were confronted with a similar task in which, like ourselves, they were successful. Many more prisoners were taken.

"It is reported from the French headquarters that the German Crown Prince's army has been driven back and that he has moved his headquarters from St. Merehould to Mont Faucon."

FRESH FORCES CHASE GERMANS

Paris Most Intent on Fate of Crown Prince's Army.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—Unrelenting pursuit of the retreating Germans by the British and French forces continued today with vigor. Despite the great numbers composing their various forces, the German withdrawing movement is being carried out with rapidity and cleverness.

The force which reached Provins, southeast of Paris, has now retired two-thirds of the way to the Belgian frontier.

The armies of Gens. von Hausen and the Grand Duke of Würtemberg, which constituted the centre, were thought today to be headed toward Rethel and Mézières, though part of this force was reported as still resisting at the south end of the forest of the Argonne.

In the opinion of military observers here, the army under the command of Crown Prince Frederick William is in a critical position.

It has been forced to the north of Rheims and in part, perhaps, from before Verdun. The Crown Prince's line of retreat to the west of the Argonne region is threatened, and it is felt that he may yet be surrounded and forced to capitulate. This would result in breaking the German host wholly in two. His alternative would be to try to force his way through south of Verdun, a desperate expedient, in view of the array of forts at this point.

So far as known the fleeing invaders have abandoned more than sixty cannon of various calibres and thirty machine guns because their exhausted horses were unable to drag them fast enough to keep up with the foot-weary infantry. Huge amounts of ammunition and war stores also were left behind, as the Germans moved through a difficult, marshy country, rendered almost impassable in some places by the heavy rains of the past few days.

The Allies, on the other hand, it is asserted, show no signs of fatigue. They are represented as stirred by victories to such elation that they are able to keep close on the heels of the enemy, whom they harass day and night, cutting off detachments and attempting to place forces between the foe and the comparative safety of the frontier.

Large bodies of fresh troops, it is said, have been sent forward to aid in the pursuit, and more are ready to share the chase. Some portions of the allied armies who through the hot days, interspersed with deluges of rain, bore the brunt of the fighting, are taking a brief rest in preparation for future movements which may call for equally great efforts.

Pan Trying to Drive German Right.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The Allies are pushing their advantge in France and doing their utmost to turn the retreat of the Kaiser's forces into a disaster by a stern pursuit on perhaps the broadest scale yet known in war.

The allied left, composed largely of fresh troops, with a heavy force of cavalry under Gen. Pau, is wheeling around so as to drive Gens. von Kluck and von Bülow toward the Ardennes and Luxemburg, and by a few more marches by La Fere and Laon might cut communications between the retreating Germans and Belgium.

The British, who yesterday captured nearly all the crossings on the River Aisne and captured many prisoners, are now north of that river to the west and are pushing the attack that would assist in forcing the Germans to evacuate Rheims.

The Allies' centre, somewhere between Chalons and Rheims, is making an effort to recapture the latter city, which would be one of the most popular victories that could be announced to Frenchmen.

Should these movements be crowned with success and Laon and Rheims again fall into the hands of the Allies, the Germans would have only one safe line of communication through Rethel—and even that might be cut.

CAPTURE GENERAL AND STAFF

Allies Are Taking Many Prisoners —700 from Imperial Guard.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—A batch of German prisoners, composed of a General with his entire staff and six other officers and 300 men, arrived at Noissy-le-Sec, five miles northeast of Paris, whence they were sent to the south.

A convoy of 500 prisoners and 164 wounded, all from the Imperial Guard of Germany, passed through Corbiel, eighteen miles southeast of Paris, Sunday. All were exhausted and nearly famished.

Several trains which arrived early today brought cannon, projectiles, ammunition wagons, aeroplanes, &c., captured from the enemy.

Among the wounded arrivals was a Sergeant of reservists who was in the fighting at Montmirail. He saw several Germans made prisoners in a field of yellow clover.

The forage had been cut and bound in sheaves, and when one of the sheaves was seen to move, a shot fired into it brought out a German infantryman. A second shot fired into another sheaf brought out another German, and it was found that all others in the field concealed soldiers. All were easily captured.

A chauffeur who conducted two officers to the front witnessed the siege of a beet sugar refinery where 2,000 Germans had taken refuge during the battle of the Marne. It was impossible for the infantry to dislodge them, and their fire was damaging.

Finally a battery of the 75-millimeter guns took position, and at the third salvo from these guns the building and its dependencies was seen to be on fire. The howl coming from the refinery was audible above the din of the cannonading. Many Germans jumped from the windows and were shot by the infantry as they fell. Others surrendered and a few escaped—perhaps 200 or 300. The rest perished in the refinery and its outbuildings.

Summary of War News.

The French War Office announces that the German forces are making a stand at the River Aisne. French troops have reoccupied Amiens, which has been abandoned by the Germans, and the Allies have caught up with the rear guard of the retreating German force and in several places are in touch with the main body. In the centre the Germans are preparing to resist the Allies north of Rheims; on the right flank the Fort of Troyon, twelve miles south of Verdun, which has been bombarded by the Crown Prince's Army, has been relieved.

The London Press Bureau reports that the Crown Prince's Army has been driven back; its headquarters has been moved from St. Manehould to Montfaucon. The Germans resisted the British passage of the Aisne all day Sunday, but were driven back at sunset.

German Army Headquarters in Berlin by wireless to Sayville station and through news dispatches via Holland announces that the details of the battle of the Marne cannot yet be disclosed, but the plan of campaign in France has been changed, and a new battle now going on has so far proved favorable to the Germans. Reports from Paris and London telling of a German defeat are untrue, it is stated.

Berlin by wireless also asserts that the German Army under Gen. von Hindenburg has defeated the Russian forces and has crossed the Russian frontier taking 10,000 prisoners, 80 cannon, and several aeroplanes.

Petrograd says that the Russian forces are now concentrated before Königsberg, while the Germans are sending reinforcements to the fortress of Memel, seventy-two miles to the northwest of this place.

In Galicia the shattered Austrian armies are rallying for a desperate stand before the fortress of Przemsyl.

Italy, although still preserving her neutrality, has joined the Triple Entente Ambassadors in a protest against the revocation of the capitulations by Turkey.

Austria, according to news dispatches from Rome, is feverishly fortifying Trieste against attack and the coast in that vicinity is being mined. This is supposed to be due to fear of Italy.

Japanese troops are closing in on the fortifications at Kiao-Chau. Troops have been passing toward Shaho and Ping-tie, which is about forty miles north of the fortifications, while other forces have been landed at Heitaku and Sohuboku.

German sailors, presumably from the cruiser Nürnberg or the Leipsig, landed yesterday on Fanning Island, in the Pacific, seized the British cable station, and cut the cable. The news of the raid reached Vancouver from the operator just before communication was severed.

SAYS MANY GERMANS WANT TO BE CAPTURED

Philip Gibbs Asserts Famine and Failure to Take Paris Have Dispirited the Troops.

By PHILIP GIBBS,
New York Times-London Daily Chronicle War Service.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CHARTRES, Sept. 14.—The centre as well as the right of the German Army is in full retreat, fighting a desperate rear guard action all along the line, pursued and harassed by the French and English forces acting vigorously on the offensive.

So much is already known, I suppose, from the official bulletins, but writing after several weeks in the war zone behind the lines of the Allies and in the midst of the historic scenes belonging to this great drama of nations, I may be able in this dispatch to explain some of the reasons for the German rout, which must seem mysterious after the triumph of their march through France, and to bring home to the imagination of readers something at least of the grim and terrible realities which are the inevitable companions of the victory and defeat.

The causes of this sudden turn in the wheel of fate are moral as well as physical. I have already explained in my dispatches how, when the Germans were at the very gates of Paris, the French nation, by the magnificent mobility with which they changed the disposition of their armies and concentrated an immense force upon the danger line, threatened the enemy's right line of communication. I also described the master stroke of audacity with which the Prussian Generals countered this stroke by their sudden change of front, risking all their fate upon the chances of a great battle which should break the allied armies in twain.

Real Causes of the Defeat.

As we now know, they took the risk and they failed.

But one must look deeper than the strategy of the war lords for the great causes of the enemy's failure. One must look at the German officers and men upon whom this strategy depended. One must look into the heart of the individual German soldier and at his behavior in the field.

He has come fighting all the way from Liege to the outskirts of Paris. For a month he has had no rest from this ceaseless fighting and ceaseless marching, and he has seen the utter indifference of his officers to the lives of men. He has seen his comrades sent forward, sometimes in close formation, to certain, inevitable death, into the sweeping fire of French guns, and he has heard orders to "spill blood like water," so long as those who follow made a way to the destined goal.

Let me say at once that this policy of driving men to slaughter with ruthless contempt for the sum of human life has recoiled upon the authors of it. At its best it could only be justified by supreme success, and that has not been attained. The men who are fighting now in retreat are savage with their officers—with the bloodthirsty business which has destroyed so many thousands of their comrades.

GREAT BEAR SPRING WATER on the case of six dozen siphons, bottles. 144vt.

THE TIMES'S SPECIAL CABLE DISPATCHES FROM THE SEAT OF WAR

This is not written from my imagination. Among the wretched German prisoners whom I have seen trapesing through French towns or packed like cattle into troop trains are many who have been candid in the expression of these things.

In many corps German soldiers have been glad to be captured as an escape from intolerable suffering.

The German plan of sending forward cavalry outposts at a great distance from the main army has meant that many of the captured patrols in the region through which I passed southward from Creil and Compiègne along the line of the Allies' left have been starving men. In one case, to my own knowledge, their haversacks were filled with grass as their only means of nourishment.

Captured Men Faint with Famine.

The men were haggard and faint when they surrendered themselves to the French cavalry, and begged piteously for food. Men do not fight gladly in such condition.

But most demoralising to the German right has been the capture of a great part of its ammunition, so that many of its guns are without food. Also the loss of a great column of ammunition which was destroyed by the brilliant attack of Gen. Pau at Crepy-en-Valois caused many of the German officers to weep and undoubtedly contributed to the breaking up of the German right, that has now fled far beyond the Ourcq.

Again the failure to enter Paris has had, as I learned from German prisoners, a demoralising effect upon the enemy. They fought to reach that goal, and the capture of the French capital would have had a heartening result far beyond its military significance. To turn away from Paris was a frightful blow to the German troops, and the first aim to them that the plans of their Headquarters Staff had completely miscarried. It was an omen of the great disaster that is overtaking them.

Finally, the vigor of the French offensive, after the first weeks of unavailing resistance, has completely surprised the German troops, and put panic fear into their hearts. They are unable to stand against the bayonet charges of men like the Zouaves, the Turcos, and the best infantry regiments of the line, who during the past week have come to close quarters.

At St. Remy and Vierton there was a remarkable example of this. The enemy's artillery occupied a good position on the heights, and their army was strongly intrenched, but one regiment of the French line attacked with the bayonet and routed four German regiments out of the trenches with terrible slaughter.

The Germans lost their nerve altogether at the sight of the long French bayonets, and, leaping from the trenches, ran with screams of terror. The greater part of those who died—and there were not many left—were stabbed in the back as they fled.

The same fear of cold steel was exhibited in the territory around Meaux, and in the bayonet charges which took place in such villages as those of Bréy and Penchard by the First Regiment of Zouaves the Germans made a miserable resistance unless they were protected by mitrailleuses.

German Artillery Not Very Good.

Speaking generally, though perhaps the facts have varied at different parts of the fighting line, the German artillery has not been so good as experts anticipated. I have spoken to many French gunners who fought in various sections of the front, notably at Mons, Charleroi, Meaux, and on the Marne, and they all bear each other out in saying that the German shell fire was poor, as many of the shells burst badly and were ineffective.

These things are not negligible in analyzing the present chances of the enemy in the most difficult position which it has yet encountered—a continued rearguard action through hostile territory.

But the frigid truth is that the German plan of campaign was made for advance and not for retirement, and that a retreat has not entered into its calculation. They are trying to fight their way back with an army that is broken in spirit, exhausted in body, lacking in a full supply of food and ammunition, and with no genius for rearguard fighting.

It will be the most terrible retreat since that of Lule-Burgas, and on a more stupendous scale, because it will not have a moment's peace from the armies in pursuit.

A War-Devastated Countryside.

The country which the enemy are now abandoning after their brief occupation shows the full horror of war and the awful difficulties which beset an enemy fighting through hostile territory. I do not pretend to have seen more than a patch of it round about Amiens and on the line formerly held by the allied left in the territory southward from Creil and Senlis, but the scenes here will be repeated along the whole line of route by which the army is endeavoring to beat its way back.

For military purposes the Germans burned many little villages, and their blackened stumps of timber and charred, broken walls, with heaps of ashes, which were once farmhouses and barns, remain witness of the horror that has passed.

Along the roadways there are bodies of dead horses, swarms of flies upon them, acting as germ carriers of almost inevitable plague.

In villages where fighting took place, like those of Barco and Poincy, Neufmontiers and Monthyon, Douylaramée and Chevreville, little whitewashed cottages and old farmsteads which were used as cover by the Germans before they were driven out by shell fire and bayonet charges are shattered into heaps of crumbling walls and shapeless ruin.

A Few Houses Escaped.

Here and there a house escaped. It stands prim and neat amidst all the débris. A little café-restaurant in one of the streets displays its piseards, advertising Pabonnet and other liquors, peppered by bullet marks, but otherwise intact.

In other villages one would hardly believe that war has stormed through their streets.

It is rather as though plague has driven their inhabitants away. The houses are still shuttered as when the French bourgeois and peasants fled at the first news of the German advance. It is only through the intense solitude and silence that one realises the presence of some dreadful visitation.

Deep ruts and holes in the roadway have been made by gun carriages and wagons. Spent cartridge cases lie about, and fragments of shell, and here and there shells which have failed to burst until they have buried their noses in the earth.

French peasants prowl about for these trophies, though legally they have no right to them, as they come under the penalties attached to loot.

Germans Left Much Behind.

In many of the cottages which were used by German officers there are signs of hasty evacuation. Cards and leather pouches still lie about on chairs and bedsteads. Half finished letters written to women in the Fatherland.

I saw similar scenes in Turkey when the victorious Bulgarians marched after the retreating Turks. I never dreamed then that such scenes would happen in France.

In the face of the German rout it is a little thing like one of those unfinished letters from a soldier to his wife which overwhelmed with pity for all the tragedy of war. The bigger things, the movements of great masses of troops, the wholesale slaughter along a far extended front, seem to stupefy one's senses.

The slaughter is unending, beyond the imagination of those who have not seen it. During the past five days I have been traveling about, and for several hundred miles in the backwash of the French and English Armies on the fighting line, and at almost every hour of the day I have seen wounded brought back from the front, the enemy's wounded as well as our own.

Victory has been with the French, but they have paid a fearful price for it.

Some idea of the number may be gained when I say that since the Germans have been in retreat 7,000 wounded passed every day through Orleans alone.

Paris One Great Hospital.

Paris itself is one great hospital, and in the centre and south of France every town of any size has its Red Cross organisation and temporary hospitals overcrowded with maimed and crippled men.

It tears at one's heart—this surgical business. Hundreds of times I have stood and watched the arrival of ambulances, fascinated by the drama of it, but also faint and sick.

One typical scene occurs to me out of many tragic memories. It was only the day before yesterday. A German officer was the first to be brought from a train. He had been wounded in the stomach, and his case was hopeless, but a young French doctor who could speak German gave him some morphine and tried to relieve his sufferings.

The officer knew he was dying and begged as a last favor that his love should be sent to his wife and children. He tried to give their names and address, but the young French doctor could not make out the meaning of the sounds which came from the lips of the dying man, who struggled desperately for just strength enough to say those words. He died suddenly, and the young French doctor lost interest in him. There were wounded men still living all around him.

The worst cases lay about the floor on stretchers, groaning, while nurses saw to their bandages and while doctors washed their wounds.

Germans the Worst Wounded.

Strange to say, also, the Germans were in nearly every case the more seriously wounded, and I observed this fact several times, having it confirmed by other witnesses. The great proportion of French wounded had been hit in the hands or feet, and therefore are comparatively lightly injured. They put this down to the inferiority of the German marksmanship, but I think there are other reasons.

It must not be forgotten, also, that a great many of the wounded die on the battlefield or on their way to the hospital bases. When I remarked on the light character of the wounds to the chief surgeon of the French hospital at Chartres, he answered with a significant sentence and expressive eyes. "The others," he said, "do not come back."

I am certain, however, the organisation of the army medical service in France is as good as could be hoped for, and this opinion, which is based on my own observation, is fully confirmed by Surgeon General Sir A. Keogh, who told me yesterday his reports to headquarters have been utterly favorable, and that all he asks for is a hospital train, or more than one if possible, and one or two more hospital ships.

The vast rush of casualties which has been made during the past five days is proof of the heroic way in which the French Army of the Left and Centre responded to the appeal of Gen. Joffre in the great battle which saved Europe from Prussian domination and forced the Germans to retreat along the whole line.

It is impossible for any one man to tell the story of the fighting along that extended front, but from many officers and men whom I have met in places as far apart as Paris and Le Mans, Chartres and Rouen, and in villages behind the English headquarters on the left Centre, stragglers from many regiment, "eclopies," as they are called, from many divisions, so that Zouaves are mixed up with chasseurs and artillerymen and the Nineteenth and Fourteenth Hussars with grenadiers and Irish guards. I have learned that the Germans, in spite of their gallant resistance, were demoralised by the terrific enthusiasm of the French attack.

Many French Bayonet Charges.

The French gunners were magnificent and overpowered the German artillery, and in many parts of the line there were repeated bayonet charges by the French infantry, who were reckless in their courage.

The truth is, as I have seen with my own eyes, that the failure of the Germans to enter Paris and the knowledge that the allied forces were at last able to take the offensive has made the French spirit leap up with new and irresistible enthusiasm of confidence.

The defensive did not suit their temperament. Continual retirement, with the enemy in the north of France, almost took the heart out of them. Now they are gay again, and their impetuosity is their chief fault.

It is characteristic of the joyous disregard for death with which the French are now pursuing the enemy that during the battle of Meaux a number of small boys ran about under fire in order to watch the fun, careless of flying bullets. "We are all fighting with boys," said the officer who told me this, but the courage of those "gosses" was marvelous.

RUIN IN TRACK OF ARMY.

Villages of Brie Destroyed and Fields Trampled by Fighting Legions.

By G. H. PERRIS.

New York Times-London Daily Chronicle War Service.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CHATEAU THIERRY, Sunday, Sept. 13.—We first realized yesterday, in a little town of Brie, which lies east of Paris between the Seine and the Marne, how difficult it is to get food in the rear of two successive invasions. As in every other town in the region, all the shops were shut and nearly all the houses. It was only after a long search that we found an inn that could give us luncheon.

There, in a large room, with a low-beamed roof and a tiled floor, our stout landlady in blue cotton produced an excellent meal of melon, mutton, macaroni, and good ripe pears. Dogs and cats sprawled around us, and a big bowl of roses spoke of serenities that are now in general eclipse. At a neighboring table a group of peasants, too old for active service, were discussing their grievances.

At a railway crossing just out of town we were blocked by a train of about a dozen big horse trucks and two passenger carriages, carrying wounded and prisoners to Paris from the fighting lines in the north. It had been a gloomy morning and the rain now fell in torrents. Nevertheless the townsfolk crowded up, and for half an hour managed to conduct a satisfactory combination of profit and pity by supplying big flat loaves, bottles of wine, fruit, cigarettes, and jugs of water to those in the train who had money and some who had none. One very old woman in white, with a little red cross on her forehead, turned up to take advantage of the only opportunity ever likely to fall in her way. A great Turco in fez, blouse, and short, baggy breeches was very active in this commissariat work.

Some of the Frenchmen on board were not wounded seriously enough to prevent their getting down on the roadway; and you may be sure they were not ashamed of their plaster patches and bandaged arms.

German Prisoners Well Treated.

There were about 300 German prisoners in the train. We got glimpses of them lying in the straw on the floor in the dark interior of the big trucks. I got on the footboard and looked into the open door of one car. Fifteen men were stretched upon straw, and two soldiers stood guard over them, rifle in hand. They all seemed in a state of extreme exhaustion. Some were asleep, others were eating large chunks of bread.

In the middle of the car a young soldier who spoke French fairly well told me that the German losses during the last three days had been enormous; and then, stopping suddenly, he said:

"Would it be possible, Sir, to get a little water for my fellows and myself?"

"Certainly," I replied; and a man belonging to the station, who was passing with a jug, said at once that he would run and get some. The prisoner thanked me and added with a sigh:

"They are very good fellows here."

One jocular French guard had put on a spiked helmet which he was keeping as a trophy, and, so much does the habit make the man, he now looked uncannily like a German himself.

As we passed through the villages to the northeast the contrast between abandoned houses and gardens rioting with the color of roses and dahlias and fruit-laden trees struck us like a blow.

A Desolated Hamlet.

In Gourchamp a number of houses had been burned, and the neighboring fields showed that there had been fighting there; but it was Courtacon which presented the most grievous spectacle. Eighteen of its two dozen houses had been completely destroyed by fire. The walls were partly standing, but the floors and contents of the rooms were completely buried under the débris of roofs that had fallen in. In a little Post Office the telegraphic and telephonic instruments had been smashed. Just opposite is a small building including the office of the Mayor and the village school. The outside of the building and the outhouses were littered with the straw on which the Uhlans had slept. In the Mayor's office the drawers and cupboards had been broken open, and their contents had been scattered with the remnants of meals on the floor.

A Wrecked Schoolroom.

But it is a scene in a little village school that will longest remain in my memory. The low forms, the master's desk, and the blackboard stand today as they did on July 25, which was no doubt the last day before the Summer vacation, as it was also the last week before the outbreak of the war. On the walls the charts remained which reminded these little ones daily that "Alcohol is the Enemy," and had summoned them to follow the path of kindness, justice, and truth. The windows were smashed; broken cartridge cases lay about with wings of birds and other refuse. Near the door I saw chalked up, evidently in German handwriting, "Parti Paris." ("Left for Paris.")

The invaders had sought to burn the place. There was one pile of partly burned straw under the school bookcase, the doors of which had been smashed, while some of the books had been thrown about. They had not even respected a little museum consisting of a few bottles of metal and chemical specimens; and when I turned to leave I perceived written across the blackboard in bold, fine writing, as the lesson of the day, these words: "A chaque jour suffit sa peine," ("Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.")

One of the villagers gave us the following narrative of the experiences of the past week:

"It was last Saturday, Sept. 5, that about 15,000 Uhlans arrived in the village with the intention of marching on Provins on the morrow. They probably learned during the night that the British and French lay in force across their road, and perhaps they may now have received orders to fall back.

"At any rate, early Sunday morning they started to retire, when they met at the entrance to the village a regiment of chasseurs. This was the beginning of fighting which lasted all day. Under the pretext that we had learned of the presence of the French troops and had helped them to prepare a trap, the Germans sacked the whole of the village.

"Naturally there was a panic. All the inhabitants—mostly women and children, because since the mobilisation there have been only nine men in Courtacon—rushed from their cottages, and many of them, lightly clad, fled across the fields and hid themselves in the neighboring woods.

Peasants Forced to Fire Homes.

"In several cottages Germans, revolvers in hand, compelled the poor peasants to bring matches and themselves set fire to their homes. In less than an hour the village was like a furnace, the walls toppling down one by one. And all this time the fighting continued. It was a horrible spectacle.

"Several of us were dragged to the edge of the road to be shot, and there we remained for some hours, believing our last day had come. A young village lad of 21 years, who was just going to leave to join the colors, was shot. Then the retreat was sounded, the Germans fled precipitately, and we were saved."

Asked whether the cottages had not been fired by artillery:

"Not a cannon shot fell here," he replied. "All that"—pointing to the ruined huts—"was done by incendiaries." And then he added:

"Last Tuesday two French officers came in automobiles and brought with them a superior German officer whom they had made prisoner. They compelled him to become a witness of the mischief of which his fellow-countrymen had been guilty."

A peasant woman passed, pushing a wheelbarrow containing some half-burned household goods and followed by her two small children.

"Look," she said, "at the brutality of these Germans! My husband has gone to war and I am alone with my little ones. With great difficulty we had managed to gather our crop, and they set fire to our little farm and burned everything."

Forced Villagers to Build a Bridge.

Half an hour later we were at La Ferté Gaucher, a small town on the Grand Morin, now first made famous by the fact that it was here that the German flight began after the severe fighting last Monday. The invaders had arrived only on Saturday and had the disagreeable surprise of finding that the river bridges had been broken down by the retreating French. The German commandant informed the municipal officials that if the sum of 80,000 francs ($12,000) was not produced he would burn the town. Then he compelled the people to set about rebuilding the bridge, and they worked day and night at this job under the eyes of soldiers with revolvers and rifles ready to shoot down any shirker.

The relief of these people at the return of the Allies may be imagined. Here, as elsewhere, some houses were burned, but otherwise the damage did not appear to be very serious.

7,000 WOUNDED A DAY.

They Pour Back Through Orleans —French Lads on the Firing Line.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ORLEANS, Sunday, Sept. 13, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—The timely guns of our garrison artillery at Meaux a week ago today overturned the German right wing, and there the Allies, enthusiastically putting all their weight against a yielding enemy, made no mistake about it, but compelled the Kaiser's troops to gather momentum along the backwaad road to Berlin. Now the whole of the German army in this field of war is in retreat, and the movement of the right wing is rapidly developing into a rout. Indeed, the rapidity of its movement, shown in the way it is abandoning wounded men and material, leaves no doubt that there is more on that flank of the Germans than our official bulletins indicate.

The Germans, there is good reason to believe, have been scared by the sight of troops they had not expected to meet so early as this in the war.

The country beyond the Marne, over which the German host has passed, is worth a visit if only to show what war is. The farm houses are blackened by the fire of shells, the haystacks are masses of smoking carbon, the roads are zig-zagged with trenches and broken by the great wheels that have passed, and the hollows are filled with rain. Shell fire has smashed trees and blown deep holes in the fields. A land as wide as England looks as though a great hurricane full of lightning which had missed nothing had passed over it.

Long processions of motor cars, wagons, moving vans—anything on wheels—pass continually south, bringing loads of shattered men.

Unburied Dead Lie as They Fell.

Nearer the firing line one comes upon villages where the walls of the houses have collapsed into the streets, and piles of wrecked furniture, agricultural implements, and farm carts show where the barricades and mitrailleuses were. The cottages have mattresses half filling the window spaces. There riflemen made a stand and in attitudes of dreadful and pitiful last collapses lie spread-eagled on the road, on their backs, or sit against the walls to which they crawled in agony, staring with awful eyes at nothing. On the ground dead horses are everywhere, and so are their abandoned, but living fellows, standing motionless, with shocking wounds, waiting for the end. Everything is wet with rain, but the puddles are thick and discolored.

All the towns south of the line of battle have been converted into hospital bases. Ot Orléans I was informed that for five days 7,000 wounded passed through daily. The approximate positions of the various German forces that invaded France are indicated by the numbers as follows: 1, Gen. von Kluck's army; 2, Gen. von Billow's army; 3, Gen. von Hausen's army; 4, army under Grand Duke Albrecht of Württemberg; 5, Crown Prince Wilhelm's army; 6, army under Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria; 7, Gen. von Heeringen's army.

Covering forces on the two flanks are indicated by connected dots.

No British were there; the stricken were French and Germans. Rapidly the great medical staff went over the consignment, re-bandaging where it was necessary, and sorting out serious cases. These were to be retained; the others were to continue their journey to another base.

Under an electric globe in the station hall was a young Prussian officer. A bullet had passed through his body, and even while he was being held up he died; but he had given a message for his wife and two young children.

French Help Germans First.

I should like to say that here, as I believe in this case elsewhere, the French give the wounded Germans first and special attention. Indeed, there is no hatred of the foe shown by any of the allied forces—except, it is necessary to add, by the Turcos. In the morning, when the business is over, the station floors are cleared, washed, and disinfected.

One curious little fact I heard yesterday from a French artillerymen; there are a number of boys in the firing line and it is impossible to get rid of them. Being there they must stay there. Some have attached themselves to their fathers, determined to serve in the camp and be with daddy to the end.

This soldier was amused by the temerity of these lads. They attend the guns, and during the actions, amid the nerve-racking sights and sounds of bursting shells, they maintain a naive curiosity, and nothing will induce them to leave the firing line.

THE CROWN PRINCE BESET.

Fate of His Army in Argonne Trembles in the Balance.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 15.—The London Times correspondent in Bordeaux telegraphs:

"The fate of the German Crown Prince in Argonne still trembles in the balance. He has been obliged to follow the general movement, and has begun to retreat to the north. The forest of Belnoue and Triaucourt has been occupied by the French, and an attempt has been made to find an exist for the Crown Prince's army through the chain of forts from Verdun to Toul.

"Fort Troyon, which has been heavily bombarded in the last two days, has stood firm, and the endeavor to open an emergency exit for the Crown Prince there has been abandoned apparently, as the bombardment has now ceased. Should he seek safety to the west, he will run into the greatest danger, as he has been left behind by the Germans moving backward at such speed that they have abandoned defensive positions prepared in their rear.

"It is possible that if the Crown Prince is strong enough to hold Argonne that the Germans may try to complete their change of front and swing their armies on the pivot of Argonne and around to the Valley of the Meuse. In this case the famous Paris army of Gen. von Kluck will find itself in the position of the outside runner at the bend in a racetrack and might be unable to get around in time."

FRENCH CASUALTIES HEAVY.

Out of All Proportion to the Losses Suffered by the British.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—A Paris dispatch to The Daily Express, dated Sunday, says that no full casualty lists for the French forces have yet been published, but all accounts agree that their losses are very heavy—out of all proportion to those suffered by the British and only inferior to the German losses.

The most costly battle was the first engagement at Verdun, where the French losses were at least 30,000 in killed and wounded. At Charleroi and during the hurried retreat afterward the losses were also very heavy.

During the fight on the Marne River the French also lost heavily. Gangs of soldiers spent some thirty hours in burying the dead.

BOOTY FILLS 21 TRAINS.

Immense Amount of War Material Won by Victorious Allies.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 15.—Twenty-one trainloads of booty, collected on the Marne battlefield, have been brought into Vincennes since Monday morning, says a Reuter dispatch from Paris.

The spoils of war include eleven guns, seven motor wagons filled with ammunition, four mitrailleuses, three aeroplanes, two large flat cars piled with helmets, rifles, swords, and cartridges, besides gun carriages and wagons of different kinds.

It is estimated that since the beginning of last week about thirty guns, thirty mitrailleuses and forty wagons have been captured from the Germans, in addition to a considerable quantity of ammunition.

JOFFRE A MURAT, NOT FABIUS.

Friend of General Depicts Him as Ardent and Lucky.

BORDEAUX, Sept. 14.—"Gen. Joffre must have smiled when he saw himself called 'Fabius the Cunctator,'" writes Louis Latapie, a friend of the Commander in Chief, in a morning paper.

"He really is more the dashing Hussar than the cool 'Delayer,' and recalls rather Murat than Fabius. He is the personification of pure intelligence—intelligence which knows how to restrain an ardent temperament, to bend it to discipline and reason or allow it full rein as circumstances dictate.

"To tell the truth, when Gen. Joffre accepted the supreme command, his friends were rather apprehensive. He was so optimistic—so decided. He was one of the most ardent and eager advocates of 'Revenge.' He has always had the most implicit confidence in the valor of the French officers and troops. He was always certain of their victory. All who approached him went away reassured, fortified, and resolved. Thus little by little he created about him an atmosphere of faith and enthusiasm. Believing that war was immient and victory sure he prepared for it with unremitting toil.

"Gen. Joffre is a lucky man. He has never failed in anything that he has attempted. He has absolute faith in his guiding star. Danger did not appall; victory will not astonish him."

TELLS OF MAUBEUGE'S FALL.

Defenders Discarded Uniforms and Were Hunted Like Stags.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—The Daily Telegraph's correspondent sends from Boulogne the following story of a soldier who took part in the defense of Maubeuge:

"The Germans commenced the attack on Aug. 25. We put into action 'Pieces de Batterie,' which carried ten kilometers. The enemy responded with their famous 'Piece d'42' from a distance of about fifteen kilometers.

"On Sept. 1 a shell fell on the fort and exploded in the commander's room. The latter led us into the entrance of the tower, which was brought down two hours later. We could hardly breathe in this stuffy little corridor, and thought our last minute had arrived. All of us, even the most optimistic, prayed on bended knee.

"When things became a little calmer the commander told us to save ourselves the best way we could, advising us to change our military uniforms for civilian clothes if possible. This most of us did on neighboring farms.

"For several days we hid in the woods, all the time knowing we were being tracked like stags. Four or five nights passed without sleep, and all we had to eat was wild pears. On Wednesday evening, however, I managed to escape to Roubaix, tired out and famished."

SACK A GERMAN'S HOTEL.

Mob at Nice Angered by His Remarks About French Wounded.

NICE, Sept. 14, (via Paris.)—While 700 wounded soldiers were being transferred in automobiles from the railway station, the German proprietor of a hotel at the terminus made derogatory remarks.

The crowd became infuriated and made a rush into his establishment, which was sacked. Several arrests were made and troops were detailed to protect what was left of the building.

The proprietor of the hotel, though a German, had been allowed to remain in Nice because he had a natural son in the French Army.

ALBANIAN INSURGENTS' RAID.

Village Devastated and Some of the Inhabitants Slaughtered.

BRINDISI, Italy, Sept. 14.—A report reaching here from Avlona, Albania, is that insurgents have invaded the village of Zeaerani and burned or razed the houses and devastated the fields.

The inhabitants who did not succeed in escaping were slaughtered, according to the report.

Their Appearance Greeted with Roars of Exultation from Crowds —Some Amusing Incidents.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—Since Saturday, besides a continuous stream of taxis, motor wagons, private automobiles and properly equipped motor ambulances conveying wounded to the hospitals, Parisians have witnessed the continuous arrival of German war material captured at the battle of the Marne. Twenty-one full trains of such booty already have reached Paris, and this is said to represent barely half the total amount.

It is estimated that sixty cannon, thirty mitrailleuses, forty ammunition wagons and three aeroplanes have already arrived, while as I write there rises from the nearby Place de l'Opéra an exultant roar from the crowds who for the last two hours have been awaiting the passing of one of the numerous batches of German prisoners traversing the city on their way to the Western concentration camps.

An amusing incident of the German rout comes from a tourist agency where great delight is expressed at a recaptured rubberneck wagon which was accustomed throughout the Summer to carry American visitors around the city to the Bois, suburbs and race courses.

Requisitioned for the transport of troops, its driver—a familiar figure in the Place de l'Opéra who was nicknamed Cent Kilos because he is barely five feet tall—managed to avoid capture when the machine was seized by the Germans near Compiègne. Since then he has accompanied the French forces disconsolate, but was overjoyed on Friday to discover that his beloved wagon had been abandoned near Meaux. It is still intact, though battered and riddled by bullets.

A Zanzibar pensioner of the British Government called at the American Embassy today and announced that he was down to his last four dollars, no recent remittances having reached him on account of the war.

He asked the Ambassador to telegraph Sir Edward Grey how about it which the Ambassador did.

GERMANS' BIG MISTAKE.

Failed to Follow Up Victory with Relentless Pursuit.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—Lieut. Col. Rousset writes in the Petit Parisien:

"Our army has broken the cohesion of the German forces and is now proceeding to scatter them. After their success at Charleroi the Germans seemed unable to reap the fruits, giving the impression that they were ignorant how to conduct a pursuit, victory's indispensable adjunct, which even in 1870 they never pushed fully. We learned the lesson long ago at Jena and are harassing the German flight with the utmost vigor.

"Suppose they rally and attempt to fight again, they risk an attack from the Belgians, already arrived at Termonde, on the rear of their exhausted army. It would mean our second victory, this time decisive."

The Figaro ends an article showing the tactical skill of Gen. Joffre's maneuvres, which forced the enemy to attack where he was fortified, with the words: "The hour of chastisement approaches."

The Eclair sums up a résumé of the military situation with the words: "Despite the demoralization of the enemy it is not probable that he will leave French soil without a further effort. We expect an immediate double battle east and west of Rheims."

The Figaro notes that one of the bombs dropped on Paris by the German aeroplanes struck 29 Rue Joubert, formerly inhabited by Marshal Lefebre, the Duke of Dantsic, of "Mme. Sans Gêne."

Gen. Gallieni and M. Briand with Ambassador Herrick yesterday visited the American ambulance installed in the Lycée Pasteur at Neuilly. M. Briand thanked officially, on behalf of the Government, the Ambassador, doctors and women helpers.

KING ALBERT TO POINCARE.

Warm Greetings Exchanged Between Monarch and President.

BORDEAUX, Sept. 14.—President Poincaré and King Albert have exchanged congratulatory telegrams. In a message the Belgian monarch said:

The great victory gained by the Allies owing to the courage and military genius of their chiefs fills us with joy. In sending you the warmest congratulations I am interpreting the feeling of the whole Belgian nation. We maintain unshaken confidence in final success in the struggle.

The abominable cruelties from which our people are suffering, far from terrorizing them as was hoped, have only put fresh energy and ardor in our troops. (Signed) ALBERT.

To this President Poincaré replied:

I heartily thank you for your message of congratulations for the commanders and men of the French Army. Our troops are proud to fight beside the valiant Belgian and British armies, for civilisation and liberty. When the hour of retributive justice strikes, none will forget what your Majesty and the admirable Belgian people have done for the triumph of the common cause.

Navigation on the Seine Reopened.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—As showing how northwestern France has been cleared of invaders, the President of the Chamber of Commerce of Rouen today telegraphed to Lloyds that "the port is now able to take coal-laden steamers for Rouen or Paris, the river navigation now being free."

RUSSIAN SHELLS BRING DOWN ZEPPELIN

Airship Drops Bombs Killing 23 Persons, After She Flew White Flag.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, Sept. 14. (Dispatch to The London Daily Telegraph.)—The assistant station master at Mlawa, on the Russo-Prussian frontier, describes as an eyewitness the capture of a Zeppelin airship.

"We were on this platform," he said, "when the Zeppelin appeared above us. It was flying very low, about 500 feet from the ground, near the town of Volan. Our artillery opened fire upon it, damaging three of its motors, but it kept going with the remaining one.

"Our soldiers, who occupied the station, then opened fire and the Zeppelin hoisted the white flag, whereupon a Russian officer, who was standing by me, ordered them to cease fire.

"The soldiers did so, but the Zeppelin immediately hurled a bomb. This scoundrelly act was seen by everybody present, among them a British officer attached to our army.

"The effect of the explosion was terrible and many people were wounded.

"The rest of us rushed toward the interior of the station, through the door and even through the windows. The British officer alone with remarkable coolness remained where he was.

"After the first bomb the Zeppelin threw three others, killing in all twenty-three persons and wounding sixty.

"One of our batteries opened fire on the airship and damaged its fourth motor.

"The airship went away for a short distance and came to the ground three and a half miles from the station.

"Our troops hastened toward it, but the Germans succeeded in burning and so damaging the equipment and apparatus that there remained only the aluminium envelope.

"The Germans were made prisoners. They comprised four officers and four soldiers, of whom two were wounded. Two of the soldiers tried to escape, but they were captured."

SILENT AS TO SHARP INCIDENT.

Bryan Won't Discuss Rumors of Our Envoy's Indiscretion.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Keen interest is being manifested in diplomatic and Congressional circles over the case of ex-Congressman William G. Sharp of Ohio, the new American Ambassador-designate to France, who is credited with having indulged in an indiscreet newspaper interview since his arrival in that country. The interview, according to unofficial information, was published in The Paris Herald, but has not been cabled to this country; and the fact that the French Government will not permit it to be cabled to American newspapers has aroused a great deal of curiosity as to its tenor.

For several days it has been reported that Secretary Bryan made an inquiry about the interview; but confirmation of the report is withheld by State Department officials. Secretary Bryan was asked specially today whether the United States Government asked for information about the interview, and replied that he had seen no such interview. State Department officials do not admit that any Government inquiry has been made about the matter.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 15.—The Rome correspondent of The Daily News telegraphs:

The Daily News adds to this the following note:

"This interesting news, if confirmed, would paralyse any aspirations which Turkey may have to throw her army into the balance of the European war on the side of Germany and Austria. It also means, probably, that Bulgaria has been promised compensation for her abandonment of any idea of revanche against Greece and Servia, perhaps in the shape of Macedonia, should Servia

SIR JOHN FRENCH TELLS OF SEVEN DAYS ADVANCE

DESCRIBES 7-DAY BRITISH ADVANCE

War Office Reports on French's Operations from Sept. 4 to Sept. 10.

GERMANS' CHANGE OF PLAN

"BRUTAL DAMAGE DONE"

Invaders Charged with Ill-Treating Inhabitants and Wantonly Destroying Works of Art.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Important details of the operations of the British Army in France are contained in a report which the War Office issued this afternoon. One of the facts which stands out is that the Germans, in their eastward movement to cut the French centre, attempted to ignore the British as a factor in that movement.

The statement of the Official Press Bureau follows:

"The following report is compiled from information sent from the headquarters of Field Marshal Sir John French, Commander in Chief of the British expeditionary forces on the Continent, under date of Sept. 11. A summary of the operations of the British Army in France was issued by the War Office on the 6th inst., and an account, stated to be incomplete, of further operations was issued from the bureau on Saturday night, the 12th inst.

"Today it is possible to give more complete reports of the movements of the British force and of the French Armies in immediate touch with it. This account is compiled from data received from the front, and carries the operations from the 4th to the 10th of September, both days inclusive.

"It will be remembered that the general position of our troops on Sunday, Sept. 6, was stated to be south of the River Marne, with the French forces in line on our right and left. Practically there had been no change in the situation since Thursday, Sept. 3, which marked the end of our army's long retirement from the Belgian frontier through Northern France.

Change in the German Advance.

"On Friday, Sept. 4, it became apparent that there was an alteration in the advance of almost the whole of the First German Army. That army, since the battle near Mons on the 23d of August, had been playing its part in a colossal strategic endeavor to create a Sedan for the Allies by outflanking and enveloping the left of their whole line, so as to encircle and drive both the British and French to the south.

"There was now a change in its objective, and it was observed that the German forces opposite the British were beginning to move in a south-easterly direction, instead of continuing southwest on to the capital, leaving a strong rear guard along the line of the River Ourcq (which flows south of and joins the Marne at Lizy-sur-Ourcq) to keep off the French Sixth Army, which by then had been formed and was to the northwest of Paris. They were evidently executing what amounted to a flank march diagonally across our front.

"Prepared to ignore the British as being driven out of the fight, they were initiating an effort to attack the left flank of the main French Army, which stretched in a long curved line from our right toward the east, and so to carry out against it alone an envelopment, which had so far failed against the combined forces of the Allies.

"On Saturday, the 5th, this movement on the part of the Germans was continued, and large advance parties crossed the Marne southward at Trilport, Sammeron, La Ferté-sous-Jouarre, and Chateau Thierry. There was considerable fighting with the French Fifth Army on the French left, which fell back from its position south of the Marne toward the Seine.

"On Sunday large hostile forces crossed the Marne and pushed on through Coulommiers and past the British right, further to the east. They were attacked at night by the French Fifth Army, which captured three villages at the point of bayonets.

Allies Start a General Advance.

"On Monday, Sept. 7, there was a general advance on the part of the Allies. In this quarter of the field our forces, which had now been reinforced, pushed on in a northeasterly direction in co-operation with the advance of the French Fifth Army to the north and of the French Sixth Army to the eastward against the German rear guard along the River Ourcq.

"Possibly weakened by the detachment of troops to the eastern theatre of operations and realizing that the action of the French Sixth Army against the line of Ourcq and the advance of the British placed their own flanking movement in considerable danger of being taken in the rear and on its right flank, the Germans on this day commenced to retire toward the northeast.

"This was the first sign that these troops had turned back since their attack at Mons a fortnight before, and from reports received the order to retreat when so close to Paris was a bitter disappointment. From letters found on dead soldiers there is no doubt there was a general impression among the enemy's troops that they were about to enter Paris.

"On Tuesday, Sept. 8, the German movement northeastward was continued. Their rear guards on the south of the Marne were being pressed back to that river by our troops and by the French on our right, the latter capturing three villages after a hand-to-hand fight and the infliction of a severe loss on the enemy.

"The fighting along the Ourcq continued on this day and was of the most sanguinary character, for the Germans had massed a great force of artillery along this line. Very few of their infantry were seen by the French.

"The French Fifth Army also made a fierce attack on the Germans in Montmirail, regaining that place.

"On Wednesday, Sept. 9, the battle between the French Sixth Army and what was now the Ge man flank guard along the Ourcq continued.

"The British corps, overcoming some resistance on the River Petit Morin, crossed the Marne in pursuit of the Germans, who now were hastily retreating northward. One of our corps was delayed by an obstinate defense made by a strong rear guard with machine guns at La Ferté-sous-Jouarre, where the bridge had been destroyed.

1,500 German Prisoners Taken.

"On Thursday, Sept. 10, the French Sixth Army continued its pressure on the west, while the Fifth Army, by forced marches, reached the line of Chateau Thierry and Dormans on the Marne. Our troops also continued the pursuit on the north of the latter river and, after a considerable amount of fighting, captured some 1,500 prisoners, four guns, six machine guns, and fifty transport wagons. Many of the enemy were killed or wounded, and the numerous thick woods which dot the country north of the Marne are filled with German stragglers. Most of them appear to have been without food for at least two days.

"Indeed, in this area of the operations, the Germans seem to be demoralized and inclined to surrender in small parties, and the general situation appears to be most favorable to the Allies.

"Much brutal and senseless damage has been done in the villages occupied by the enemy. Property has been wantonly destroyed. Pictures in chateaus have been ripped up and houses generally have been pillaged. It is stated on unimpeachable authority also that the inhabitants have been much ill-treated.

"Interesting incidents have occurred during the fighting. On Sept. 10 part of our Second Army Corps advanced into the north and found itself marching parallel with another infantry force at some little distance away. At first it was thought this was another British unit. After some time, however, it was discovered that it was a body of Germans retreating. Measures promptly were taken to head off the enemy, who were surrounded and trapped in a sunken road, where over 400 men surrendered.

"On Sept. 10 a small party under a non-commissioned officer was cut off and surrounded. After a desperate resistance it was decided to go on fighting to the end. Finally the non-commissioned officer and one man only were left, both of them being wounded. The Germans came up and shouted to them: 'Lay down your arms!' The German commander, however, signed to them to keep their arms and then asked permission to shake hands with the wounded non-commissioned officer, who was carried off on his stretcher with his rifle by his side.

"The arrival of reinforcements and the continued advance have delighted our troops, who are full of zeal and anxious to press on.

Success of the Royal Flying Corps.

"One of the features of the campaign on our side has been the success obtained by the Royal Flying Corps. In regard to the collection of information it is impossible either to award too much praise to our aviators for the way they have carried out their duties or to overestimate the value of the intelligence collected, more especially during the recent advance. In due course certain examples of what has been effected may be specified, and the far-reaching nature of the results fully explained, but that time has not arrived.

"That the services of our Flying Corps, which has really been on trial, are fully appreciated by our allies is shown by the following message from the Commander in Chief of the French Armies, received Sept. 9 by Field Marshal Lord Kitchener:

"'Please express most particularly to Marshal French my thanks for the services rendered on every day by the English Flying Corps. The precision, exactitude, and regularity of the news brought in by its members are evidence of their perfect organization and also of the perfect training of the pilots and the observers.'

"To give a rough idea of the amount of work carried out it is sufficient to mention that during a period of twenty days, up to the 10th of September, a daily average of more than nine reconnoissance flights of over 100 miles each has been maintained.

"The constant object of our aviators has been to effect an accurate location of the enemy's forces, and incidentally, since the operations cover so large an area, of our own units.

Five German Aviators Killed.

"Nevertheless, the tactics adopted for dealing with hostile aircraft are to attack them instantly with one or more British machines. This has been so far successful that in five cases German pilots or observers have been shot while in the air and their machines brought to ground. As a consequence the British Flying Corps has succeeded in establishing an individual ascendancy which is as serviceable to us as it is damaging to the enemy.

"How far it is due to this cause it is not possible at present to ascertain definitely, but the fact remains that the enemy have recently become much less enterprising in their flights. Something in the direction of the mastery of the air already has been gained in pursuance of the principle that the main object of military aviators is the collection of information.

"Bomb-dropping has not been indulged in to any great extent. On one occasion a petrol bomb was successfully exploded in a German bivouac at night, while from a diary found on a dead German cavalry soldier it has been discovered that a high explosive bomb, thrown at a cavalry column from one of our aeroplanes, struck an ammunition wagon, resulting in an explosion which killed fifteen of the enemy."

THE WAR SITUATION.

German Rear Guard Stubbornly Contests Allies' Advance—French Threaten German Centre—Failure of Attack on Verdun.

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES
(An Associate Editor of The Army and Navy Journal.)

The most noticeable development of the last three days has been the straightening out of the line occupied by the German armies. From Verdun southeast to the Vosges Mountains north of St. Die their line is almost straight. From Verdun their line bends to the southwest for forty miles, and then again runs northwest almost in a straight line to a point south of Laon. From this point on to the Somme between Amiens and Peronne the same line is continued by small separated detachments of Germans, whose principal function is to give timely warning of the approach of any strong force of the Allies to turn this flank.

This retreat is costing the Germans heavily in stragglers and losses in various minor battles. While this fighting is almost entirely rear-guard actions, yet the contact is on such a large front that fighting is almost continuous, and the losses must amount to a large figure in the aggregate.

This rear-guard fighting is one of the customary incidents of a retreat, and the withdrawal of the Germans from successive intrenched positions does not at all mean a decisive defeat in each case. It means that the troops at the rear have held back the pursuit long enough for their main columns to escape, when the defenders abandoned their position and moved forward rapidly to take up a new one and repeat the manoeuvre.

In a retreat like this the rear of an army is protected very largely by its artillery. Sufficient infantry is attached to the rear-guard to prevent the artillery from being captured by surprise, and cavalry detachments are provided for minor scouting operations. The aeroplane service is of especial value in locating the advancing columns of the pursuer.

The retreating force, having just passed through the country, has the advantage of the pursuers in knowledge of the terrain. They take up a position from which they can bring artillery to fire at ranges of 3,500 to 5,000 yards—two to three miles—on the roads by which the enemy will advance. When such large bodies of troops are moving it is impossible for them to move across country except in small columns and very slowly. Consequently they will stick to the roads wherever possible. This gives the defenders a chance to catch them in closely massed columns, where artillery fire produces the greatest effect.

When the enemy comes within range the rear guard opens fire. To prevent large losses the pursuers have to take shelter behind hills, in gulleys, or in the lea of any natural feature that will shelter them from the storm.

The pursuers have to wait until their artillery can be rushed to the front in sufficient numbers to overpower that of the defense, causing the delay for which the rear guard has been fighting. In extreme cases they may hold their position after this stage, and delay the pursuit until, under the protection of artillery fire, they have worked their infantry columns forward to close quarters. The numerous interviews with combatants show that this has happened repeatedly during the German retreat, an evidence of the stubbornness of the German opposition.

As pointed out during the retreat of the Allies from Mons to Paris, a simple retreat and pursuit cannot have great influence on the outcome of the campaign. This can be effected only by a serious defeat involving the loss of a large part of the army. In cases where retreats degenerate into a rout, direct pursuit can accomplish this result, but in the vast majority of cases decisive victory can be obtained only by breaking through and cutting off part of the enemy's army or by surrounding one wing and overpowering it during its attempt to retreat.

The Allies have not yet accomplished any of the above aims. The German retreat seems to be well conducted in view of the probable exhaustion of their troops. The Allies' left flank seems as yet to be insufficiently extended to envelop the German right flank. This is the time at which a new army for the Allies, coming in from the Channel ports, might have a decisive influence on the campaign.

The steady pressure of the French against the German centre between Vitry and St. Menehould is producing its results in forcing this part of the German line. There are indications that the Germans are in danger at this point of having their front broken. If the French should succeed in such a move, they would have a chance by a rapid advance down the Aisne and Meuse to envelop the four German armies on the right, or, at least, to inflict disaster upon them by attacking them in flank during their hasty retreat.

The change in the headquarters of the Crown Prince's army from St. Menehould to Montfaucon, northwest of Verdun, indicates the failure of the fierce assaults made by this army on the west front of Verdun. This move would hardly be made except as a preliminary to a retreat from their advanced position.

The energy with which the French are pushing the advance against Rheims shows that they are making an effort to press back Gen. von Buelow's army and to crowd over the third German Army to the east, so that this Saxon army of Gen. von Hausen and the fourth army under Grand Duke Albrecht of Württemberg will have to depend upon the roads through the Ardennes Mountains for their supply and their retreat. While these roads are excellent in character, they are few in number as compared with the open rolling country to the west. Every army corps requires at least one road for its orderly retreat, and should, if possible, have four, in order to allow the 40,000 men of the corps to move in four parallel columns.

As each of these armies consists of five or six corps, it will be readily understood that it will be impossible for them to find ten parallel roads through these mountains. In the effort to double up on common roads the corps will be somewhat broken up and the supply service disorganized. The resulting confusion would give the French an opportunity to cut off detachments at the rear. Still more, it would expose the first and second armies on the right flank to being attacked from three sides.

Offers of military and financial support have been made and are being gratefully accepted by his Majesty's Government. Additional evidence is received daily of the loyalty of the Princes, public bodies, and peoples of India.

DOESN'T FEAR EFFECT ON US.

London Chronicle Discusses German Efforts to Sway Opinion.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 15.—The Daily Chronicle, in an enitorial article referring to a German pamphlet called "The Truth About Germany," prepared for distribution in America, says:

"The United States will not be diverted by a campaign on bases like these from the firm neutrality which is its obvious interest. We do not shut our eyes to the effect which in America or any other country must be produced in some quarters by the lavish personal distribution of promises and doles, such as is going on at present under the auspices of the German Embassy at Washington, but the United States is much too big a country for its national honor and interest to be successfully trafficked with in this way.

"The wholesale evidence which reaches us, whether from the columns of great American newspapers or from private advices, shows that the American Nation, knowing itself in the presence of great events, will not permit itself to be swayed or hoodwinked by petty intrigues. The sympathy expressed for ourselves and our allies is well-night universal, and we value it unspeakably, but we are not out to cadge it by methods which self-respect and respect for the United States alike forbid. Nor are we out to inveigle the Republic into sharing in a conflict from which it is fortunately able, without loss of honor or interest, to abstain.

"Dr. Wilson's Administration can look after its great responsibilities without advice from us. Nevertheless it is impossible in these days of world intercommunication for a man or a people to stand unaffected by the strife. Neutrals as well as belligerents suffer inevitably in some degree, and neutrals as well as belligerents are concerned in regard, for instance, to infractions of the laws of war.

"We hope and believe that interpositions of the United States in questions of international law raised during the conflict will not be vexatious or partisan, as the German booklet obviously wishes them to be, but far-seeing and humanitarian.

"An unsympathetic neutral has many ways of harassing a belligerent if it pleases, but we think Berlin is mistaken in fancying that the public opinion of America will desire statesmen to resort to them against Great Britain."

MAKING SIR JOHN YOUNGER.

British Story of Their Commander's Doings Amid War's Turmoil.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—"Sir John French is in great health and spirits, and looks twenty years younger than when he went off to war," says a letter from an officer of the British headquarters staff, which has reached here. "His army idolizes him, and the 'Tommies are crazy about him.'

After one day's work he insisted on visiting the trenches. This was during the British retreat, and his staff was "hard put to it to prevent the old boy running needless risks."

Whenever the word went through the ranks that Sir John was around the men cheered him to the echo. After the magnificent tribute which the Field Marshal paid to his men, this testimony on their side shows the inspiration of his personality.

This instance of Sir John's personal kindness is told. When the Field Marshal left London for Paris he undertook, with what those who know him well say is characteristic courtesy and simplicity, to convey some small parcels to her little children from a lady, who is a friend of Lady French. These children were stuck in Paris with their governess and were about to be taken to the south of France with two or three families, similarly situated.

Lady French lives near London and devotes her time to good works in the interests of the troops under her husband's command.

NO REVOLT IN INDIA.

British Embassy Denies Story Given Out by German Legations.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—The British Foreign Office today cabled to the British Embassy here an emphatic denial of the report of a revolution in India. The dispatch says:

The story of a revolution in India, which has been given out by German Legations in certain capitals, is a sheer invention.

The enthusiasm in India with regard to the war is most striking. All native Princes, political organizations of all parties, as well as the general population, are offering striking proofs of their loyalty to the British Empire.

THE OTHER SIDE OF VON BOEHN'S STORY

It Agrees with His That the Burgomaster's Son Did Shoot His Chief of Staff.

HIS SISTER'S ROOM INVADED

Though Entire Party Were Burgomaster's Guests—Burgomaster Slain, Aerschot Burned.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 15.—Under date of Antwerp, Sunday, The Standard publishes this morning the following story from a correspondent, whose good faith the editor of The Standard guarantees, but whose name he refuses to give:

"One of the blackest pages in the invasion of Belgium is the sacking of Aerschot and the murder of the Burgomaster and his son.

"I had the story from a resident of Aerschot, who is now a refugee in Antwerp. He said that every word was true.

"When the German troops under Gen. von Boehn entered Aerschot the one desire of the Burgomaster was to save his town and people from the dreadful fate of Louvain. He awaited the Germans at the entrance to the town and to Gen. von Boehn made offers of hospitality.

"The General was gracious enough, and said that so long as everybody in the place showed the quietest demeanor the town and the lives of those in it were safe. If not, the reprisals would be pitiless.

"The Burgomaster offered the hospitality of his own house to the General and his officers, and this was also accepted.

"Gen. von Boehn with his Chief of Staff and another officer took up their quarters under the roof of the Mayor, where everything possible was done for their comfort. At night the General and his officers dined with the family, consisting of the Burgomaster and his wife and their son and daughter.

"The meal progressed with every sign of geniality, and the conduct of the officers was prefectly respectful and normal, but toward the end of the dinner they drank very freely and kept on drinking afterward. By the time everybody had retired to bed the three Germans were all very much the worse for drink.

"In the early hours of the morning the members of the household were roused by a shriek from the room occupied by the daughter. The son rushed in and found his sister struggling in the arms of the Chief of Staff, who was still tipsy.

"The young man, aroused to a frenzy, attacked the scoundrel. There was a fierce struggle, which ended in the son shooting the Chief of Staff.

"The tragedy was witnessed by most of the household, including the maid and female servants, but the shot did not arouse the General and the other officer, drunkenly asleep in their beds. The terrified household had to wait until morning for the denouement of the tragedy.

"The next morning the body of the Chief of Staff was discovered by the officer. The General was terribly cold in his wrath.

"'The price must be paid,' he said.

"The Burgomaster, his wife, son and daughter, and even the servants, pleaded pitifully, but Gen. von Boehn knew his duty.

"The Burgomaster, his son and two men-servants were put against the wall and shot.

"The carnage in the streets, with burning, hacking and stabbing, followed."

THE TIMES yesterday reprinted from The World of Sunday last an interview with Gen. von Boehm, Commander of the Ninth Imperial Field Army, sent from Renaix, Belgium, on Sept. 9, by E. Alexander Powell, The World's correspondent at Antwerp. The interview, Mr. Powell wrote, took place at the General's request, after he had heard that Powell was collecting a list of specific, authenticated outrages by German soldiers in Belgian territory. The General began by asserting that the charges against the German troops were "lies." Mr. Powell's story continued:

"'Three days ago, General,' I said, 'I was at Aerschot. The whole town now is but a ghastly, blackened ruin.'

"'When we entered Aerschot,' was the reply, 'the son of the Burgomaster came into a room, drew a revolver and assassinated my Chief of Staff. What followed was only retribution. The townspeople got only what they deserved.'

"'But why wreak your vengeance on women and children?' I asked.

"'None has been killed,' the General asserted positively.

The interview went on to quote Gen. von Boehn as saying when told that Powell had seen their mutilated bodies that they must have gone into the street when firing was going on. "It is unfortunate, but it is war."

TELLS OF GERMAN CRUELTY.

Senlis Charges Killing of Citizens and Laying Waste with Fire.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SENLIS, France, Sept. 14.—(Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—This town is a wasted ruin. Every house as I looked into it was half burned out and skeletonlike, staring at the sky.

Fire and pillage and ruin have taken place here. The Germans destroyed the town for amusement.

The Mayor and two other elderly burgesses, David Simond and Barberre, were set in front of the hotel in single file and shot with a single discharge as practice. They were not allowed to speak to their wives and children, who stood by.

Proud of the fact, the General and his aide-de-camp have signed their names large in the hotel book.

The hostess of the hotel was forced, with an automatic pistol at her throat, to open every room. Two old male servants were injured. One wanders, half an idiot, in the village, still weeping.

Eight hundred bottles of champagne were taken from the cellars. Double them, and you will not be able to account for the ankle-deep litter of glass in the streets.

Hardly a house of importance is left with roof or floor. And how do you think it was done? Straw was piled up, and fires were taken from shrines and the cathedral, and the soldiers amused themselves by throwing lighted candles in at the windows of the houses.

But they were finally caught. The Zouaves and Chasseurs d'Afrique, who are pouring up through this country, arrived in hundreds of taxicabs between 4 and 5 o'clock in the morning. The officer flew out in his shirt. He could not find his regiment and was shot. The rest decamped. Those who escaped are prisoners.

You will hear with less revolt of the horror I passed earlier in the day—some 240 Prussians dead on one farm together, black and unburied for want of peasants to bury them. Most of them were killed by shell fumes, but some had been bayonetted.

WOMAN ACCUSES GERMANS

Says Louvain Professor Was Slain Before Wife's Eyes.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 15.—The Standard says that the following statement regarding alleged German brutalities, compiled up to Sept. 11, has been received in London from a Belgian woman who is the wife of a British Colonel. She is well known socially in England, and is a descendant of one of the leading families of Belgium. She has one son, aged nineteen, who is a Sergeant of Belgian cavalry and has fought in all the principal engagements. In her account she says:

"A doctor from Malines tells the following story: A whole family had hidden in a cistern, thinking to be safe, but a German officer opened the trap door and, seeing them there, shot them all one after another. One was wounded merely and eventually got out. He was treated by this doctor and told him this story of the way the family perished.

"The burgomaster of a small village in the province of Liège, Count Polo de Borchgrave, was tied by ropes to a board, flogged, and thrown on a refuse heap, where they were going to finish him when his wife, recognising Prince Charles of Hohenzollern, who married a sister of the King of the Belgians, as he was giving the orders for this abominable outrage, threw herself on her knees and eventually got him to spare her husband's life.

"I have been working here among Belgian refugees and trying to help them. It is no use for the Germans to deny their atrocious cruelty. From the victims' own lips I have heard these things and many others. A woman who is here and has been seen by Mme. Hendrickx-reynten has had her two ears cut off. The baby she was carrying had been struck by a German bayonet. Others from the same village were burned to death after excesses of every kind.

"Prof. Torreau of Louvain University and his wife were treated terribly. Mme. Torreau had given birth to a child the day before, and with her husband and baby was hiding in the cellar of their house, but the Germans dragged them out, and placing Torreau with his back to the stables shot him in front of his wife. She since has died.

"Mr. Bosmans, a solicitor, who had German officers staying with him, was thrown out of his house with his mother, aged 80, and small children, in the middle of the night. They stripped the children naked. The family was found in a state of prostration in a poor cottage several days later."

ESSEN TO EXPIATE LOUVAIN?

The London Times Would Obliterate Krupp Works as Atonement.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 15.—The Times in an editorial this morning says:

"Not until the horsemen of the gathering nations ride down Unter den Linden will the German people realize fully that their mad dreams of world domination are shattered forever.

"Many tell us that we are not at war with the German people, but with the Kaiser and the Prussian corps of officers. It was natural enough to draw the distinction before the conflict. Today in the light of fuller knowledge we know that we are at war with every German with a rifle in his hand, and that means millions, and will soon mean all Germans capable of bearing arms.

"We will talk again of 'the kindly German nation' when they lay down their rifles and abandon their dreams, but not till then.

"The defenders of civilisation will destroy, but they will not destroy women's virtue nor ancient sanctuaries nor peaceful homes. They will destroy the warships and arsenals and shipbuilding yards and fortresses—all the paraphernalia of Teutonic warfare by which terror has been spread.

"The expiation of Louvain should be the absolute obliteration, not of Bonn nor Heidelberg, but of Krupp at Essen."

MALINES-LOUVAIN BATTLE.

Germans in Great Strength Opposed the Sortie from Antwerp.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—A Ghent dispatch to The Daily News, dated Sunday, says:

"From Malines to Louvain a battle is raging which must decide in large measure the duration of the war. It is the precipitated action of the Belgian advance from Atnwerp. The whole of the German strength here in the north—the army which was to invest Antwerp, the western advance parties and every available man of the Landsturm and the boy army which has held Belgium for three weeks—is massed along the line. The places held by the enemy are Sampet Weerde, Elewyt, Campenhout, Werpelaer, Rotselaer, and Hollebeek, the first of which lie a little to the south of Malines, and the last to the north of Louvain. The Belgian forces lie at present to the northeast of that line, with their furthest flank to the south of Aerschot and their centre about Keerbergen.

"The centre of the battle storm is a cross-roads about at the middle distance between Malines and Louvain and between Aerschot and Brussels—a place called Langestraet, where the Malines-Louvain Canal is also crossed.

"Only one thing about the battle is yet known; the Belgian left was forced back yesterday, but fresh troops were hurried forward to its support, and the whole line of battle is closer now to Brussels by more than ten kilometres (about six miles) than four days ago, when the first operations commenced. The Germans are said to be short of artillery and to have lost heavily already. Tonight the affair will probably be decided, but its magnitude has been carefully masked in an official communiqué from Antwerp, and the few scraps of information which have trickled through give little hint of its importance.

FEARED BURNING OF BRUSSELS

Belgians Thus Explain the Retirement of Their Army to Antwerp.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—An Antwerp dispatch to the Central News, dated Sunday, says that the German force against which the Belgians have been operating has been heavily reinforced, particularly with guns. It is believed the reinforcements came from Liège, where a thousand German marines are reported to have arrived.

The Belgian retirement is said to have been due to the fear that the Germans would burn Brussels.

Other dispatches received here from Antwerp relate that the fighting by the Belgian forces which went out from Antwerp last Friday lasted for three days, day and night. There was a heavy engagement among the ruins of Louvain, the Belgians penetrating twice to the centre of the city. Yesterday the Belgians delivered a fierce cavalry attack on the Germans at Louvain.

$55,000,000 IN BONDS

The European War does not seem to have adversely affected the business of "America's Leading Surety Company." The above represents the amount of risks assumed by the National Surety Company, during the month of August, 1914, compared with $48,000,000 in 1913. The net premium writings for the month of August, 1914, show an increase of more than $45,000 in excess of August, 1913. This indicates that prudent business men are bonding their employes more than heretofore, probably due to the European War.

The United States Government on August 15th issued a "Rating Sheet" giving the National Surety Company a surplus on June 30 last, more than twice as great as that of any other surety company transacting no casualty insurance. The real financial strength of a surety company is its free loss paying power: the free loss paying power of a company is its surplus. This surplus is cheerfully employed in the prompt payment of surety bond and burglary losses. We do not transact any other business.

ENGLAND REJOICES IN GOOD NEWS—PASSPORTS REQUIRED IN ENGLAND

WOMAN REFUGEE ON HUNGER STRIKE

Demanded First-Class Passage to America from London Relief Committee.

BUT DINNER WINS HER OVER

When She Sees Officials Munching Sandwiches—Committeemen Complain of Official Favoritism.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Because she thought that, as an American citizen, she was entitled to first-class accommodation on a steamer bound for America, instead of the third-class that was offered to her, a woman war refugee declared a hunger strike in the rooms of the American Relief Committee at the Savoy Hotel today, and said she would not budge until she got what she wanted.

Some members of the committee began to fear they had a second Pankhurst on their hands, but H. C. Hoover, the Chairman, thought otherwise, and let the woman alone. She sat in the hotel all day, and even saw some of the committeemen eating sandwiches at noon. About 5 o'clock this afternoon Mr. Hoover offered her 4 shillings, so she could buy a good dinner. The woman accepted the money, bringing the strike to an end. She was told she could have her steerage ticket when she came back tomorrow.

Mr. Hoover later gave out the following statement:

"The committee had made it an inflexible principle that where persons have claimed to have no resources they shall go third class unless age, young children, or illness justifies extra expenditure for accommodations. Any American who wishes to travel better than this may cable through the committee to American friends or relatives and receive money to travel on any scale that he wishes, but when they refuse to cable or claim that they have no resources the committee's inflexible rule applies."

Mr. Hoover declared that some American officers who came over in the Tennessee and were now on the Continent looking after Americans, have sent letters with certain refugees asking that special courtesy be shown to them. "Two women who came here from Berlin brought such a letter today," said the Chairman. "They were incensey when told that they must go steerage unless they could produce securities or get money by cable. We offered out of our own fund, which is apart from the Government money, to advance the necessary amount for better accommodations, but they refused to produce any guarantee. They were willing finally to take second-class. They made the plea that they were decrepit, but both seemingly in good health. Besides that, they are stopping at the Savoy, and they want the United States to pay their bill there. That is up to the Government's agents here, who must decide what to do.

"It is not right for officers to let these people have such letters, for we are trying to be absolutely impartial, and will maintain that attitude, consequently we are being denounced daily by these seekers of favoritism."

The two women Mr. Hoover spoke about refused to go to a small hotel, saying they were not instrumental in bringing on the war, which deprived them of their funds, and, therefore, the United States should pay the bill.

BRITAIN EXACTS PASSPORTS.

American Requirements Stricter—London Relief Committee's Troubles

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Great Britain today put into force the regulation that no foreigner is to be permitted to land in England without a passport. At the same time the American Embassies and Legations all over the Continent began enforcing more rigid regulations as to the issue of passports. No American passport issued to a naturalized American born in Germany will be good after this date in Great Britain, France, Russia, Servia, or Belgium. No American passport issued to a naturalized American will be good in the land of that citizen's birth. The strict enforcement of these provisions is necessary because of imposters who obtained passports fraudulently.

The American Relief Committee in London cared today for about 300 refugees. Many American women without funds object to taking second-class accommodations for America, but the Relief Committee is obdurate. One woman declined to leave Liverpool last Saturday with anything other than a first-class cabin, and returned to London. She is without funds, and there is nobody to send her money from America. She explained that she could not endure the smells in the second cabin.

Two young American women who arrived penniless from Berlin Saturday night put up at a luxurious hotel, and today at relief headquarters presented a hotel bill for $50. They also asked to be provided with first-class passage to New York. The committee paid the hotel bill, but allowed them only $1.75 each daily for living expenses until Saturday, when they will proceed to New York second class.

Herbert C. Hoover, Chairman of the American Committee, said: "No less than thirteen different persons today threatened us with denunciation and exposure immediately upon their arrival in New York. One of them, a woman, was especially violent because we refused to stand for her bills at the Savoy Hotel, a member of the committee having asked her to move to a moderate-priced pension."

John Pitcairn of Pittsburgh, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company, which has a plant near Charleroi, Belgium, valued at $1,000,000, was advised today that this factory had not been injured by the Germans.

BRYAN DENIES "INTERVIEW."

Buenos Aires Gets a Pro-German View of Secretary's Neutrality.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 14.—A Buenos Aires newspaper publishes an alleged interview with the American Secretary of State, William J. Bryan, which it asserts was cabled here in code from Washington. In this interview, which was sent by a Buenos Aires journalist now in America, Secretary Bryan is represented as expressing sincere regret over the apparent sympathy of the American press with the Allies in the war in Europe, adding that President Wilson would not countenance any attempt to influence public opinion either way.

The correspondent goes on to quote Mr. Bryan as saying that the White House has been in daily receipt of minute reports of the war as covered by the American press and that the only authentic information of the events in the European theatre of war come by way of Nauen, Germany, to the Tuckerton wireless station, recently taken over by the United States Government, while such sources of news as Petrograd and London have proved to be arbitrary or false.

The newspaper says its cable advices show that a great number of news cablegrams received from France, England, and Russia are "contradictory, inexact, and false."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Secretary Bryan today repudiated the alleged interview with him published in Buenos Aires.

"I have given no interview on the subject of war news," he said.

ITALIAN RADICALS FOR WAR.

They Pass a Significant Resolution Addressed to the Government.

PARIS, Tuesday, Sept. 15.—A dispatch to the Havas Agency from Rome says that the committee of direction of the Radical Party at a meeting yesterday, participated in by members of Parliament, passed a resolution which declared that Italy's interests in the Adriatic must be safeguarded, and called upon the Government "to consider whether the grave but inevitable task is not imposed to change from neutrality to active participation in the conflict."

The Giornale d'Italia says three groups are taking a hand in the situation. The first, represented by the Government and supported by a majority of the Constitutional Party, favors neutrality until the country's interests are meanced, but in the meanwhile would strengthen the army.

The second, represented by some Constitutionalists, is favorable to neutrality to the end of the war.

The third group, said to consist of Reformists, Socialists, Radicals, Republicans, and Nationalists, would abandon neutrality to realise the old aspirations to redeem former Italian provinces in the Adriatic.

PEOPLE OF ITALY RESTLESS.

Anti-Austrian Demonstration in Rome—War Fever Increases.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ITALY, Sept. 13, (Dispatch to The London Daily Mail.)—A very serious demonstration took place this morning in Rome. About a fortnight ago the authorities altered the hour of changing the guard at the royal palace, which was 5 o'clock in the afternoon, because of patriotic and bellicose demonstrations. The ceremony was ordered to take place at 11 o'clock in the morning, as fewer people are about at that hour.

However, several thousands, mostly students and workmen, assembled near the royal palace and made a demonstration, shouting "Down with Austria!" The police in great force protected the Austrian Embassy staff residing in the Chigi Palace, while many streets were guarded by the police and efforts were made to disperse the demonstration, the police in many cases acting ruthlessly. Many arrests were made, including an artillery officer and the Rome correspondent of The Corriere della Sera.

Today's demonstration indicates the real feelings of the country. Public opinion has kept quiet all this time only because the people hoped that the Government was preparing for war and awaiting an opportune moment to declare it. Now public opinion is indignant at the various insidious attempts by German agents to influence the Government and at the apparent determination of the Government to preserve the neutrality of Italy, which is judged advantageous to Germany and Austria.

Hatred of Germany, which is even more intense than hatred of Austria, grows daily in Italy, and the German impression is that public opinion will in the end force the hand of the Government.

A BURNT-CORK CHARGE.

French Soldiers, Disguised as Senegalese, Frighten German Foes.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—Some of the French soldiers have discovered that the Germans are very unwilling to face the black troops from Senegal. Taking advantage of this fact, they have carefully blackened their faces with burnt cork before charging the enemy.

This, added to the horrible yells to which they give vent, seems to have had considerable effect on one occasion, when a body of Germans simply turned tail and fled like rabbits when they saw these Christy Minstrel Senegalese charging them.

BELGIAN SHIP STRANDED.

The Luxembourg on Sandbanks Off Zealand—Crew Saved.

LONDON, Sept. 15, 2:30 A. M.—The Belgian steamer Luxembourg, according to a Reuter dispatch from Amsterdam, struck the sandbanks of Rassen, off Westkapelle, Zealand, on Monday. The crew were saved by a flushing lifeboat, but the steamer will probably be a loss.

The steamer Luxembourg sailed from Buenos Aires on July 16 and touched at various ports.

BLESSES GOD FOR WOUND.

Prince Joachim, Kaiser's Son, Proud of the Day He Fell.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 15.—According to the Exchange Telegraph Hague correspondent, Prince Joachim, youngest son of Emperor William, recently sent to the Dowager Grand Duchess of Baden this telegram:

"God has allowed me to be wounded. Bless Him! I am proud of the day I fell. It was the finest day I have lived."

Bernstorff in Seclusion.

Count Johann Heinrich von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, returned from his week-end visit to Newport, yesterday morning, and immediately secluded himself in his suite at the Ritz-Carlton. All inquirers were met with the statement that the Ambassador could not be disturbed. Reporters were told that he had left instructions that they were not to be admitted under any circumstances.

AUSTRIAN RALLY FOR BIG BATTLE

Memel (the northernmost town of the German Empire on the Baltic, seventy-two miles northeast of Konigsberg,) which threatens Tilsit.

An energetic attack has begun in the district of Tchestokhove (?) where the Russians took a strong German position by storm on Saturday.

The Russian Imperial Council is examining the laws for the administration of conquered Prussian and Austrian territory.

The correspondent quotes the following official communication issued today:

Not Ready to Act in Prussia.

"It is necessary to turn attention to the theatre of war in Galicia, where the development of our success continues. Up to the present time we have been prevented from placing a sufficient force in Eastern Prussia to continue the invasion so happily begun there. It was for this reason that the army under Gen. Rennenkampf halted along the line from Gerdauen (in East Prussia, forty miles southeast of Königsberg) to Labiau.

"German troops on Sept. 9 took up a general offensive movement against this army, executing advance movements toward our southern frontier. It is difficult, on account of the geographical obstruction in this terrain, to know exactly how many of the enemy were engaged. It was not until Sept. 10, when the great attack on the left wing of Gen. Rennenkampff's army was made, that the numerical strength of the enemy was revealed. They were found to be much superior to our forces. It is along this line that the battle now rages."

The correspondent adds that the invasion of Bukowina, the Austro-Hungarian crownland in Western Hungary, is proceeding unopposed. Placards have been found everywhere in the country announcing Austrian victory.

The Germans are strongly fortifying Kalisz, Russian Poland, and the city has been surrounded by barbed wire entanglements and mines. Kalisz has been renamed Grossgarten.

A semi-official communication says the slowness of the Russian operations in Eastern Prussia are not disquieting. The affairs have only been minor ones, which were alternately successful and unsuccessful. They have no importance in such a gigantic struggle.

ROME, Sept. 14.—Reports from Petrograd received in official quarters here say that the few German contingents which assisted the Austrians in their last encounters with the Russians were so exhausted that they could scarcely fight.

Admiration is expressed by the Russians for the intrepidity of the Hungarian cavalry. They say their magnificent charges facilitated the crossing of the San, Vistula, and Dniester Rivers of those of the Austrians who survived defeat at the hands of the Russians.

Praise is given also to the Russian aviation corps, which, it is declared, flew out over the battle lines and located important Austrian contingents in time to prevent their escape.

News received here from Austria says the Austrian Army is everywhere rallying and will make a strong stand against a further Russian advance.

The Giornale d'Italia says:

"Austria has removed her first line of troops from the Italian frontier, especially the frontier riflemen. The Alpine sharpshooters are needed against the Russians, but the Austrians have prepared a defense of the border with gendarmes, reservists, and members of the Landsturm and Landwehr. Besides they have cut intrenchments eight feet wide and ten feet deep.

"A possible landing of Italians at Trieste, which is unfortified, has been provided against by intrenchments on the Campo Marzo hill, which overlooks the town, and by blockhouses around the Gulf of Trieste. The remainder of the coast of Istria and Dalmatia has been mined."

GERMANS IN RETREAT.

Army Corps with Austrians Retiring to Przemysl.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 14.—The Austrian Army which is retreating on Przemysl includes one German army corps and parts of another. Possibly there are even two corps. These forces therefore are lost to Germany for the duration of the war.

Przemysl will have to be taken, probably, by a prolonged siege. Its strength and position, in the present circumstances, are comparable to that at Metz, as the Austro-German Governments were perfectly prepared for the war. The fortress of Przemysl, like those of Lemberg, Nikolaieff, and others, is provisioned and equipped with one year's stores of every kind for the garrison, but it will have to shelter a very much larger force now than the Austrian General Staff calculated on, namely, the retreating Austrian forces, with something like a couple of German army corps in addition. In any case, Russia will go on with the execution of her main strategic scheme and content herself with investing and holding Przemysl.

Enormous numbers of Maxims were captured along the whole front in the recent battles and immediately turned by the Russians against their owners. The German divisions, particularly, lost their light guns, as they have a predilection for hoisting them up trees for use. When the retreat develops the few men in charge drop from their nests, leaving the gun in perfect order, with a stock of ammunition below. These Maxims proved exceedingly useful in assisting the retirement of the beaten armies.

The Galician railways have been placed under the administration of the Russian southern railways system. Two thousand cars are among the Russian booty in Galicia.

The Governor of Volinsk, Gen. Melnikoff, has been appointed Governor of Lvov (Lemberg.)

Galicia has been placed by the Holy Synod under the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of the Metropolitan of Kiev.

OPERATIONS IN EAST PRUSSIA.

Germans Seek to Flank Army of Gen. Rennenkampff.

Col. Nicolai Golejewski, Military Attaché of the Russian Embassy at Washington, who is now in this city, received yesterday the following advices from the Russian General Staff at Petrograd:

"The necessity to concentrate our attention and our forces to the Galician seat of war, where our signal successes are being followed up, has led to a temporary weakening of our armies in Eastern Prussia and delayed, in this direction, our advance, so successfully initiated at an earlier period of the war.

"Accordingly in the first days of September, the army of Gen. Rennenkampff halted on the line from Gerdauen to Labiau.

"On Sept. 7 began a general movement of German troops against Gen. Rennenkampff's army, as well as in a southerly direction toward the Russo-Prussian frontier. The broken and inclosed country in the Mauer Lakes region made the estimation of the forces which the enemy had concentrated in it very difficult.

"On Sept. 10 it became clear that a far-reaching turning movement of the Germans was in progress. This necessitated the falling back of our army.

"On Sept. 11, in order to check up the advance of the enemy, we undertook a partial offensive movement which revealed a considerable numerical superiority of the Germans.

"The fighting in this region continues."

AS THE WOUNDED TELL IT.

Petrograd Tales of Galician Battles —Ruzska, the Adored.

By PERCIVAL GIBBON,

New York Times-London Daily Chronicle War Service.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 14.—The tactical results of the great Russian victory in Lublin may be looked for immediately, I am told, on the East Prussian frontier.

For many days the wounded from the great battle have been pouring up the lines to their various destinations in hospitals and homes, being greeted on their arrival by enthusiastic crowds and often visited at the station by one of the Imperial family. It is they who, with their eye-witnesses' accounts of their small part in the fight, lend to the official facts their needed embellishment of color and humanity.

An officer wounded in both legs in the fighting south of Zamost related how he went with his regiment by train from the east of Lemberg to near Cheim, a journey which in its dreary, uneventful fatigue tried the men much more severely than the wonderful marches achieved by some of the other columns. They were detrained early one morning to the sound of distant gunfire and that same afternoon were in action against Austrian infantry intrenched on a long line which included the village of Michailowka. They entered the village the same night, the Austrians having fallen back to a half circle, of small, steep hills which overlook the village in the valley. Some houses had been set on fire, but the flames had been extinguished by the villagers themselves.

At 8 o'clock the following morning the attack on the hills commenced. The Austrians occupying them numbered 15,000, of which a large number were in a deeply wooded gorge. The Russian artillery swept the crest of the hill and shelled the gorge with shrapnel. The Austrians replied strongly, but once again showed that inferiority in speed and accuracy of fire which all observers have mentioned. My informant, describing the shell fire, states that at any moment he could see more Russian shrapnel bursting in the air above the gorge than he could count.

At noon the position was stormed, his own company being among the attackers. The Russian infantry, at the word of command, arose with cheers, repeated again and again, and rushed the hill. Austrian guns to their left cut them about badly. He tells of a company officer, badly wounded, who would not let two of his men stay behind to carry him off. With a pool of his own blood widening around him, he sat on the ground, cheering on his men from behind. My informant himself received a bayonet thrust in the left forearm as they took the first trench, and he killed his assailant with a revolver. At the same time the position was stormed from the east, and the Austrians surrendered almost immediately.

The gorge, he adds, was full of dead men, lying in heaps. On the slopes, even at Galitch, where he was present, he had never seen so many dead in an equal space. Artillery officers visited the spot later in the day, to see for themselves the effect of their fire, and were astonished that their shrapnel had proved so deadly. The troops gave the place the name of "the Valley of Death." The Austrian General commanding the division watched his men being disarmed. Presently the Austrian standards were brought up from the gorge, and at the sight he drew a revolver and shot himself.

In the big fighting between Zamost and Tomassow all the men were excited by a rumor that at last they were to meet German troops. On the morning of the day when he himself was wounded and placed hors de combat, he says, he was lying with his men in a wood, and suddenly heard a cheering noise, swelling as corps after corps took it up. He did not guess what it meant until three motor cars came slowly along the road behind him, and in the foremost of them he saw Gen. Ruzska. His iron men, who had marched all night, leaped up in their places and cheered likewise, and then the cheering passed along, trickling across country as the car moved between the lines and being still faintly audible for another half hour.

Like all line officers, my informant sees in Ruzska the achievement of the triumph of his own order. Adored by the army, praised for his personal courage as much as for his genius as a leader, the General is a product of that Russian middle class which makes no social advancement by army rank. He is a typical Russian officer, dark bearded, a little above the middle height, and wearing a new uniform of khaki, with shoulder straps, in its simplest form. His capacity for work is superhuman. Recently he worked for two nights and days without sleep.

The men in general, though worked and marched to the utter limit of their capacity, did not suffer from lack of food, the work of the new field kitchens being admirable. The Cossacks carry little bags of apples on their saddles, which they consider good as a preventive both of hunger and thirst. The continual capture of Austrian transports has helped out the rations.

The transportation of prisoners to the interior of Russia is now proceeding. Many of them have suffered severely from cold and hunger, and there are numerous cases of dysentery. It is said the men will be employed on various public works, including roadmaking in the Urals.

RUSSIANS AGAINST PEACE.

Will End War Only When Its Objects Have Been Fully Attained.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 14 (Dispatch to The London Morning Post).—The German Emperor's message to the President of the United States, which it was at first assumed was an appeal that the President should act as intermediary toward peace, has prompted comment in the press, which agrees that Russia will decline to consider anything tending toward peace until the objects of this war have been fully obtained.

The Bourse Gazette says:

"In this conflict of the nations is plainly seen the hand of an historical Nemesis. That awful hand has not yet accomplished the work begun by us, but by the blinded ambitions of the Hohenzollerns. Until this work has been done the restoration of peace is impossible."

A Moscow newspaper, the organ of the Moderate Octobrist Party, says:

"To speak of peace is very premature. The present Government of Germany, with William II. at its head, captivated by the idea of military Pan-Germanism, offers little assurance for a lasting peace on any terms. We do not expect to find any guarantees for an enduring peace in Germany until the nation has marked out a line of severance between itself and those who violated the tranquillity of the world."

These press utterances are mild reproductions of views the public express. Russia at least has entered on this war as the ancient Romans entered upon their long strife with Carthage—Delenda est.

BOLD DEED BY 40 RUSSIANS.

Swim River at Night and Destroy Retreating Army's Stores

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 15.—"We have heard so little of the methods of the Russian soldiery on the actual field," says the Petrograd correspondent of The Morning Post, "that it is a delightful task to record a gallant little feat on the Russian extreme right when it had the Austro-German forces on the move backward. Forty men of the so-called regiment of scouts swam the Vistula and succeeded in blowing up and setting fire to an enormous quantity of stores, especially commissariat, of the retreating armies.

"The Austrian river steamboats, seventeen pontoons, eighteen barges laden with stores, to say nothing of timber for bridges, a number of boats and all kinds of military material were destroyed by this smart piece of scouting work done in a few hours.

"This gallant act, evidently done under cover of darkness, was one of the main causes of distress felt by the retreating Austro-Germans. The artillery shelled and destroyed the rest of their stores from the other bank of the Vistula on the following day. The result is starvation of the whole army, who have devoured the emergency three days' rations each man carries."

RUSSIAN FIGHTING FAIR.

No Dum-Dum Bullets and No Brutality, Austrians Admit.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—In a dispatch from Copenhagen the correspondent of The Evening News quotes the correspondent of the Berlingske Ufends, who telegraphs from Austrian headquarters, as follows:

"The Russians have done great execution with machine guns mounted in trees. Austrian doctors declare that they are unable to discover any evidence that the Russians are using expanding bullets. The Russian infantrymen are said to fire high owing to the excessive depth of their trenches. Russian scouts are burning houses as a means of signaling their artillery, but no charges of brutality have been made against them.

"Vienna is reported as much perturbed by the alarming news brought by refugees from Lemberg, and preparations are being made for the defense of the capital."

LONDON, Sept. 14.—A dispatch to the Central News from Petrograd, dated Sunday, says it is reported from Bucharest that a panic occurred in Vienna on receipt of the news of the capture of Semlin by the Servians, and that thousands of unemployed are parading the streets of the capital.

The military stores and even the stock of uniforms proved to be insufficient, and as a result the third levy of reservists are going to the frontier in civilian attire.

Russians to the number of 2,500, liberated from captivity in Germany, have arrived in Petrograd via Finland. It is stated that the reason for this liberation is that the German exchequer is too depleted to admit of their being kept.

VICTORY NEWS AT OPERA.

Scene of Tremendous Enthusiasm at a Petrograd Performance.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—A Petrograd dispatch to the Central News describes the scene of tremendous enthusiasm on the first night of the Imperial grand opera season when a bulletin describing the destruction of the Austrian Army between the Rivers Bug and Dniester was read in the middle of the performance.

The Russian hymn was sung over and over again, and the national anthems of the Allies were also sung, while the Ambassadors and Ministers of those countries bowed from their boxes.

Tumultuous demonstrations took place in the streets, the crowds almost fighting to get the newspapers.

The Russian Minister of Commerce and Industry has dispatched a commission of engineers to the town of Stryj, Galicia, which has been recently occupied by the Russians, with a view of studying the resources of petroleum in Austria, to meet the shortage of naphtha in Russia.

SAYS AUSTRIA STILL WINS.

Vienna Official Report Speaks of Success Against Russians.

MANCHESTER, Mass., Sept. 14.—Wireless advices received today by Dr. Konstantin Theodor Dumba, Austro-Hungarian Ambassador to the United States, from Count von Berchtold, Minister of Foreign Affairs at Vienna, read as follows:

"The battle of Lemberg has been successful. Our forces, which were placed along and south of the Grodek road, pushed back the enemy after five days fighting.

"Ten thousand Russians and numerous guns were captured, but it was impossible to make full use of the success because our northern wing near Rava-Ruska was endangered by overwhelming Russian forces, not to speak of new Russian forces marching against Gen. Danki's army and into the interval between this army and the Lemberg war theatre.

"On account of the superior strength of the enemy, it was found necessary to collect our armies, now fighting with little rest heroically for three days, into favorable positions, preparing them for new actions."

Dr. Alexander von Nuber de Pereked, the Austro-Hungarian Consul General, made public last night the following message from Count Berchtold, the Austro-Hungarian Minister for Foreign Affairs in Vienna. The message was addressed to Dr. Dumba the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador. It read:

"The counter attack initiated by our army on the ninth instant near Lemberg and now in full progress led to a battle which consists of a number of big engagements. Fighting goes on day and night with undiminished fierceness and great ardor, although Russians are everywhere and very numerous. The fight is thoroughly offensive. Austrians gain steadily.

"News from southeastern war theatre shows that we crossed the Drina River while the Servians used that occasion to break into Syrmia. Defensive measures have been organized on our side."

CUTS OFF HUNGARY.

Servians Bombard and Take Orsova on the Danube—'Te Deum' in Semlin.

PARIS, Tuesday, Sept. 15, 3:42 A. M.—A Petrograd dispatch to the Havas Agency reports that the Servians have bombarded and destroyed the Hungarian station of Orsova, on the Danube, a short distance above where the river quits Hungarian territory, thus cutting communication between Hungary and Rumania.

Orsova was on the route by which the German sailors reached Turkey.

The Japanese Red Cross, the dispatch also says, has sent to the scene of war in Russia a field hospital of 200 beds.

NISH, Servia, Sept. 14.—The following official statement was issued here today:

"On our northern front, after taking Semlin, our troops still continue to pursue the offensive successfully.

"The hurried nature of the flight of the enemy at Semlin can be estimated by the quantity of provisions, equipment, arms and ammunition, and other war material found in the town. Our troops were received with indescribable enthusiasm in Semlin. A Te Deum was sung for the victory of the Servian Army. The railroad as far as the station in Belgrade has been repaired and is ready for use in the transportation of troops.

"A continuous artillery duel is taking place on the northern front."

Col. von Reuter of Zabern Killed.

ROTTERDAM, (via London,) Tuesday, Sept. 15, 8:02 A. M.—A special to The Rotterdamsche Courant announces that Col. von Reuter, widely known through the part he played in the Zabern affair, was recently killed in action.

ENGLAND JOYFUL OVER THE WAR NEWS

Big Audiences in Theatres—Expensive Dishes Again in Demand at Hotels.

GERMANS' FAMINE PERIL

Expert Believes Troops Are Demoralized, and May Have to Surrender Owing to Lack of Food.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 15.—With the tide of battle favoring the Allies, London is in a jubilant frame of mind. According to hotel men the demand for expensive food and drink is one result. When the war started some fashionable hotels began to serve plain, cheap food, and there was little protest, but with the higher spirits resulting from the defeat of the Germans has come a demand for more expensive dishes.

The theatres where successful productions are being staged are attracting big audiences, and the more sanguine managers predict a good season despite the war if the Allies' successes continue.

The Daily News military correspondent says the bulletin issued by the Press Bureau yesterday afternoon is satisfactory so far as it goes. He adds:

"Passing from the bulletin, which is retrospective and adds nothing to our stock of information, to the new situation created by the German retreat, what do we find? The first, second, third, and fourth German armies are in full retreat in a northeasterly direction. Where they are going, what they intend to do, is no longer for the German General Staff to say. The Allies have taken charge, and intend to dictate the future course of action to be followed by the enemy.

"Judging from the latest reports, there is very little fight left in the retreating armies. Their retreat is being so rapidly carried out as almost to amount to a rout.

"The line of communication for the first three German armies lies along the railways leading from Belgium east and west of Maubeuge. The Fourth Army, under the Duke of Württemberg, has been drawing its supplies by the Mézières, Givet, Namur, & Liège Railway, and if the communications of the First, Second, and Third armies are severed with Belgium they will have to fall back on the same route by which the Duke of Württemberg communicates with his Rhine base.

"It is needless to point out the impracticability of keeping four separate armies, composed perhaps of ten corps or more, supplied with food and ammunition along the line of communication if such a situation were to be forced on the German armies. There would be no alternative left except surrender on a large scale to save the troops from starvation.

"For this reason, the commander of the right wing of the German Army will cling to his communications with Belgium as long as he dares to do so, but if the news which came today (Monday) unofficially from Belgium is confirmed, it looks as though the German hold of that country is being threatened by the Belgian Army."

"Collapse of German Plans Complete."

The Daily Chronicle says:

"The collapse of the German plans is complete. The allied troops have forced the passage of the Aisne after a stubborn resistance. The Germans have had to abandon the line of defense they prepared between Compiègne and Soissons. Amiens has been evacuated, and, still more important the German centre was unable to hold its defensive position behind Rheims. The retirement of the troops on Perenne indicates that the Germans may not be able to hold the La Fère-Laon line.

"The armies of von Kluck von Bülow, von Hausen, and the Duke of Württemberg are involved in the retirement, along with the German centre and right. The Crown Prince's army is also beaten back, but not to any great distance. In Argonne his troops fell back to the north, and the Prince's headquarters have been retired in that direction from St. Menehould to Montfaucon, which is a place northwest of Verdun, between the Aisne and the Meuse.

"The Crown Prince has been attacking the forts of Verdun with heavy guns, but there is reason to believe that his troops and war material are now retiring in the direction of Metz. No definite statement, however, can be made concerning operations in this quarter.

"Further south, on the French right, the army of the Crown Prince of Bavaria has fallen back between Nancy and the Vosges, and Luneville and St. Die are now in the hands of the French. It is reported that in this region no German troops remain in French territory."

The Morning Post's military expert, discussing the press bureau's survey of the operations in France, says:

"The Germans appear to have ignored the existence of the British force, which is hard to account for, as the latter had made its presence felt with some effect on Sept. 3 at Compiègne. We may, perhaps, assume that it escaped observations through being at some distance from the scene of action.

"The French Sixth Army had apparently continued its movement toward the Seine below Paris, and may have taken some time to arrive on the scene.

"If these suppositions are correct, they may account for Gen. von Kluck mistaking the French left for the extreme flank of the army."

BERLIN'S MOOD SOBER.

Shouting, Singing Crowds Give Place to Serious Little Groups.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Stockholm in letters just received here says that Berlin has undergone a startling change in the last two weeks. The singing, shouting, enthusiastic mob that thronged the streets a fortnight ago has divided into hundreds of little groups that stand about discussing the war news of the day in low, concerned voices. The stream of humanity that nightly coursed up and down Unter den Linden has thinned and has completely lost its boisterousness.

The Landsturm call to the colors has drawn heavily on the male population remaining in Berlin. Women fill the beer gardens now, with a sprinkling of the older men, and here and there a soldier in gray carrying an arm in a sling. Confidence was the spirit of all two weeks ago; today it is doubt.

GERMAN RETREAT VIEWED FROM AIR

task and broke down; the vaunted German organization was not able to cope with this difficult situation.

Scores Dying from Exhaustion.

Many of the Germans captured said they had been without food for periods varying from twenty-four to forty-eight hours. Some were so weak they could hardly stand. Scores of German soldiers were found dying on the ground in a condition of complete exhaustion.

The utterly demoralised condition of hundreds of German prisoners testifies to the incredible privations which they had undergone. Most of their horses were mere skeletons. Fifty Uhlans under command of a non-commissioned officer gave themselves up to the French in Montereau, saying, "Do what you like with us." They were dying from hunger and fatigue and had to be sent to the rear in ambulances.

Apart from the heavy losses which the Germans sustained during the fighting they have been severely punished by their pursuers. During their hurried retreat British and French artillery decimated the columns of the retiring enemy, and they also have been pursued relentlessly by the cavalry of the allied armies.

Judging from the unofficial accounts of the great battle which are now beginning to come in, there is every reason to believe that the French official communications have understated the extent of the victory.

General Takes Son's Death Bravely.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—Gen. Bailloud, one of the leaders of the campaign for the pacification of Morocco, was visiting the wounded in a hospital when informed that his son had been killed in battle. The General paled and two tears rolled down his cheeks. He then became as impassive as ever and went on with his visit.

NOTED NEW YORKERS TO AID RED CROSS

Mayor Expected to Head a Committee to Collect Funds for the War Sufferers.

IMPOSTORS AT WORK HERE

Public Warned Against Persons Who Pretend to be Collectors for the Society.

Now that the steamship Red Cross is on her way to Europe, the officials of the Red Cross are turning their attention to ways of increasing more rapidly the fund that is needed to carry on the work of the organization in the war zone. Miss Mabel Boardman, Chairman of the National Committee of the Red Cross, will arrive from Boston this morning, and she will organize a committee of prominent New Yorkers to take charge of the fund in New York. Mayor Mitchel will head this committee, probably.

At the New York offices of the Red Cross, at 130 East Twenty-second Street, a warning was issued yesterday against impostors who are collecting funds in the name of the Red Cross. One of these impostors is a woman, and she went about the upper west side yesterday, asking for money so that the steamer Red Cross could sail for Europe. Police Commissioner Woods instructed the police to arrest any person caught soliciting in the name of the Red Cross. That organization never solicits money by agents, and all donations are taken or sent through the mail to its headquarters in Washington or to its branch offices.

The war fund of the society was increased by $2,781 yesterday. The total amount now in hand is $117,086. These subscriptions were acknowledged yesterday by Jacob H. Schiff, the Treasurer of the New York branch:

The Belgian Relief Fund amounts now to $77,409, and of this sum $8,256 was received yesterday by the committee which has an office in the Maritime Building at 8 to 10 Bridge Street. One of the subscriptions was for $3.51, and with the check for that amount came this note:

> The Rev. J. F. Stillemans, Belgian Bureau, 8-10 Bridge Street, City.
>
> Reverend and dear Sir: From a little is given this small sum, made up as follows:
>
> Wife's house account $2.00
> My tobacco account, since I find smoking disagree with me these days 1.00
> Our seven-year-old child's account, who, after listening seriously to our discussion of the Belgian orphans' condition, said: "I want to buy a bun for them" ..... .01

It was announced in Washington last night at the headquarters of the American Red Cross that an appeal would be sent out today asking all religious denominations throughout the United States to contribute to the European fund on Oct. 4, the day set apart by President Wilson for special prayers for the restoration of peace. It was announced also that the Red Cross was planning a Red Cross flag day, on which Red Cross flags would be sold in all parts of the country, and the proceeds applied to the hospital work of the society in Europe.

MASS MEETING OF NURSES.

More Helpers Are Wanted by the British Imperial Club.

A mass meeting of nurses is called for Saturday, at 2:30 P. M., at the British Imperial Club, 108 East Thirtieth Street, by Dr. Theodosia M. Spring-Rice, who is in charge of the work of recruiting nurses and doctors to be sent to Europe by the club. More helpers are needed at the club to assort and mend clothes to be sent to Queen Mary's Needlework Guild in London for war sufferers, and there will be work for them at 10 o'clock Friday morning at the club rooms.

There will be a meeting of the committee to consider plans for the big war benefit at the Lyceum Theatre on Friday afternoon at 3 P. M. The men will have a large meeting on Thursday evening at 8:30. The first check to be received by the men is for $100 from John Davidson.

MR. MUNSEY GIVES $25,000.

MISS MORGAN IN BIARRITZ.

Is Refugee There with Miss de Wolfe and Miss Marbury.

Miss Anne Morgan, with Miss Elsie de Wolfe and Miss Elisabeth Marbury, is staying at Biarritz, France. Writing on Sept. 1 to a friend in this city, Miss de Wolfe tells how they first heard that war was upon Europe.

"I was at Avignon en route for Spain," her letter says, "when at 7:30 A. M. on Aug. 1 my chauffeur came to say that if I intended going into Spain I had better make haste, as surely the order for the mobilization would be given and that my motor would be requisitioned. So we started at 8 o'clock and went on as rapidly as possible. At 9 at night, utterly worn out, we reached Perpignon. There we slept as best we could, with the crowds all night in the streets singing the 'Marseillaise' and shouting for France.

"We did not take our clothes off, and at 5 A. M. started for the last lap of our journey. I'll confess I had little hope of crossing the frontier with a French car and a French chauffeur. However, the pass was a little frequented one. We were waiting when the douane opened at 8 and went through without difficulty, reaching Barcelona at about 4. My chauffeur left me, at once returning to Paris to report.

"The friends who were to join me there could not get out of Paris; no wires or letter could get through and it was difficult to obtain money. I was twenty-one days without news of any kind, no trunks and hardly a change of linen. Finally I obtained a special letter from the French Consul and with this and an American passport I left on the first train through. I reached here two weeks ago, and yesterday Miss Marbury and Miss Morgan joined me here.

"We have started an ambulance in our house at Versailles for the convalescents and offered it to the Minister of War, and it has been accepted."

Dr. and Mrs. William Wallace Walker, for whose safety officers of the Lotos Club enlisted the efforts of the State Department and Ambassador Gerard, sailed on the Nieuw Amsterdam last Saturday. Dr. Walker speaks in high praise of Ambassador Gerard and the Minister to the Netherlands, Henry van Dyke, who aided him.

TO SIGN PEACE TREATIES.

Compacts with Britain, France, Spain, and China Completed.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Peace treaties between the United States and Great Britain, France, Spain, and China—four countries whose combined population is more than two-thirds of the total population of the earth—will be signed here at 1 P. M. tomorrow.

The French, British, and Spanish Ambassadors and the Chinese Minister arranged with Secretary Bryan today to attach their signatures to the four documents, which are similar in principle to the nineteen treaties already ratified by the Senate.

The Washington Government attaches the highest importance to the signing of the four new treaties, because it believes the peace of the United States will be made secure, with 948,000,000 people supporting it.

These compacts provide that all disputes shall be submitted to a permanent commission for investigation during a period of one year.

One of the effects of the signature of the treaties will be that the United States will be safeguarded against being suddenly drawn into war with any of these countries over any question arising out of the present European conflict.

SEEKS PRIVATE WAR LOAN?

Germany Said to be Trying for $25,000,000 Here.

Wall Street heard again yesterday that persistent efforts were being made on behalf of Germany to float a war loan in this country. As the rumor differed materially from the reports heard last week and appeared to come from responsible persons it received a wider hearing than the others. It was said that subscriptions would be confined to a group of wealthy German-Americans who would be willing to assist the Fatherland with an extension of credit amounting to something more than $25,000,000. The lenders, it was said, would receive in exchange for gold a part of the $250,000,000 5 per cent. Treasury bonds and notes to be issued shortly at Berlin at 97½.

Bankers whose names have been mentioned before as possible participants in a German loan reiterated yesterday their denials of any intention of aiding the German Government in this way. It was said that the attitude of the State Department toward the extension of monetary assistance to the warring nations would deter American bankers from lending credit to Germany. The bankers were inclined to doubt, also, that any substantial sum could be obtained at this time by private subscription.

TRADE CHANCES IN SPAIN.

Now Impossible to Get Supplies from Germany and France.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MADRID, Sept. 14.—(Dispatch to The London Standard.)—Anglo-Spanish trade is suffering severely by the great delay to which all postal correspondence is subjected owing to the war, and the British Chamber of Commerce here has addressed an urgent request to the Spanish and British Governments that they expedite the proposed establishment of a regular service of fast steamships between Bilbao and Southampton or any more convenient port.

The Chamber has also pointed out that, in view of the tremendous increase in the demand for English manufactures of many kinds, due to the impossibility of getting supplies from France or Germany, the English press and Chambers of Commerce should be asked to make it known that there are many openings for trade with Spain, and that manufacturers should lose no time in getting into touch with Spanish importing firms and with English merchants and exporters having trade relations with Spain.

WOMEN APPEAL TO WILSON.

Suffragettes of 12 Nations Ask Him to Work for Peace.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, President of the International Woman Suffrage Alliance, left for Washington at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon to present to President Wilson a letter signed by women of twelve European nations, urging him to work incessantly for mediation in the European war. In Mrs. Catt's party was Mme. Rosika Schwimmer, who came here from Belgium to start a propaganda in favor of mediation through the United States.

Among those who signed the letter urging the President to continue to make overtures for peace were representatives of women's organizations in Denmark, France, Holland, Australia, Canada, Hungary, Italy, Norway, Russia, Sweden, Great Britain, Germany, and the United States.

Before undertaking the journey to Washington Mrs. Catt said she had received assurances from Secretary Bryan that she would be received by him at 10 o'clock this morning, and that she would be escorted to the White House in order that she might present her letter to the President.

MANILA FEARS COAL EMBARGO

Because Germans Are Said to Have Been Coaling Vessels from There.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MANILA, Sept. 14.—A report is current here that Japan and Great Britain are considering the advisability of stopping all coal shipments to the Philippines, which would practically cut off the fuel supply of the islands, including coal for government use.

This situation is caused by German merchant vessels coaling here from local firms and leaving ostensibly for neutral ports, but actually, it is alleged, disposing of their coal to German war vessels on the high seas.

REPORT GEN. PERCIN SHOT AS A TRAITOR

Ralph Dewey Says Wounded Belgian Officers Told Him the Story in Havre.

BLAMED FOR FALL OF NAMUR

Held for Three Days Orders to Relieve Allies Who Were Sustaining German Attack.

Reports now going the rounds in Paris, which have already reached here by cable without details, to the effect that Gen. Percin of the French Army was shot as a traitor have been brought to New York by Ralph Dewey, an American merchant, who has lived in Paris for fifteen years. Mr. Dewey, who arrived on the France on Saturday, said he heard the story about Gen. Percin's fate from wounded Belgian officers who had been sent to Havre after the battle at Namur.

"While waiting in Havre for the France to sail," said Mr. Dewey yesterday at his office, 581 Fifth Avenue, "I made the acquaintance of several Belgian officers of infantry, who told me they were among twenty-one survivors of their regiment. They were then about recovered, and were waiting to go back to the front. They told me that they had not seen a French soldier in Belgium up to the time Namur fell.

"According to their story, there were 80,000 men, the best of what was left of the Belgian Army, and such of the British troops as had then been brought across the Channel at Namur. Their commander and the English General had appealed for reinforcements, and the Commander in Chief of the French Army had immediately sent orders to Gen. Percin, who commanded about 60,000 men, to go to their relief. The German attacking force at Namur was estimated at 300,000 men, but my informants said if they had had the support of French troops they could have held the invaders several days longer without being hard pressed.

"But Percin and his troops did not appear, though they were expected to reach the Allies' rear by the time the Germans came up. Then came the three days in the trenches, with the big shells bursting everywhere, and the abandonment of Namur. Then the remnant of the defending force withdrew, my acquaintances and their comrades in Havre had been gathered up hurriedly and put into carts just before the final German assault. They told me that of 80,000 men who went into battle only 15,000 were in the army that fell back.

"The order to relieve Namur had been received by Gen. Percin, but he had carried it in his pocket for three days, according to my friends. Immediately the Commander in Chief got the report of the British commander he ordered the arrest of Gen. Percin and a court martial followed.

"It was brought out that Gen. Percin was married to a German woman, that he was a member of a secret society which is strong in Germany, and that he had frequently visited that country. When questioned as to why he had not obeyed the order, he made an excuse that was considered trivial, and he was sentenced to death and shot within an hour."

BELGIANS TO SEE WILSON.

Commission Will Be Received at White House Tomorrow.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—The special Belgian Commission which has been sent to this country to present to President Wilson the Belgian Government's protest against the burning of Louvain, the dropping of bombs from airships upon Antwerp, and other alleged German Army atrocities, will be presented to President Wilson at the White House on Wednesday.

At the Belgian Legation it was said tonight that the members of the Belgian Commission would arrive in Washington tomorrow and stop at the legation. The Belgian Minister, E. Havenith, will accompany the commission to the State Department Wednesday afternoon, and from there the commission will be escorted to the White House by Secretary Bryan to the President Wilson will receive the delegation at 2:15 o'clock that afternoon.

MAY CLOSE CHURCHES.

German Methodists Crushed by Burdens Caused by War.

The Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, received a letter from Bishop L. Nielson, who is in charge of the European work of the American branch of the church, in which he states the German Methodist congregations are crushed under the heavy burdens imposed upon them by the war. Methodist congregations in Germany, the letter continues, are face to face with the necessity of closing their churches temporarily at least.

More cheerful news came from the Far East, however, where Bishop M. C. Harris is in charge in Japan and Korea.

"While the great war in Europe," wrote Bishop Harris, "has affected both the religious and the business world in general, there has been no interference with the work of foreign missions in the Far East. The churches in Japan and Korea are undisturbed and regular activities continue as though the Angel of Peace were hovering over the world."

CARONIA DOCKS FOR COAL.

Cunard Line Cruiser Reaches Halifax—Has Been Patrolling Atlantic.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 14.—The Cunard Line steamer Caronia, which has been converted into a British armed cruiser, arrived here today for coal.

The Caronia, which has been on patrol duty in the Atlantic, flies a Rear Admiral's flag and carries many guns on her decks.

After taking on coal she will resume her patrol duties.

HALTED OFF JERSEY COAST.

British Cruiser Stops the Ancona to Learn Her Name.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 14.—About five hundred passengers, most of them Americans, were landed here today by the American Liner Haverford from Liverpool and the Italian Line steamer Ancona from Naples by way of New York.

On her run from New York the Ancona was stopped by a British cruiser off the Jersey coast but was allowed to proceed after signaling her name.

HELD AS A JEWELRY FENCE.

Adelstein Charged with Receiving Goods Stolen from Salesmen.

Morris Adelstein of 169 Star Street, Brooklyn, was arrested at his home last night and locked up in Police Headquarters charged with receiving stolen goods. Supt. Graham of the Pinkerton Detective Agency, who brought about his arrest, alleged that in the last two or three years he had received and disposed of at least $100,000 worth of jewelry stolen from salesmen in Chicago. Bernard Lande, known also as B. G. Fuller, who was arrested in Chicago last Friday for robbing jewelry salesmen of their sample cases, confessed yesterday, according to Mr. Graham, and named Adelstein as the man to whom he had sent most of his loot.

Lande added, though, that Adelstein had thought he was in the jewelry business and had not suspected that the jewelry sent to him was stolen. Adelstein denied that he had ever knowingly received or disposed of stolen property.

The salesmen whom Lande is alleged to have robbed in Chicago were representatives of manufacturing jewelers in New York and Newark.

OPPOSE ZANGWILL'S APPEAL

It Lacks a Jewish Point of View, American Hebrew Says.

The appeal of Israel Zangwill for Jewish support of the cause of the Allies in the European war is criticised adversely in The American Hebrew, which says, editorially:

"We regret the intrusion of Israel Zangwill's appeal to American Jews at this time as an advocate of the cause of England. As an Englishman, Mr. Zangwill is within his rights—and it would be his patriotic duty—to support the cause of his Government. But his advice to American Jews lacks a Jewish point of view, notwithstanding his assurance that the English Prime Minister has experienced a change of heart regarding the Jewish question in Russia.

"We remember too well Sir Edward Grey's attitude when approached by English Jews on the Russian passport question. He was reluctant then to interfere in Russia's internal affairs. With Russia victorious on the field, will his British prudence allow him to overcome this reluctance? Mr. Zangwill as a Jewish leader is in the wrong galley as a press agent of the British Empire."

INDICT NEW YORK SLEUTHS.

Charged with Attempting to Extort Money from Prisoner in Oregon.

Special to The New York Times.

GRANT'S PASS, Ore., Sept. 14.—Indictments were returned here by the Grand Jury against W. B. Dennison and Detectives Charles Haas and F. Kirkwood, all of New York, as a result of the arrest of Oslin Jackson. Jackson was arrested on a charge of embezzlement alleged to have been committed in New York City in 1913. The detectives said he had been indicted for embezzling $85,000, but was in jail in lieu of $50,000 bail, but was later released upon the order of Gov. West.

Upon his release from jail, Jackson swore out warrants charging Dennison and the two detectives with attempted extortion of money. Lieut. Wood is here to take Jackson back, but Gov. West will not honor the requisition papers until the case against Dennison and the detectives is settled.

MONKEY LOST IN HARLEM.

Bobbie Unsnaps Chain and Vanishes in Master's Absence.

The police sent out a general alarm last night for "Bobbie, ten years old, 20 inches high, with brown eyes and brown hair." Bobbie, it was explained, was a trick monkey belonging to C. J. St. John, an animal trainer, who lost him from headquarters at 194th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, at noon.

St. John had concluded an engagement at the Star Casino in Amsterdam Avenue, and was on his way to a fair at Riverhead, N. Y. He left the monkey chained to a box when he went to luncheon, and when he returned the monkey had succeeded in performing the trick of unsnapping the chain.

Lieut. Patrick Shea of the West 177th Street Police Station, to whom St. John appealed for help, had the roofs of apartment houses on upper Washington Heights searched and sent detectives into the woods at Inwood and at Fort George. He feared that the monkey, if at large, might frighten women and children.

GOV. G. W. HAYES RE-ELECTED

Democratic Candidate in Arkansas Wins by 30,000 Over Kinney.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Sept. 14.—Incomplete returns from a majority of the counties in Arkansas tonight indicate that Gov. George W. Hays, Democratic candidate for re-election, received a majority of approximately 30,000 votes over his Republican opponent, A. L. Kinney, in today's election. Other Democratic candidates for State offices were not opposed.

Large majorities are shown in favor of constitutional amendments to empower cities to issue improvement bonds and creating the office of Lieutenant Governor. The vote is close on the proposal to fix the salaries of members of the Legislature. The initiative acts proposing a child labor law and wider publicity for the acts of public officials apparently have been carried.

TWO BOYS KILLED BY AUTOS

In Both Instances Youngsters Ran In Front of Machines.

Frank Banotti, seven years old, of 302 East Eleventh Street, was knocked down and killed last night by a north-bound automobile at Second Avenue and Eleventh Street. The boy walked directly in front of the machine, it is said. The chauffeur, Isidore Strump of 815 East Thirteenth Street, was unable to stop the auto. According to the police, Joseph Rehmer of 65 Eleventh Street is the owner of the machine. The police say the accident was unavoidable.

Morris Ogulnik, twelve years old, of 68 East Ninety-ninth Street, jumped off a wagon before an automobile at 101st Street and Madison Avenue last night and was killed. The machine is owned by a cleaning concern of Hoboken. The chauffeur disappeared, and Paul Goulain of West Hoboken, who was on the seat with him, was allowed to go, but the automobile was held.

William Douglas Sloane Ill.

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Sept. 14.—William Douglas Sloane is quite ill at Elm Court. He has been in poor health for some time, and since his return from abroad has been living very quietly here. Sunday his illness caused alarm to his family, but today his condition had improved. He has taken very little part in Lenox life this year, his financing of the Lenox Club purchase of the Greenleaf property for a country club and his election as President of the Lenox Golf Club being his principal participation in the affairs of Lenox this year.

FIND PATENT HERE FOR ODD WAR SHELL

NO PROOF OF ITS USE

German Firm Also Owns Patent on a "Searchlight Projectile" to Find the Enemy.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—The records of the United States Patent Office give a description of a patented shell that is interesting, in view of a news dispatch from Malta, which says: "There is much talk here of a new German siege gun which kills as much by poisonous gases liberated from the shell as by the solid contents."

There is nothing in the specifications on file at the Patent Office to show that a shell patented on behalf of the Krupps, the German manufacturers of war materials, is to be used for the purpose of generating poisonous gases, but the description corresponds to that of the shell mentioned in the Malta dispatch, and unofficial information is to the effect that it is intended for the generation of gases.

According to statements made here, the manufacture of this shell was opposed by a daughter of the house of Krupp, who contended that the use of such a weapon in warfare was contrary to the dictates of humanity. Why the shell was patented in the United States is a mystery. The specifications are minute enough to enable any nation to manufacture the shells. None of the dispatches from the war zone, however, says that the shell described in the Malta dispatch is being used by the Germans.

The application for the patent, which is a matter of public record, was filed on Oct. 10, 1910. The patent was granted on Sept. 12, 1911. The patentee was Karl Wieser, described as "a subject of the Emperor of Germany and a resident of Bredeney, Germany." He was the inventor of the shell. The official records show that Wieser made an assignment of the American patent rights to "Fried. Krupp Aktien Gesellschaft of Essen-on-the-Ruhr, Germany." The Malta news dispatch described the invention as follows:

"The gun has a relatively small bore and is easily mounted on wheels. The shell is loaded at the mouth of the gun, but a metallic shaft, making a piece with the shell, is rammed tightly into the gun. Shell and shaft are shot together. The shell is detached in its course. The shell when it explodes emits poisonous gases which suffocate those who escape death by the explosive missiles."

A drawing submitted with the application for the patent shows that the shell is a sphere and very much larger than the muzzle of the gun from which it is fired. As it cannot be put in the bore of the gun it is attracted to a shaft that runs down into the gun barrel. In the technical description given in the application it is said:

"The object is, in the present invention, reached by giving the part of the shaft whereon the weight slides a smaller dimension than that of the bore of the gun, and by supplying the shaft with an abutment or stop at the rear of this small diameter which stop will conform with the diameter of the bore of the gun. And the smaller part of the shaft passes through a hole of the same diameter in the weight, so that, with the assistance of centring faces on the weight and on the gun, the former will be in such a position that its axis will coincide with that of the bore of the gun."

The invention is a three-piece device—the shaft, which goes into the bore of the gun; the shell, and the weight which is attached both to the shaft and the gun and joins them together. When the shaft is fired the weight retards its progress and through that means detaches itself and the shaft from the shell, which continues in its flight.

Cable dispatches from the war area have told how the Germans have ascertained the situation of their enemies at night by sending aeroplanes and dropping from them illuminating rockets that told the artillery where to fire. Another Krupp device patented in this country and described in specifications in the files of the Patent Office suggests that the situation of the forces of the Allies at night has not been ascertained by means of aeroplanes and illuminating rockets, but by simpler means. The device in question is described as a "searchlight projectile." It was patented on Sept. 12, 1911, on an application filed on May 22, 1911. The inventor was Frederich Ziegenfuss of Essen-on-the-Ruhr, Germany, and he assigned his rights, according to the record, to the Krupp Company.

The invention consists of a shell in which a parachute is folded ingeniously. In the shell also, as attachments to the parachute, are illuminating candles. A time fuse is set so that the bursting charge will not be ignited until the projectile is on the descending part of the trajectory. When the charge is ignited the parachute is released and falls slowly to the ground, with the candles alight. The candles illuminate a considerable area and show the situation of the enemy.

WOMAN ARRESTS TWO MEN.

Says She Saw Thieves Who Robbed Her Try to Rob Another.

Miss Ida Rubin of 8 West 115th Street seized two men last night, who she said had robbed her a few nights ago, and held them until Policeman McAndrews of the West 123d Street Station arrested them. The men were Henry Ziegler, a waiter, of 1,457 Avenue A and Jacob Speckler of 417 East Seventy-fourth Street.

Miss Rubin said the men snatched $8 from her and ran away a few evenings ago after stopping her to ask how they could get to the Grand Central Station. She said she saw the same men attempt to rob another woman in the same way last night and so seized them and called for a policeman.

Six Runaway Boys Rounded Up.

Six boys, from thirteen to fifteen years old, left Bridgeport, Conn., yesterday, to see New York. They arrived at the Grand Central and wandered about until last night, when a policeman found them in the Pennsylvania Station. They were sent to the Children's Society. An empty .32-calibre revolver was found on one boy, and $61 on two others, who said they had found it in Bridgeport.

Tab on Ships at French Ports.

BORDEAUX, Sept. 14.—Minister of Marine now requires that every trading ship entering a French port must declare the nationality of the vessel and the citizenship of her passengers and crew, so that steps may be taken for the transportation of aliens.

GERMANS NEARING HOME.

Daily Getting Nearer to Their Base, Says Herman Ridder.

"The situation in France has reached a stage where it merits serious consideration," says Herman Ridder in an editorial in this morning's Staats-Zeitung. "But does this mean that we are to accept unqualifiedly all the optimistic assurances issued from the War Office in Paris and subsequently in Bordeaux of a decisive victory of the Allies?

"It is more than probable that one of the motives which worked for this sudden move on the part of the German Staff was the difficulty experienced in bringing up sufficient ammunition over its long line of communication to keep its army supplied. It is an axiom of the German military system that an army cannot fight without the 'iron ration.'

"This new strategic movement on the part of the Germans has been carried out with that perfect organization so characteristic of their military operations. The fact that the pessimistic War Office of Paris reports the capture of no more than 6,000 of the enemy would tend to confirm this assertion. As day succeeds day, the German right wing is brought nearer to its base of supplies and to the reinforcements that are hurrying south from Belgium and Maubeuge, and consequently nearer to the point on which it will rest its defensive or will base a new offensive campaign against the Allies.

"Along the whole line I see nothing that bodes eventual ill to German arms. A new movement in the west, which is admittedly keeping the Allies guessing and may yet prove to be the precursor of other victories, is under way. In the east, despite the reports from Paris and St. Petersburg, a wall of adamant is being built against the Slavic hordes that are being driven to their task by the promise of a revel in Berlin."

JAPANESE FLANK KIAO-CHAU.

About 25,000 on Shan-Tung Peninsula.—Aeroplane Drops Bombs.

TOKIO, Sept. 14. (Cable Dispatch to the East and West News Bureau.)—The Japanese Army Department announces that Japanese troops arrived at Heitaku on Sept. 11, but found no enemy in the neighborhood. Some German cavalry was, however, reported to be at Sobuboku.

PEKING, Sept. 14.—It is believed here that 25,000 Japanese troops now have been landed on the Shan-tung Peninsula. The Chinese are sending twenty-five Red Cross men to serve both combatants at Kiao-Chau. This is the first time Chinese Red Cross members have worked among foreigners.

A dispatch from Lai-chow today says that Japanese troops are passing toward Shahe and Ping-tu, forty miles north of Kiao-Chau.

Advices received here state that a Japanese hydroaeroplane flew over Tsingtau twice last week. It was always out of range and dropped several bombs, one of which burst near the Government House, but broke only windows.

NAMES POLICE SECRETARIES

Woods Accepts Resignation of Deputy Commissioner Rubin.

Police Commissioner Woods accepted formally yesterday the resignation of Second Deputy Police Commissioner J. Robert Rubin. It will take effect on Oct. 1. Mr. Rubin announced his intention of resigning some time ago, in order to resume the practice of law. Mr. Rubin was made Deputy Commissioner in February, and undertook the reorganization of the Detective Bureau. That work has been completed. His successor has not been selected.

The Commissioner announced the appointment of Mille E. Case of 236 Sixth Avenue, Brooklyn, to be Secretary of the department, and John W. Frank of 831 West 142d Street as secretary to the Second Deputy Commissioner.

Autoists Abandon Injured Man.

The police were looking last night for four men who left an injured man on a corner in the Bronx yesterday afternoon after the automobile in which they were riding had knocked him down. Thomas Broderick, forty-two years old, of 461 East 136th Street, was the injured man. He was knocked down at 138th Street and Willis Avenue, and several persons saw him helped into the automobile. Later he was found bleeding from his injuries at Willis Avenue and 140th Street, from where he was sent to Lincoln Hospital by the police.

DEMOCRATS LEAD IN MAINE VOTING

Curtis Apparently Elected Governor, Probably by 600 Plurality—Legislature Close.

PROGRESSIVE VOTE SMALL

Congressional Delegation May Not Change, Although First District Is in Doubt.

ISSUE OF WILSON POLICIES

Democrats Fought Their Campaign on That Line—Heaviest Voting in State in Years.

Special to The New York Times.

BANGOR, Me., Sept. 14.—Present returns indicate that Oakley C. Curtis, Democrat, Mayor of Portland, was today elected Governor of Maine. Returns from the cities of Bangor and Portland just before midnight changed an indicated Republican plurality for Governor to an apparent Democratic victory, though the result will not be certain until fifty missing towns have been heard from.

The standing with 450 towns and all of the 30 cities heard from was as follows: Haines, (Republican,) 54, 995; Curtis, (Democrat,) 57,513; Gardiner, (Progressive,) 16,822. The corresponding vote of President in 1912 was: Taft, 26,800; Wilson, 45,467; Roosevelt, 45,827.

These returns show a Republican gain of 12[illegible] per cent. and a Democratic gain of, 12 per cent. If the same percentage be maintained Curtis's election is indicated by at least 600 plurality.

Figures from the First Congressional District are too slow in coming in to make any forecast safe. Returns from 40 out of 58 towns and plantations give Hinds, Republican, 7,543; Scater, Democrat, 7,575, and Emerson, Progressive, 1,200.

Congressman McGillicuddy, Democrat, in the Second District, wins, according to the latest advices, by upward of 5,400. Returns from the Third District indicate that William R. Pattangill, Democrat, was defeated by Congressman John A. Peters. Fourth District returns indicate the re-election of Congressman Frank E. Guernsey, Republican.

The complexion of the Legislature is still in doubt, although it is likely that the Democrats will control both houses.

It was one of the closest fights in years, and the voting was the heaviest in the State for a long time. The totals run half again as heavy as at the late Presidential election.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 14.—Fair weather today favored the voters in the first State election of the year. The Progressives cast their ballot for a complete party ticket for the first time in this State, and the size of their vote, the largest of all parties expected, would have an important bearing on the result. National politics have been brought to the front by more speakers of national prominence than have taken part in an off year election for a decade.

Gov. William T. Haines was opposed for re-election by Mayor Oakley C. Curtis of Portland. A State Auditor, members of the State Legislature, and county officers were also to be voted for. Prohibition, as usual, was the most important State issue.

A feature of the campaign was the question of national issues, and the Democrats made their fight purely on the endorsement of the national Administration.

ROOSEVELT'S WESTERN TRIP

Colonel Will Start Thursday and Campaign Till Oct. 1.

Special to The New York Times.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., Sept. 14.—Col. Roosevelt will devote two weeks to his campaigning tour in the Middle West. He will leave New York next Thursday evening at 6 o'clock over the Pennsylvania Railroad, and will make his first speech in Wichita, Kan., on Saturday evening. On next Monday night he will speak in Kansas City, Kan.; on Tuesday at Lincoln, Neb.; on Wednesday at Des Moines, Iowa; on Thursday at Chicago, on Friday at East St. Louis, Ill., and on Saturday at Indianapolis, Ind. On Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 28 and 29, Col. Roosevelt will be in Ohio, and he will end his campaign on Wednesday, Sept. 30, at Bay City, Mich. He will also make at least fifty short informal addresses during the trip at various small towns and cities along the route.

The Colonel had no visitors today. In the afternoon he attended exercises at the Cove School, when prizes were awarded to the adults and children of that section of Oyster Bay who were entered in a contest to beautify the gardens and farms. The main prize, a book on gardening, which was presented by Col. Roosevelt, was won by Leonard Wood Hill, Young Hill's twin brother, Theodore Roosevelt Hill, was also entered in the contest and was ranked second. The Colonel made a brief address complimenting the people on what had been accomplished. Col. Roosevelt's children were once pupils at the school, and the Colonel has always taken a keen interest in the work done there.

Col. Roosevelt will go to New York on Wednesday to confer with the Progressive leaders.

STIMSON BACKS HINMAN.

Ex-Secretary of War Says He Has Shown His Fitness for Governor.

Ex-Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson wrote a letter yesterday to Representative Charles M. Hamilton of Chautauqua in which he came out unqualifiedly for Harvey D. Hinman as the most available candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor. In his letter Mr. Stimson indicated that so long as there was any danger that the party would be involved with the Progressives through the candidacy of Mr. Hinman he had held aloof, but that now with that danger past, he felt free to come out for him.

"I have reached the conclusion that Mr. Hinman is the best qualified candidate," Mr. Stimson said in his letter. "In the first place his eight years' service as a State Senator has given him an acquaintance with the problems of State administration as well as with the personal factors therein which would be invaluable to him as Governor. None of the other candidates has such an advantage.

"In the second place, that same public service has demonstrated Mr. Hinman's capacity for the office he now seeks. It takes courage and vigor and leadership and outspoken frankness to be a successful Governor of New York. Mr. Hinman's course in the Senate as well as his conduct during the present canvass have shown his possession of these qualities in a high degree."

Ex-Senator Hinman will be in this city tomorrow when he will address district meetings in Brooklyn.

James W. Wadsworth, Jr., it was announced yesterday, will spend two days this week touring the Assembly districts in Kings, the home of his rival for the nomination for United States Senator. Mr. Wadsworth will arrive here [illegible] from his home in Geneseo, [illegible] County.

Edward B. La Petra was designated as Independence League candidate for Judge of the City Court.

SULZER STUMPS BROOKLYN.

Attacks Davenport in Speeches at Six Meetings.

William Sulzer spoke at six meetings in Brooklyn last night. He was greeted with a good deal of enthusiasm, although there was not quite so much spontaneity in the cheering as when the ex-Governor announced his candidature first a few weeks ago.

He spoke at Thirteenth Avenue and Forty-first Street, South Brooklyn, Independence Hall, Osborne Street and Pitkin Avenue, Brownsville, Macon Street and Broadway, Graham Avenue and Stagg Street, Throop Avenue and Pulaski Street, and at the Progressive Club, Twenty-third Street and Fifth Avenue. At Independence Hall Mr. Sulzer was greeted by a crowd of 110 persons.

Most of the candidate's speech was taken up with an attack on ex-Senator Davenport, the regular Progressive candidate. He was himself, Mr. Sulzer asserted, the friend of the people, and since he had done so much when he had the chance in Congress and at Albany for the News, he called on them now to stand by him.

Mr. Davenport, he asserted, was not really a Progressive. He had asked the ex-Senator to say exactly how he stood with regard to the Progressive platform, but by had never made a satisfactory reply.

Committeeman Davies Resigns.

MADISON, Wis., Sept. 14.—Joseph E. Davies announced today his resignation as a member of the National Democratic Committee. He was manager for the Western part of the country during the Wilson campaign.

JUDICIARY FUSION PLAN IS DROPPED

Republicans and Bull Moose to Unite on Candidates Below Fourteenth Street.

BATES QUITS FOR MILLS

Lynch Is Off Democratic Slate for City Court and Allen is Named.

Fusion between Republicans and Progressives on Judgships was discussed last night by groups of leaders at both Progressive and Republican county headquarters. Two nominations for the Supreme Court in New York County and two places on the bench of the City Court were involved in the deal which was being proposed. Included also in the proposed bargain was fusion between Republicans and Progressives on all candidates for Congress, Senate, and Assembly in districts below Fourteenth Street, where Tammany Hall is regarded as strong.

The fusion project, according to all accounts, originated with Chairman Samuel S. Koenig of the Republican County Committee. He went to Mayor Mitchel and told the Mayor that if the Progressives would take up Tax Commissioner George V. Mullan as a candidate for one of the Supreme Court nominations the Republicans would indorse his candidacy and in addition indorse the candidacy of Michael Schaap for the City Court. Commissioner Mullan is an enrolled Republican.

Late last night it was announced that the deal on Supreme and City Court designations had fallen through. Chairman Samuel S. Koenig of the Republican County Committee absolutely declined to stand for the equal division of offices that the Executive Committee of the Progressive County Committee had decided upon as a condition for fusion at its meeting held yesterday evening. Mr. Koenig informed Acting Chairman Lesser of the Progressive County Committee that he would be willing to drop Municipal Court Justice Davis for the purpose of substituting George V. Mullan, Mayor Mitchel's former law partner, but that in order to carry the arrangement through the Progressives must dron John J. O'Connell, one of their candidates for the nomination for Supreme Court Justice.

A special committee with full powers which had been appointed by the Progressive Executive County Committee after this ultimatum had been received conferred, and by a vote of 15 to 13 decided not to drop Mr. O'Connell from the Progressive slate.

The project for fusion against Tammany candidates in the strong Tammany districts below 14th Street was consummated, and resulted in an almost complete alliance against the candidates of Tammany Hall for Congress, Senate, and Assembly and for district delegates to the Constitutional Convention in the territory. Here are the details of the fusion arrangement below Fourteenth Street:

The Progressive candidate for Municipal Court Judge in the Second District, David Goldstein, has withdrawn and Gustav Hartman, the Republican candidate for the nomination will be substituted on the Progressive ballot.

The Progressives indorse the Republican candidates for Congress in the Twelfth, Thirteenth, and Fourteenth Congressional Districts.

The Progressives indorse Herman Weiss, the Republican candidate for Senate from the Twelfth Senatorial District.

The Progressives indorse four out of six Republican candidates for the Constitutional Convention from the Eleventh and Twelfth Senate Districts.

The Progressives indorse the Republican candidates for Assembly in the Second, Fourth, and Sixth Assembly Districts.

The Republicans indorse the Progressive candidate for Assembly in the Eighth and Ninth Assembly Districts.

With the filing of declinations by designees with the Board of Elections a number of other arrangements looking to a community of interest between Republicans and Progressives were brought to light.

In the Seventeenth Senatorial District Linden Bates, Jr., the Progressive candidate for State Senator, has withdrawn to give his place on the Progressive ballot to Ogden L. Mills, Republican. Bates will be a candidate for Congress in the Seventeenth Congressional District with joint Republican-Progressive indorsement.

In the Sixteenth Senate District Lyle E. Mahan, the Republican candidate, will receive the Progressive indorsement.

In the Eighteenth and Twentieth Congress Districts the Progressive candidates have withdrawn and the Republican candidates will be substituted on the Progressive primary ballot.

In the Sixteenth Senate District the Progressives indorse the three Republican delegates to the Constitutional Convention.

In the Twenty-sixth and Twenty-eighth Assembly Districts the Progressive candidates for renomination will receive Republican indorsement.

In the Twenty-fourth Assembly District the Republican candidate will receive the Progressive indorsement.

Samuel Strasbourger, who was a Republican candidate both for the nomination as State Controller and for Congress from the Nineteenth District, declined designation as a candidate for Congress. This leaves a free field in the Republican primaries to his rival, Albert Ottinger.

The substitutions by the respective committees on vacancies will be made today with the Board of Elections.

Richard T. Lynch, who has been designated as a candidate for renomination to the City Court bench in the Democratic primaries, consented to get off the ticket yesterday. In his place James A. Allen, who was one of William R. Hearst's chief lieutenants, was designated as a candidate for the City Court by the Democratic Party and the Independence League. Allen was the candidate of the Independence League for Mayor last Fall, but withdrew in favor of Mayor Mitchel.

HENNESSY'S NAME LEADS.

Hedges Draws First Place on Republican Primary Ballot.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 14.—The organization candidates of the dominant political parties had to take secondary places on the primary ballots at the drawing for places in the Secretary of State's office today. John A. Hennessy drew first place on the Democratic ballot for Governor, which made Gov. Glynn's place second. William Gorham Rice, for Lieutenant Governor, drew first place, making Thomas B. Lockwood take second.

Job E. Hedges will head the Republican ballot with Harvey J. Hinman second and Charles S. Whitman third. For Lieutenant Governor, Senator Seth G. Heacock drew first, Edward Schoeneck second, and Frank A. Sidway third. Frederick M. Davenport drew first, leaving William Sulzer to take second place for Governor on the Progressive ballot.

William Bohmer for Controller, Mitchell May for Secretary of State, James A. Parsons for Attorney General, and Samuel Seabury for Court of Appeals Judge were the only organization men who drew No. 1 positions for State officers on the Democratic ticket, while Edward R. O'Malley, for Attorney General, was the only organization candidate to get No. 1 place on the Republican ticket.

The Hennessy-Roosevelt fifteen delegates at large to the Constitutional Convention drew the first position.

County Clerk W. F. Schneider and William A. Coakley of New York represented Ambassador James W. Gerard for United States Senator. They saw Franklin D. Roosevelt draw first place and James F. McDonough second place. The Republican candidates for Senator drew position in this order: David Jayne Hill, James W. Wadsworth, William M. Calder.

County Clerk Schneider, after the drawing, said he wanted to deny the statement made by Franklin Roosevelt that Ambassador Gerard was the candidate of Tammany Hall.

The declination of the Republican designation by C. Adelbert Becker of the Bronx for State Senator was received today. His committee to fill vacancies has until tomorrow at midnight to name his successor.

BALLOTS TO GO IN VAULT.

Boxes Used in April 7 Election to be Unsealed.

Supreme Court Justice Philbin yesterday denied the application of the Board of Elections for permission to destroy the ballots cast in the Constitutional Convention election of April 7 last. They was told that if the ballots were to be kept sealed it would be necessary to spend about $8,000 to provide other ballot boxes for the coming primary election. Thereupon Philbin granted permission to remove the ballots in the presence of representatives of the District Attorney, of the Board of Elections, and of William J. Schieffelin, seal them, and place them in a safe deposit vault. In case the District Attorney desires to examine them he may do so by giving the board and Mr. Shieffelin notice.

Albert A. Bard of counsel for Mr. Schieffelin, told the court he was in the District Attorney's office when Patrick Donohue, one of the ballot clerks in the Fourth Election District of the Fourteenth Assembly District, said that he knew of frauds having been committed by the election officers to make it appear that a majority had been cast in favor of the convention.

GERARD WILL ACCEPT.

Ambassador Cables Willingness to Run for U. S. Senate.

The following cablegram was received yesterday afternoon by Thomas D. McCarthy, who was formerly secretary to Justice Gerard:

Will not accept nomination if it necessitates my leaving Berlin here to make a campaign for the nomination or for election. Gladly accept party's nomination for United States Senate if it is understood that I will not take seat until completion of my duties at hand.

JAMES W. GERARD.

Ambassador Gerard's willingness to be a primary candidate, expressed in the foregoing cable despatch, had been anticipated by his friends. Yesterday at the drawing in the Secretary of State's office in Albany Mr. Gerard's name was allotted third place on the Democratic primary ballot, after those of Franklin D. Roosevelt and James F. McDonough.

BULL MOOSE CROWDS HIM.

Republican Candidate Objects to Meyer's Methods.

Charles E. Rice, Jr., who is running for the Republican nomination for Assembly in the Twenty-seventh District, complains of the methods employed by the backers of Schuyler M. Meyer. The Republican voters are receiving a letter from Meyer's friends asking their votes for Meyer.

"If Meyer is asking for Republican votes as a Progressive or for Progressive votes as a Republican," said Mr. Rice, "I hope he will say so. As for me, I ask only for Republican votes from Republicans. I was a Republican when our party's affairs were at ebb [illegible] the benefit of my loyalty now that the tide is running flood."

Meyer, who was elected last [illegible] on a fusion ticket, Rice is the [illegible] candidate of the Republican organization in the Twenty-seventh.

MITCHEL COMES OUT FOR J. A. HENNESSY

Mayor Says He and F. D. Roosevelt Are Clean and Militant Leaders.

LETTER READ TO CROWDS

Hennessy Replies to Gov. Glynn That He Named Public Service Commissioner Wood for Murphy.

Mayor Mitchel wrote a letter yesterday to John A. Hennessy, independent candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, indorsing his candidacy for Governor and that of Franklin D. Roosevelt for the United States Senate. The letter was read by Mr. Hennessy last night at meetings held in Yorkville Casino and Manhattan Casino, when Mr. Hennessy continued his attacks on the administration of Gov. Glynn.

This is Mayor Mitchel's letter:

Sept. 14, 1914.

Dear Mr. Hennessy: Since my return to the city last Thursday I have been so closely occupied by the details of the city's finances that I have not had the time to communicate to you my gratification upon the announcement of your candidacy for Governor, which was made during my absence on vacation. I now take the first opportunity to say to you that I am heartily glad that you have become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, and to express the hope that you will be successful.

Your candidacy and that of Franklin D. Roosevelt for United States Senator assure the continuance of the fight for clean leadership and good government which we made last Fall in the municipal campaign, and give to the many Democrats opposed to the continued domination of their party by Charles F. Murphy an opportunity to express their opposition to him. It would have been a cause for sincere regret if such an opportunity were not to be given.

I feel that the rank and file of our party throughout the State are fortunate that they are to have a candidate of your courage and independence. You showed by your work as an investigator at Albany and by your speeches in the campaign last Fall that you are the type of fearless Democrat who is needed to lead in such a fight. With you as the nominee for Governor and Franklin D. Roosevelt as the nominee for United States Senator there would be open to the anti-Murphy Democrats of the State the prospect of a clean and militant leadership.

I am a non-partisan Mayor of New York and intend to continue to conduct a strictly non-partisan administration of municipal affairs. I am, however, a Democrat dedicated to a radical change of leadership in the Democratic party. As an independent Democrat opposed to Charles F. Murphy I wish you and your colleague, Mr. Roosevelt, success in the coming primaries.

Very sincerely yours,
JOHN PURROY MITCHEL.

John A. Hennessy, Esq.,
300 St. Mark's Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

In Yorkville Casino, 210 East Eighty-sixth Street, 2,000 people heard Mr. Hennessy. Augustus Thomas presided, and the other speakers were William Gorham Rice, candidate for Lieutenant Governor; Sidney Newborg, candidate for Secretary of State; Appraiser John K. Sague, John De Witt Warner, Manton W. Wyvell, secretary to Secretary of State Bryan, and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Mr. Hennessy defied Gov. Glynn to name a single act which he did to continue the investigation of frauds which Hennessy had called to his attention.

"He was put up there to close up the avenues of fraud," he asserted, "and it is the best work he has done as Governor."

"Well," Mr. Hennessy continued, "he says point out to me a dishonest appointment. I did point out two to him. He has not answered that yet. I will point out another tonight which is morally and politically dishonest, and that is the most recent appointment to this city of a Public Service Commissioner, a Mr. Wood, formerly agent of the Interborough Railroad. You gentlemen know that Mr. Murphy, before the appointment of Mr. Wood, owned a Public Service Commission as absolutely as he has ever owned a good fat herd. Put in his life time one of the Public Service Commissioners goes out next year. So there might be a Republican Governor and a Republican Legislature and therefore he wanted to have four out of five, so that next year in any event he would have three out of five. And you know, as I know, and your wives and daughters know, that we have to stand up at noon, at 1, 2, and 3 o'clock in the afternoon where the Interborough here and the Brooklyn Rapid Transit in Brooklyn are holding up cars so that they may make greater dividends.

"And you know and I know that the Interborough last week declared a dividend of 6 per cent. on its watered capital. Why? Because the Public Service Commission, owned and controlled by Murphy, permits them to crowd you in the cars at all times of the day and night—I am not speaking of the morning or of the night, when they can't help it—but they crowd you in the cars, to decrease the running time of the cars in some instances to ten minutes—to six trips an hour.

"Now I challenge Mr. Glynn from this date to the primaries to say who suggested to him the appointment of Mr. Wood. He never knew him. He never knew he lived. I ask him if it was not Arthur Murphy of the Bronx who suggested it through Charles F. Murphy of Manhattan?"

FRIED EGG FLIER'S FAREWELL

Mock Joy Masks Real Woe Over Withdrawal of Sandy Hook Boats.

Pandemonium broke when the Jersey Central twin-screw flier Sandy Hook sailed on her last trip from West Forty-second Street pier at 4:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon with a modest shipload of passengers for the north Jersey Coast resorts. Dozens of officials and pier hands, watchmen, police and other frequenters of the dock rushed to the string piece as the boat began to move and pounded iron pipes with iron bars, blew police whistles, beat tin cans or else just howled, while the lesser members of the steamer's crew flocked to the starboard rail, the firemen beating a devil's tattoo on their shovels with spanners and hammers and the stewards and others ringing bells or hammering the vessel's side with broom handles or other noise producers.

Some of the passengers were alarmed but wonderment ceased when they saw the Captain on the bridge and his officers at the rail all smiling while the Hook's big chime whistle gave three soft purring blasts.

Business collapsed on the line after Labor Day owing to cold weather, and the boats were withdrawn yesterday, about a month earlier than usual, despite furious protests of many commuters. The Jersey Central emblem, a red risk surrounded by a white circle, on the smokestacks of all the company's vessels, giving rise to the harbor nickname of the "Fried Egg Fleet," will therefore be seen down the bay until next Spring only on tugs and colliers.

780,000 IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Reopening Shows an Increase of 30,000 Pupils.

Little trouble was experienced in reopening the public schools yesterday. The comparatively few teachers who were absent on account of the war had their places filled by competent substitutes.

There was an increase over last September of about 30,000 pupils, and there were 12,500 more seats. A feature of the opening exercises was the singing of a stanza of "The Star-Spangled Banner" by the pupils in every school in the five boroughs in honor of the 100th anniversary of the writing of the song. It was estimated that 780,000 pupils were in attendance in the public schools yesterday and 135,000 in the parochial schools.

Attorney Put on Trial.

Frederick H. Cox, an attorney in Queens, was put on trial in Long Island City yesterday on a grand larceny indictment returned eighteen months ago. Cox and his wife were both indicted on the testimony of John Conselyea, who said they had retained his share of $5,000 paid by the city for property for water supply purposes. Cox says he kept the money to pay a debt owed to him by Conselyea.

GOT KARLUK'S MEN AS HOPE WAS DIM

Survivors Could Not Believe Their Ears When Rescuer's Whistle Sounded.

WERE IN TWO CAMPS

Dead Were Buried on Bleak Wrangel Island Near Tent of the Living.

HOW HELP REACHED THEM

Volunteer Schooner Fights Her Way Through the Ice Packs—No Clue to Missing Scientists.

By BURT M. McCONNELL,
Meteorologist of the Canadian Arctic Expedition.

Special to The New York Times.

NOME, Alaska, Sept. 13.—A short preface to the story of the rescue of the Karluk survivors will enable the readers of this newspaper to understand more easily why the King and Wing instead of the United States revenue cutter Bear arrived first on the scene and how and why I happened to be aboard her.

My commission in the Canadian arctic expedition was meteorologist of the northern party and secretary to Vilhjalmur Stefansson, commander of the expedition. The six weeks after the first of June were spent by me in hunting within a radius of fifteen miles of the cabin at Demarcation Point, and on July 25 we left for Point Barrow in the gasoline schooner Anna Olga.

We were twenty-four days in making the trip of 1,000 miles because of unfavorable ice conditions and a broken propeller shaft. We finally arrived at Point Barrow on Aug. 19, and on Aug. 21 the Bear, Capt. C. S. Cochran, arrived en route to Wrangel Island. Capt. Bartlett was a passenger aboard her, and I spent several hours in talking with him. We had not seen each other since I went ashore with Stefansson last September, and we each had much to relate.

After this conversation and several more with experienced men I came to the conclusion that ice conditions about Wrangel would be so favorable that it would be a comparatively simple matter for the Bear to steam over there, pick up the survivors, and take them to Nome. The Bear is without doubt the best boat on the Pacific Coast for ice work, and her Captain has had several years' experience in arctic waters.

I therefore reasoned that I could not be of service to Capt. Bartlett and when Olaf Swenson, whom I have known for several years, came up the next day in the gasoline schooner King and Wing and invited me to go down to Nome in his ship I gladly transferred from the Anna Olga. We left on Aug. 25 and arrived at Nome on Aug. 30. The Bear arrived three hours afterward from Wrangel, or, rather, that vicinity, for she brought the disappointing news that she had been unable on account of fog, snow, and ice to get near enough to the island to rescue the survivors, and had been compelled to turn back for more coal and provisions.

Delayed by a Gale.

The King and Wing had intended to leave on a walrus hunt the next day, but both she and the Bear were delayed by a moderate southeast gale. Mr. Swanson had invited me several times to continue on the King and Wing and take part in the hunt, but I did not decide to go until I heard that the Bear had not in spite of her heroic efforts and unquestioned ability been able to reach Wrangel Island, when I told Mr. Swanson if Capt. Bartlett did not want me for anything I would gladly go with him, especially if he would set a course for Wrangel while looking for walrus.

The Bear was delayed for a day longer than we were, as we learned later, and as I knew this would be so it made me all the more anxious to avail myself of Mr. Swanson's hospitable offer.

Last year the freeze-up began earlier in August, and for the first time since hearing at Point Barrow the news of the wreck, I began to worry about my former shipmates on that bleak and desolate island in Tl north.

The season was advancing too rapidly for comfort, and as the King and Wing got away at least a day sooner than the Bear was likely to, and as the former vessel is the faster, I urged Mr. Swanson to have Capt. Jochimsen head straight for Wrangel and not to bother with walrus, polar bears, whales, or trading until we had the shipwrecked men on board.

I told him that I could not promise him anything personally and that as a matter of fact I was no longer connected with the expedition, but that I was acutely interested in getting the sixteen men, one woman, and two children off that cold and barren island; also that I had every reason to believe that the Canadian Government would give him a square deal if he even made the attempt. As Stefansson once told me, "The Department of the Naval Service does not do things in a small way." I also told him I would do everything in my power to see that he received reasonable settlement for his trouble.

The answer to all this was characteristic of the man. He would go up there for humanity's sake, he said. If the Canadian Government wanted to reimburse him for the time lost, fuel consumed, and wages paid, all well and good, or, if it did not, then it would be all right. When we arrived at East Cape Siberia an Eskimo, Umiak or Standboat, and twelve natives were taken aboard for the dash over the snow which might be necessary a few miles from the island.

Schooner Fights the Ice.

Capt. Jochimsen was told to set a course for Wrangel Island and to let nothing stop; and nothing did. He went through ice almost as high as the masts of the King and Wing and when he came to a solid and impassable floe through which the schooner could not force her way, he would turn either to the east or west, until he found an opening. For twenty-four solid hours we went through ice until we reached a point a few miles off the coast of Wrangel, where we found open water.

The chief engineer, William Bisfer, tuned her up several revolutions faster than she had ever gone before, with the result that we were delayed two hours by a hot crank. The only diversions from the Cape to Wrangel were seeing at different times what must have been thousands of walrus, a whale, and a polar bear. The Eskimos grabbed their rifles in a most vociferous manner when the former were sighted and gathered about Mr. Swenson in an excited group, each man jabbering and gesticulating. The Eskimos must have thought Swenson was crazy when he passed by this enormous herd of walrus, representing as it did thousands of dollars to him. "Nothing doing, full speed ahead," was his nonchalant reply to all questions and remonstrance. Here was another instance where Olaf Swenson proved what sort of man he was.

On the evening of Sept. 6 we came upon a bear on an ice floe.

Fred L. Granville and Charles Zalibra immediately got their motion picture machines focused on him, while I operated another camera. The bear stood still even after the bow of the boat had cut in the ice, and Granville had set his camera within twetny-five feet of him and was turning the crank. Granville got some very good films, but Mr. Swenson shot the bear just as I was focusing my camera. We needed the fresh meat or the bear would have been allowed to proceed on his way.

We had been coming through ice all day and bucked it until midnight, when it became too dark to see clearly, and the Captain tied the vessel to an ice field. He then took a nap of three hours, as he had had no sleep for the last twenty-four.

We had seen with the glasses just before retiring the mountains of the island, and the Captain promised us that he would land us there before breakfast, but it began to look rather doubtful on account of the heavy ice. Several times it seemed that we could not get more than 100 yards further, but Capt. Jochimsen kept the schooner bucking away at the ice. Those who retired early in the evening could not sleep because of the rending and crashing as the King and Wing fought every foot of her way through the ice, and also because of the uncertainty of our ability to reach the island. We started again at 3 in the morning, the Captain setting a course for Rogers Harbor, where we knew we should at least find one camp.

Soon their tent could be seen, and with the aid of glasses we could see a cross and a flagpole near it. Furious blasts of the whistle failed to bring a response until we were within a quarter mile of shore. We learned afterward that they could scarcely believe their ears when they first heard the whistle, and were almost afraid to look. One man finally came out, waved his hand, disappeared into the tent, and then came out with a flag, which he hoisted to half mast. Two more men made their appearance and stood watching us for a few moments, and then returned to the tent.

The First Rescues.

The schooner was taken within 200 yards of the beach, and the skin boat was launched. Mr. Swenson, Granville, Zalibra, and I went ashore with the Eskimo crew and were met half way to the tent by John Munro, chief engineer of the Karluk; Fred W. Maurer, fireman, and Robert Templeton, steward. In twenty minutes they had collected their belongings, which were very few, and were aboard the King and Wing. So far so good. Before they had climbed aboard we were again under way for Cape Waring, where they told us the rest of the survivors were.

Bjarn Mamen, assistant to the geologist, and George S. Mallock, geologist and topographer, two of the finest fellows that ever lived, are buried under the tent. It is not known just what they died of, but it was not scurvy. George Breddy, another fireman, had accidentally shot himself, they told us, and the two parties of four men each had not been heard from since they separated voluntarily from their company.

These parties consisted of First Officer A. Anderson, Second Officer Charles Barker, and Brady and King Seaman, who got within three miles of Herald Island and stayed with two sled loads of provisions at the edge of the open water while Mamen and two Eskimos returned to camp at the scene of the shipwreck for more provisions. When the next party returned to Herald Island on the way to Wrangel, the men were not to be found, and have not been seen since. The other party, consisting of Dr. A. Forbes Mackay, James Murray, oceanographer; Henri Beuchat, anthropologist, and Morris Seaman, had started on ahead against the wishes of Capt. Bartlett, pulling their own sled.

They have never been heard from since. All this was told to us before we reached Cape Waring. The three men were provided with bathing facilities, food, and clothes. All their old clothes were thrown overboard as soon as the men disrobed, and I scarcely knew my old comrades as they issued from the bathroom at Waring. The King and Wing was unable to get nearer than two miles to shore, so the Captain tied up to the ice floe and we went ashore over the ice.

More Karluk Survivors Found.

Here we found the party in two tents. J. R. Hadley, ship's carpenter and dog driver; William McKinlay, the meteorologist and magnetician; Karlukpur, a Point Barrow Eskimo; his wife, Keruk, and their two children were in one tent, and Bert Williamson, second engineer; Ernest Chafe, cabin boy, and C. Williams, sailor, were in the other.

No time was lost in getting them aboard the King and Wing, as it began to snow while we were ashore and a stiff breeze sprang up from the northwest. McKinlay left a note at the camp in case another vessel should call, and I left another on a cross at the edge of the floe. The tents were left standing, and only bare necessities taken aboard the ship.

Swenson seemed to be satisfied with having rescued the parties and now left them entirely to me. I had the steward prepare some cereal and soft-boiled eggs, with coffee, &c., and then started on a hunt for clothes. The ship got under way after Hadley, Munroe, Swenson, and I had decided we ought for humanity's sake to make an attempt to reach Herald Island, not that we dared hope to find any of Anderson's party alive, but we thought it best to go.

"I will do whatever you say," Swenson told me, "but personally I have no hope of finding these men alive after they have been there six months."

We found the ice solid, however, and after going about forty miles along the edge of the solid pack without finding a lead, we turned to the southeast and headed for Nome. The next day, at about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, we met the Bear on her way to Wrangel Island. This was at about 69 degrees 55 minutes north latitude and 176 degrees 35 minutes west longitude. Capt. Cochran of the Bear sent one of his Lieutenants aboard the King and Wing with the message that if the survivors wished to come aboard the Bear, or if Mr. Swenson wished it, he would be glad to take them to Nome; if not, they were welcome to continue on the King and Wing.

The message was couched in the most courteous terms and the survivors knew that comfortable quarters and a plentiful supply of clothing and other luxuries awaited them on the Bear, but to a man they elected to stay aboard the ship that rescued them, notwithstanding the fact that the clothing they wore consisted of such as Mr. Swenson could furnish, combined with that contributed by almost every man aboard the ship, and that they had only deer skins to sleep on instead of sheets and blankets. Capt. Bartlett boarded the King and Wing and after thanking Mr. Swenson for the trouble he had taken ordered the men to go aboard the Bear. On the invitation of Capt. Cochran, who hails from my State, I went also aboard her to Nome and spent a few very pleasant days as his guest.

The Bear then proceeded to Herald Island to look for Anderson's party—a rather hopeless quest, one which we all felt ought to be made just the same. We were able to get within about ten miles of the island. Then the Bear made her way out of the ice and headed for Cape Serdge. We stopped there a short time, also at Cape Prince of Wales and Port Clarence, and arrived at Nome on Sunday, Sept. 13. BURT M. McCONNELL.

SEND RESCUED TO SEATTLE.

Survivors Will Take Merchant Ships Before the Ice Closes In.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—The Treasury Department today received a telegram from Capt. Cochran, commander of the United States revenue cutter Bear, reporting the arrival of that vessel at Nome with survivors of the ship's company of the Karluk, attached to the Stefansson Canadian arctic exploration expedition.

The message from Capt. Cochran merely reported "safe arrival." The Bear will remain at Nome for a time. It is likely that the members of the expedition who were rescued will be sent to Seattle on merchant vessels. It will be nearly a month before the ice will close in.

TIMES SQ. TRAFFIC CLEAR.

Subway Excavations Will Be Decked Over Tomorrow.

The worst of the confusion caused by the excavations for the new subway in Times Square will, it is expected, be over in a day or two. George Clark, the engineer in charge of the work for the Holbrook, Rollins & Cabot Corporation, said last night that today he hoped to raise the street car tracks north of Forty-second Street and Seventh Avenue about two feet, and that tomorrow the excavations would be decked over completely. This would give an unimpeded roadway, along which the ordinary traffic could run as though there were not engineering operations going on underneath.

Speaking of the remarks which are made concerning the platforms now in existence, Mr. Clark said: "I heard one man say to another about the raised sidewalk near the Subway kiosk: You see THE TIMES is getting ready for the world's series. They are putting up a platform right in front of their bulletin board."

Blaze in Police Station Barn.

The reserves of the West 177th Street Police Station, which is the old Arrow Head Inn, had a busy few minutes last evening when the barn back of the station took fire. A bucket line held the blaze in check until the firemen arrived and put it out. The damage was slight.

OHIO RIVER BOAT SUNK.

Passengers of the Greenwood Rescued as She Goes Down.

GALLIPOLIS, Ohio, Sept. 14.—The large steamer Greenwood sunk near Crown City, nine here today after striking a rock. The passengers and crew were rescued.

The boat is owned by the Greene Line of Cincinnati, and was on the way from Cincinnati to Charleston, W. Va.

More Earth Shocks in Peru.

LIMA, Peru, Sept. 14.—The seismic disturbances in the Department of Arequipa continue. Yesterday thirty-five shocks, some very violent, were recorded at Caraveli, which was destroyed last week. The tremors continue today.

WOMEN'S NATIONAL GOLF STARTS ON NASSAU LINKS--- JUNIOR METROPOLITAN TENNIS

NINETY-ONE WOMEN IN NATIONAL GOLF

Miss Georgianna M. Bishop of Brooklawn Wins Testing Round in 85.

Leading a record-breaking field of ninety-one starters, Miss Georgianna M. Bishop of Brooklawn, near Bridgeport, Conn., won the medal in the testing round of the women's national golf championship yesterday over the links of the Nassau Country Club at Glen Cove. It was her first success as a "clean medal winner," as she termed it, for in 1905 she tied with Miss Margaret Curtis at Morris County and won on a toss. Miss Bishop won the national championship at Merion in 1904, and has been metropolitan champion on two occasions.

Only two strokes separated Miss Bishop from her nearest competitor, Mrs. H. Arnold Jackson of Boston, who Miss Katie C. Harley, the 1906 titleholder. If Mrs. Jackson had not been trapped on her approach to the home green she might easily have tied Miss Bishop. Being bunkered cost her the two strokes difference. The same might be said of Miss Lillian B. Hyde, the metropolitan champion, for her drive, long enough but pulled, got her into a trap from which she played into another. She took six for the hole.

Miss M. A. Irving of Richmond County furnished reason for many congratulations when she handed in an 88. Miss Irving plays little in competition. Mrs. Ronald H. Barlow, the Philadelphia champion, began like a wizard, going out in 42. There seemed nothing impossible for her to do. The condition was reversed coming in, however, for she required 48 for a total of 90, the same as Miss Marion Hollins of Westbrook, last year's runner-up and former metropolitan champion.

There was a play-off for the last place in the championship division of thirty-two, involving Mrs. G. M. Heckscher of Piping Rock, Miss Elaine V. Rosenthal of Ravisloe, near Chicago; Miss Florence McNeely of Merion, Philadelphia, and Mrs. F. B. Ryan of Cranford. The plucky Miss Rosenthal, thanks to a splendid approach to within three feet of the pin, obtained a three, and Mrs. Heckscher played the hole in a par four. The other two took five each. On the second hole Mrs Ryan topped her second shot and overplayed the green on her third, so that by the time she finished she needed six to Miss McNeely's five, and Mrs. Ryan had to drop out.

The draw is unfortunate, in that two St. Louis girls are brought together, Miss Grace Semple and Mrs. E. H. Steedman, and that Miss Hollins and Miss Hyde, two Long Island girls, have to fight it out in the first round today. The draw follows:

Miss H. Curtis versus Mrs. Jackson, Miss Griscom versus Miss Allen, Mrs. Fox versus Mrs. Stockton, Mrs. Fitler versus Miss Painter, Miss Irving versus Miss Campbell, Mrs. Daley versus Mrs. Heckscher, Mrs. Wright versus Miss Roberson, Mrs. Vanderbeck versus Miss Osgood, Miss Rosenthal versus Mrs. Phipps, Miss Bishop versus Miss Sterling, Mrs. Sumner versus Miss McNeely, Miss Semple versus Mrs. Steedman, Mrs. Harter versus Miss Stratton, Mrs. Barlow versus Miss C. Curtis, Miss Brown versus Miss Hyde and Mrs. Swanacker versus Mrs. Davis.

Summary of yesterday's play:

JUNIORS PLAYING FOR TENNIS TITLE

Youngsters Finish 67 Matches in First Tourney for Metropolitan Championship.

With the completion of sixty-seven matches, a local tournament record was established yesterday in the junior metropolitan tennis championship on the West Side Tennis Club courts at Forest Hills, L. I. The tournament was a new feature on the National Association schedule, and was promoted for the purpose of developing new material for prospective national champions. With ninety-six entries, nearly every State in the country was represented, and many interesting matches were witnessed by a big gallery.

The defeat of W. Bottsford, a New York youngster who learned his tennis in England, by E. Bensin in straight sets at 6--7, 6--4, was one of the surprises of the tournament. Bottsford was the runner-up in the English junior championship tournament this year at Folkestone, England, and was expected to be a prominent contendar for the title. He, however, met his match in Binzeh, although he made a plucky fight.

Harold Throckmorton, the Princeton interscholastic champion, came through to the fourth round with little effort, and, with the defeat of Bottsford, is favored for the title. He drew a bye in the first round, but in the second and third won from C. D. Arnold and W. Loeb, respectively, in straight sets. He showed to advantage in the back court and outclassed his opponents.

Cecil Donaldson, the champion of Public School 134, Brooklyn, a 12-year-old boy, reached the third round after a long-drawn-out contest with F. N. Loughman. The youngster lost the first set, which went to deuce, but recovered in the next two sets, and by playing a strong net game captured the set. His victory was obtained on its merits, and his stamina helped to pull him through from a study opponent.

The victory of G. T. Achelis brought into the limelight a member of a famous tennis family, which has produced many prominent players. Young Achelis fought his way into the fourth round by meritorious victories over good players. He won his first match by default and defeated his opponents in the next two matches without the loss of a set. The summary:

Metropolitan Junior Championship. First Round.—A. Wolff defeated I. Flitt, 6--1, 6--4; S. Holt defeated E. Bailey, 6--2, 6--4; P. K. Boyce defeated H. Ross by default; C. Clark defeated W. St. John's Club Outing.

At the annual outing of St. John's Club of St. John's the Evangelist Parish, New York City, on Sunday at Dyer's Park, Whitestone, L. I., the following were the various events: 220-yard run—E. Kearney, 12-pound shot put—Albert Metzler, 29 feet 11 inches; one and a half mile run—F. N. Cartmell. The St. John's won the baseball game with Whitestone by the score of 11 to 6.

SHEEPSHEAD ON COAST.

Tropical Fish Are Finding Their Way Here in New Jersey Waters.

Sheepshead, a really game fish, which starts up the Atlantic Coast in April, have now reached the New Jersey waters and the first fish are being taken at Barnegat. An East Orange angler, Harry M. Courter, in Barnegat waters landed a fish weighing seventeen and a quarter pounds. In the same coast he hooked also a two-pound weakfish. Mr. Courter is a light-tackle enthusiast and was using linen sewing thread as a line. It required thirty minutes of play to land the fish.

Like all tropical fishes that find their way northward, the time of the sheepshead's arrival is supposed to be regulated by the temperature of the water.

Sheepshead, although sometimes taken in what may be termed out-of-the-way places, have haunts where they usually stay and where they must be sought. In the vicinity of old sunken wrecks, along the New Jersey and Long Island coasts, and along steep, sodded meadow banks, where the water is deep and the tide does not run too strong, are good places to find sheepshead.

An old green, moss covered, mussel-infested hulk near a swift tide run or swirling current is seldom ungarnished by a detachment of sheepshead mooning about the decaying ribs and spars with an uncanny affection for the desolate surroundings. An oyster bed, as well, is a common range with them, the delicate bivalves being dainty to their taste. Probably Florida and the Carolinas know them best, but Middle Atlantic anglers find many places, particularly in New Jersey, where keen enjoyment of their dashing style may be had.

Entries for White Plains Show.

The entries for the Westchester County Horse Show at White Plains, N. Y., Sept. 16, 17, 18, and 19, number over 450. This total is the largest on record for that show, and represents many candidates from prominent stables. The quality of the entries assures a fine equine display, and there will be some exciting competitions. An attractive and varied programme has been arranged for each afternoon. The events include contests for trotters, harness horses, polo ponies, saddle horses, military mounts, police horses, and jumpers. A race each for four-in-hands and tandems is down for decision, and an exhibition drill and reasoning by the Aqueduct police are also features. Saturday, the 19th, will be military day, when a number of military classes will be judged. Some of the officers at West Point will compete in the latter events, and Gen. Leonard E. Wood has been invited to be present on Saturday. Governor Glynn will attend the show Wednesday and Mayor Mitchel has also promised to be a spectator. The exhibitors of harness horses include Alfred G. Vanderbilt, William Fiegler, Jr., M. J. Dimond, Mrs. Charles T. Stout, J. Campbell Thompson, F. M. Warburg, Emil Seelig, Walter H. Stanley, Dr. F. H. Gregory, Mrs. Newspaper, and Lehman Straus. Some of the saddle horses entered are those of Walter H. Hanley, Mrs. N. J. Hoe, Miss Mercedes Crimmins, Mrs. Ogden Mills Reid, C. Donald Ingalls, Geoffrey Riegler, Miss Florence Griffin, J. A. F. Ramsdell, and Miss Vire Cornell. In the military events the accomplishments of Lieut. Benjamin C. Dean, Lieut. Alden S. Meagher, Capt. J. P. Lindsay, Capt. A. Thomas B. Clarke, Jr., Lieut. G. A. Pullen, U. S. A.; Capt. D. C. Card, U. S. A., Squadron "C" Farm, and Squadron "A" Cavalry.

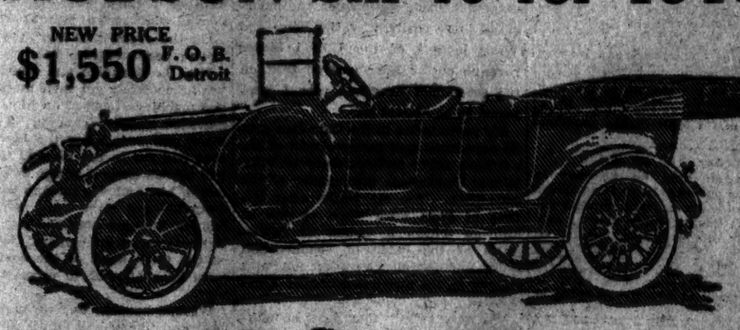
HUDSON Six-40 for 1915

NEW PRICE $1,550 F. O. B. Detroit



32 Surprises

The HUDSON Six-40 for 1915 brings out 32 surprises. And every one will be of interest to you.

There are 31 new features.

And there is a new price—by far the lowest price that has ever been quoted on any type of quality car.

The Model Six

The HUDSON Six-40 came out last year to show Howard E. Coffin's ideal in a Six.

Mr. Coffin and his corps of 47 engineers had devoted three years to the model. By clever designing and proper materials they cut out 1,000 pounds of useless weight. By a new-type motor they saved about 30 per cent. in operative cost under former cars of like capacity.

They created a car which was widely considered the handsomest car of the year. It was perfectly equipped. It had attractions which never before were found in any car at any price. That car—then priced at $1,750—made such an appeal that the factory output was 3,000 cars oversold.

A Year's Refinements

Now these HUDSON engineers have spent another year on refinements. They have added comforts and conveniences. They have improved the car in 31 important ways.

Now the HUDSON factory—to meet the demand—has trebled its capacity. And the entire saving—$200 per car—is taken from the price. The new Six-40—with all these new features—now sells at $1,550, f. o. b. Detroit.

Some 1915 Features
Distinguished streamline body.
Disappearing runnaway seats.
20-coat finish—inviable hinges.
"One-Man" top, with quick-adjusting curtains attached.
Extra tires carried ahead of front door.
Gasoline tank in dash.
Dimming searchlights.
Simplified Delco starting, lighting and ignition system.
Wiring in metal conduits.
Lock on ignition and lights.
Automatic spark advance.
Better carburetion.
Weight reduced to 2,890 lbs.

This type of car—light, handsome, economical—is the coming type of car. Nobody really doubts that. This price is all that such a car should cost.

It marks a new era in quality cars. And it ends the time when Sixes were barred to men who pay modest prices.

We want you to see this car. This new model is now here. Don't buy until you see it.

Prompt Deliveries

The surprisingly great demand for this car since its announcement July 1st has caused delays in filling immediate orders, even though every car received thus far has been shipped from Detroit by Express to facilitate its arrival in New York.

Increased factory facilities now make it possible for us to promise prompt delivery on and after September 10th, 1914.

PHILLIES BAT MATTY OUT OF BOX AND WIN

This Happens After Giants Had Won First Game with Tesreau Pitching.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Sept. 14.—New York broke even with the Phillies at the outside at National League Park today, winning the first game 2 to 1 and losing the second 10 to 6. Twelve thousand fans witnessed the battles. While the Giants were performing here Boston was busily engaged in putting one over on Brooklyn, capturing the game 4 to 3 and increasing their lead to two and one-half games.

McGraw's team was presented with the first game and Capt. Magee had charge of the ceremonies. After one man had perished in the ninth he dropped Martin's perfect throw, giving Grant a life at first base. Merkle lifted an easy fly to Martin, which should have retired the side. Then came a base on balls and three singles in a row, which netted two runs, both of them unearned.

E. Burns assisted Mr. Magee when he tendered New York the winning counter in the next inning. He buried the ball into left field in an effort to catch Robertson off third base and Robertson scored.

McGraw made a heroic attempt to make a clean sweep for the day when he started Mathewson against Mayer in the second game. The Phillies' twirler had been knocked out of the box in four innings Saturday, and it looked like easy pickings. The tables were turned, however, and Matty got one of the worst lacings in his long career. He lasted only three innings, and seven runs crossed the pan. Marty O'Toole succeeded him in the fourth and held the home folks to three hits and three runs in the six innings he worked.

Mathewson got in bad in the second inning when Bancroft hit Paskert on the shoulder in an effort to get him at first base, and the ball sounded into right field. Both runners scored. Grant was stamped to third before the ball was recovered. On Deola's grounder Bancroft was nipped at the plate. With Paskert on third and Doolan at first a double steal was worked successfully. Paskert scored.

Matty hung up the flag of distress in the third, but his teammates allowed him to sink for the third time while they were giving a correct impersonation of a cuss in the fifth. Two hits, a single, a double, a sacrifice fly, and an error shoved six perfectly good runs across the plate, and ten batsmen faced the baseless veteran. Lobert opened with a hit to left. Harris's fly to Grant got under Baker's high foul. Capt. Magee, who found Matty for a triple in the first, rapped out a double to the right field fence, and Lobert scored. Up stepped Cravath and Magee, playing safe, stopped at third, and counted on Mayer's grounder to get him home. Lobert made the slaughter when he sliced to Mathewson.

Three doubles gave New York two runs in the fifth. Robertson opened the inning by bouncing the ball against the wall. Fletcher fanned for two outs, and scored when Grant sent a two-bagger into the same territory. Not to be outdone, Merkle walloped one in the same place, scoring Grant. Two men died on the runway when his teammates failed to deliver.

The Phillies grabbed another marker in the sixth. After two had perished, Lobert walked and scored on Paskert's triple. New York added another run in the seventh on Robertson's single and Merkle's double. Three hits and a base on balls gave them one more in the eighth.

The Giants put over a young batting rally in the ninth and succeeded in working two runs across before the trouble was over. Merkle filled to Paskert and Thomas batting for Johnson, who had taken Becker's place, walked, and Snodgrass singled. The "Chief" scored on Doyle's single and Snodgrass went to third. Burns hit one to Martin that Magee's foot was off the bag and the runner was safe, while Snodgrass scored. Fletcher ended it all by grounding to Martin.

The Phillies tossed the opening game away. New York grabbing three runs through two errors. Grant, Chief got many men on base, but it took several misplays to get them across the pan. Although thirteen men perished on the bases, they should have been blanked, as Magee's muff and Burns's wild throw allowed the only scores to come in.

Nothing happened until the sixth. Robertson was thrown out by Martin. Grant hit an easy one to short, and Tesreau popped to Bancroft. Three men on. Merkle popped to Martin, which should have retired the side. Meyers walked and Snodgrass singled, scoring Grant, the Chief came home with the second on Doyle's out.

The Phillies evened things up in their half. E. Burns grounded to Merkle, Tesreau singled to left. Robertson lost Lobert's high fly in the sun, but recovered the ball in time to force Tesreau at second. Becker and Magee walked. Cravath singled to centre, scoring Lobert and Becker.

The Giants won the game in the next frame. Robertson singled, went to second on Grant's out, and took third on Merkle's safety. In an effort to catch Robertson off third, E. Burns muled the ball, and Robertson scored. Grant went to second on the play. Meyers walked, filling the bases, and Snodgrass singled, scoring Grant and Merkle. Doyle ended the rally by grounding to Martin.

Red Sox Divide with Senators.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Washington and Boston divided a double-header today, the home team taking the first game, 9 to 1, and the Red Sox winning the second, 2 to 0.

Washington scored three runs in the first inning of the first game on three hits and a sacrifice fly, got another in the second on a single, a stolen base, and an error, and scored four in the fourth on two singles, a double, and two errors. Boston's run came in the eighth inning off Boehling in a double play, and a sacrifice fly.

The visitors broke into the game for the first run this coming in the third inning on Dalton's double to left centre. Dauborn's sacrifice, and a clean steal to left field by Strunk.

The visitors other scores were not made until after Boston had opened up a 4-to-3 lead in the fifth. In this memorable ground, four Boston hits were mixed favorably with a base on balls, and five sacrifice hits. Smith walked for a starter, and Maranville proceeded to beat out a bunt toward first base. Gowdy then caused Smith with a hit to centre, and Maranville trotted home when Rudolph hit to left. Mann bunted and Gowdy went to third on Pfeffer's play to first. Whitted's long fly to right centre brought Hank home. Then with two out, Connolly hit to left centre, and Rudolph scored.

In the seventh Brooklyn got two runs, but had small chance for more. McCarty hit too fast for Red Smith, and at once beat them on Olson-Hitter-Myers play to right field.

Rudolph was nicked for a single and slipped one to Smith, but Gowdy made a mess of things at the plate and Myers scored. Then Rudolph settled down and fanned both Daubert and Stengel.

Two interesting players were with Mickey Welsh and Tim Keefe, two of New York's most picturesque ball players of the old days. The scores:

Cubs Hit Pirate Pitchers Hard.

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—National League baseball closed its Chicago season today with a 7-to-4 victory for the locals over Pittsburgh. McQuillan was hit hard during the three innings he performed upon the mound, and Chicago scored four runs. Pitcher Adams, who relieved him, was also hit for the same quantity of the locals, scored the run which won the game in the fourth, and when he batted Mamaux for a triple and scored on Saier's single, the Pittsburgh pitcher was sent to the showers, while Adams was succeeded by Cooper. Mamaux, Pierce and Blankenship, Manager Clarke of Pittsburgh was ordered to the clubhouse in the ninth, and a sacrifice fly, pitcher to pitcher, was executed by Cooper and Adams, officiated by the decisions of Umpire Byron.

Trust Company's Field Day.

The employes of the Broadway Trust Company will hold their annual field day at Midland Park, Great Neck, L. I., on Saturday. The athletic events for which valuable prizes have been donated are 100-yard dash, one-yard run, three-legged race, and one-mile relay race. For which new boat offered a handsome prize. The winning team will be awarded to the branch office having the fleetest quartet. A baseball game has been arranged, which will be played with teams made up of the officers of each branch on one side and the clerks from the offices on the opposing side.

BRAVES STAGGER IN FIELDING, BUT WIN

Their Batting, However, Is Timely, and Brooklyn Is Overthrown in One Inning.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 14.—The Superbas were unable to offer any help to the Giants today and failed to come through with another victory over the Braves, losing by 4 to 3, the reverse of Saturday's score. Robbie's men served as a stepping stone to return Boston to its two-and-a-half-game lead. Except in one inning the Dodgers held the home team scoreless, but in the Braves' fifth Pfeffer was hit to all corners of the lot, and with four runs to their credit the Braves had just the amount needed.

The Boston Club again played loosely in the field, but got away with it. On the other hand its hitting was of the most timely order, and in the inning in which scoring was done the club showed a world of speed.

Dick Rudolph went the entire distance for the home team, being hit safely eight times, which was the amount of damage the Braves did against the Brooklyn flingers Pfeffer, Regan, and Allen. All the runs, however, were scored against Pfeffer.

The visitors broke into the game for the first run this coming in the third inning on Dalton's double to left centre. Dauborn's sacrifice, and a clean steal to left field by Strunk.

The visitors other scores were not made until after Boston had opened up a 4-to-3 lead in the fifth. In this memorable ground, four Boston hits were mixed favorably with a base on balls, and five sacrifice hits. Smith walked for a starter, and Maranville proceeded to beat out a bunt toward first base. Gowdy then caused Smith with a hit to centre, and Maranville trotted home when Rudolph hit to left. Mann bunted and Gowdy went to third on Pfeffer's play to first. Whitted's long fly to right centre bringing Hank home. Then with two out, Connolly hit to left centre, and Rudolph scored.

In the seventh Brooklyn got two runs, but had small chance for more. McCarty hit too fast for Red Smith, and at once beat them on Olson-Hitter-Myers play to right field.

Rudolph was nicked for a single and slipped one to Smith, but Gowdy made a mess of things at the plate and Myers scored. Then Rudolph settled down and fanned both Daubert and Stengel.

Two interesting players were with Mickey Welsh and Tim Keefe, two of New York's most picturesque ball players of the old days. The scores:

Pennant for Vancouver Club.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 14.—This season's pennant of the Northwestern Baseball League formally was awarded to Vancouver here tonight.

Bright Prospects for Leonard.

What Billy Gibson is sincere in the belief that Benny Leonard, whom he is managing, will be fighting for the title in the lightweight class within another year, is indicated by the plans he is making for Benny's immediate future. Gibson is endeavoring to match Leonard and Jack Britton for a bout at a special night at the Stadium Club in Boston. When he also proposes to stage a contest between Jim Flynn, the "Pueblo Fireman," and Al Reich, former national amateur heavyweight champion. Meanwhile Leonard has a difficult task on hand, for tomorrow night at the Stadium Club he is booked to box Joe Thomas, the clever New Orleans lightweight. Thomas recently defeated Johnny Lore, and appears capable also of even chance. At least of treating Leonard likewise. In another bout tomorrow night Young Brown, who showed his true worth in victory when he defeated Artie Cotter on Saturday night, will oppose Kid Burns.

COLLINS UPSETS YANKEES.

Eddie's Two-Bagger in Ninth Results in Athletics Winning.

A slight hit of a hit by "Stuffy" McInnis in the ninth stanza of yesterday's game at the Polo Grounds showed the greatest baseball player in the world, Eddie Collins, over the plate with the run which beat the Yankees by the score of 2 to 1. Even if Frank Chance is discussed over his club, he was out on the coaching line, urging his boys in a deep baritone voice to trim the Athletics if they could. Well, they couldn't.

Lots of times during a season the Yanks hit pretty but with a crowd like the world's champs they seldom win. The game was tied right up to the last minute yesterday, but that didn't help much with a wrecker like H. Trowbridge Collins at large.

Take, for instance, that last inning. Eddie Collins, who up to this time had hardly made a bruise on the ball, cracked a two-bagger to right field. Home Run "John F." Baker of Trappe, Md., came in the back and the whole crowd of a few yokels in the park held their breath. New Yorkers have acquired the habit of holding their breath when Baker comes to bat. He took a healthy swing at the ball and from every intention of ripping it into his favorite spot in the right-field stand. Lute Cook, however, had the right dope and backed against the wall while he pulled down the drive. Mitty caught.

Collins, perched at second, last me time and nimbly scooted to third. That sort of thing is quite easy for a lad so fleet of foot as Eddie. McInnis then sent a hounder right at the Vernon schoolmaster, Rube Fisher. Ray ran in on the ball, gathering it up quickly as Collins scooted down the third-base line. The greatest player in the world—that is, Collins—had the pitcher beaten to the plate anyway. That's one of the reasons why he is the "world's greatest."

Fisher, in relaying the ball to Swenger, pitched it right into the waiting mitt. Each contestant, Collins and Swenger, scored the winning run without any interference of the slightest sort.

This game was a rather neat pitching battle between Bob Shawkey and Fisher. Each possessed tangents which were difficult to solve. New and weird twists were dispensed, regardless of the consequences, and as a result each side got few hits.

The Athletics took the lead in the second inning, when Baker banged a single to right. McInnis laid down a sacrifice, and then Amos Strunk poked a bang to centre, sheeting Baker over the plate from second. The Athletics were satisfied with this slight portion of scoring until the eighth. Then Rube Oldring, formerly a member of the Polo Grounds Wreckers, smashed a beauty hit to left centre for three cushions. Charley Mullen toiled hard to help the cause, but the best he could do was to strike out.

Capt. Roger Peckinpaugh, however, had some heart, and lofted a rocket to left which scored Daley with the tying run. Shawkey held until the ninth, when Eddie Collins made himself prominent. If such a thing is possible.

One of the most decorative pieces of landscape fielding which has been staged in the Polo Grounds this season or any season was executed by this same Collins in the eighth canto. It was this way: With two gone, Pratt trailed Baker's stinger toward second. Collins started to fight the ball the same as him. It was a repulsive pounder, one which many a player wouldn't even tip his cap to. Not so Collins.

He wrestled with the said ball as it tried to avoid him. He had to leave the earth entirely to reach it. While in the air in midair Eddie turned early and shot the ball at McInnis. When Collins got back to the lawn the ball was resting peacefully in first baseman Mitt and Maisel was out—and good enough.

A play not easily put past. The score:

NEW YORK, TUESDAY, SEPT. 15, 1914.

NOW THAT THE PEOPLE RULE.

Whether the direct primary is in all respects a good thing or not, it has already had one effect which is wholly beneficial. It has proved to be a great engine for the exploding of fictions, the withering of claptrap, the annihilation of bosh. Prior to its appearance in the political system everything that went wrong was saddled on the malign head who straddled the neck of the virtuous and groaning voter and made all his good intentions go astray. An invisible government, bi-partisan and commercial, ruled; the honest voter wanted only pure government, but his will was always thwarted; if in his despair he threw off the yoke of one machine, it was only to fall under the heel of another. Free him, and the desert of machine politics would blossom as the rose; the corrupt boss would be ground into the dust by an emancipated and unterrified electorate.

Well, the voter has been freed. He can expel the children of darkness from power and raise the children of light in their places. In Illinois it was the corrupt invisible government, ever defeating the will of the voter, that sent LORIMER to the Senate; and now in Illinois the intelligent and emancipated voter has given 60,000 plurality to ROGER C. SULLIVAN, a boss who can say to LORIMER, "Thou art my slave." By a majority of three to one he has nominated Uncle Joe CANNON, the stiffest-necked reactionary that ever scolded the uplift; and all the 916 Republican sons of Belial, from McKINLEY to ROOSEVELT, have been nominated overwhelmingly. In Pennsylvania the emancipated voter has renominated PENROSE, and nowhere has the voter impressively defeated any of the children of darkness, save in Ohio, and even there PORAKER was defeated by a hardened old engineer of the ancient Foraker organization, and not by one of the truly good.

The Chicago Tribune, which still holds to the belief that the direct primary is a means to better government, says: "If ROGER C. SULLIVAN were the nominee of a Democratic State Convention a protest would mount to the skies from Metropolis to Belvedere against such betrayal of the plain people." But, as The Tribune admits, "the plain people seem to have done it." What is the answer? Are we to abase our heads to the dust and admit that the plain people are worse than the men who formerly made their nominations for them? No; but to confess rather cheerfully that the men who formerly made the nominations were not so much worse, after all, than the plain people; to rejoice in moderation that an immense amount of cant and humbug has been swept into the ashheap, and to take considerable comfort in the fact that during a century we were not ensnared under the heels of a corrupt and clandestine set of grafters, but just average human beings represented in conventions and Legislatures by men pretty much like ourselves. The direct primary has not, so far, made things any worse. Neither has it made them any better. Under any system we shall vary, but a Government of citizens until we become cherubs outdoor.

THE BILL OF LADING TAX.

The President rejected the income tax, and the tax upon the movement of freight over the railways was substituted. Upon this sequence of events rests the statement that the President approves the absorption of shippers' money for the benefit of the Government instead of the railways. The supporters of the proposed tax are trying to relieve their embarrassment by embarrassing the President. The fact is that they are more embarrassed than the sponsors of the income tax. Unmistakably the country is with the President in his position that the railroads shall be helped through their troubles. He is the last man to be asked to support the contrary position, and the recantation of his letter is likely to make him puff in his repudiation of what it is sought to father upon him.

There is an easy escape from the political dilemma which it is sought to superpose upon the tax dilemma. The Washington antagonists are trying to create a situation in which the candidates at the approaching election must either oppose the President or support an unpopular measure. Therefore it is proposed to hold a Democratic caucus to enable undemocratic Representatives to dig a pit for the Democratic President. It will be easier and better to drop the tax, with the President's assistance. The situation then would be reversed. Democrats would support the President in opposition to the tax and there would be no embarrassment except for those seeking to embarrass the President.

The fact is that Congress has "muffed the ball" about taxation in general and the railways in particular as badly as the Interstate Commerce Commission itself. Congress is not to be blamed for failure to discover a tax which somebody wants to pay. It is to be blamed for avoidance of tried and proved ways of raising taxes for temporary emergencies in favor of new-fangled notions more burdensome to the country than the taxes themselves. After years of labor the Interstate Commission learned that the railways were entitled to larger revenues, but could not make up its mind to let them get the money in their own way. The Commission was as much in love with its own ways as Congress itself. But what the Commission decided after laborious and expert inquiry a few Representatives oversset without any inquiry whatever.

The few casual suggestions put forward in defense of the tax are made to seem absurd by those who know that the effect upon trade would be different from what the proposers of the tax expect. The tax is bad in itself, and it is bad politics. Its fate lies with the President. He can kill it with a nod, with advantage to himself. But his support cannot resuscitate it, and would damage both his party and himself. A clearer case could hardly be presented for veto before introduction, in the new manner of legislation.

THE LAST FORTY-NINER.

JAMES B. HAGGIN, who has just died in his ninety-second year, was one of the last, perhaps the very last, of the illustrious band of forty-niners, pioneers of California, who acquired large fortunes in the development of gold mines which had been dormant during the centuries of Indian and Spanish occupation. It cannot be said that Mr. HAGGIN was precisely of the forty-niner type; he was not a hardy adventurer, he did not carve his fortune out of the rocks with a pick, but gained his foothold in the new country through his skill and experience in legal practice. He was a Kentuckian and had practiced law in his native State and in the far South before he hung up his shingle in the gold mining region, and he acquired the foundation of his fortune in fees obtained in the adjustment of property rights. All that he made he shrewdly invested, and his ventures in gold lands and copper mines during a long term of years made him one of the wealthiest men of his time.

His share in the protracted fight, against short-sighted opposition, to secure irrigation for the San Joaquin Valley is well remembered, and in later years as a breeder of thoroughbred horses he achieved memorable triumphs on the turf with Ben Ali and Firenze. All that he did was done on a large scale, his ranches and stock farms were the largest, his hop plantations the most fertile and extensive, his horses among the fastest, his homes palaces. He was liberal and popular.

His death may be said to close a noteworthy and most interesting chapter in American history. The era of the argonauts has departed. Fortunes as vast as his are not to be gained hereafter in this country as he gained his. There is no more buried treasure to make Monte Cristos of daring men with alert minds. There was just enough of mystery in the origin of Mr. HAGGIN, in the tales of his strain of Turkish or Arab blood, to enhance the glamour of his career. Take him all in all, he was an eminent American, one in whom his fellow-citizens could take honest pride.

THE NEW YORK CITY SIXES.

"On what terms can you offer us [New York] city notes and warrants?" is an inquiry cabled to this country yesterday from a source capable of absorbing them in multiples of millions. It is a ray of light through a situation which must not be thought solved because it has been undertaken by those capable of solving it. The 6s of New York City are a part of security which will not go begging. They must be paid for all the same, and the money to pay for them is not going anywhere just now. The call for the cash is not pressing at the moment. The demand will be spread over months, and it will be felt when it is made. For that reason any subscriptions outside the New York City banking circle would be doubly welcome.

This city has already found $125,000,000 gold for export upon the country's account. It now obligates itself to export $80,000,000 more on its own account, at a time when there is a deficiency in banking reserves. Individual banks have obligated themselves to take several millions apiece in numerous cases. In most cases the amount is smaller. In all cases the 6s cannot be taken as a banking investment without a reduction of loans or sold as a private investment without a reduction of deposits. And this must be accomplished in the face of competition. The sales now contain offerings of attractive 6 per cents of American cities being privately offered in anticipation of the New York City offering, and clearly in competition with it. There will be others. Not much weight need be attached to yesterday's report of a German national loan here at 5 per cent., and at a discount of 2½ per cent. Germans individually might take a moderate portion for reasons of patriotism, but there can be no general American participation.

The surest sign that the offerings of New York City or other borrowers would be successful would be the restoration of the banking reserves in this city. There can be no reduction of interest rates here while there is a deficit of bank reserves, and there must be a deficit so long as New York is losing gold as it did yesterday. Five millions were sent to Ottawa on the New York City operation. It is no more than New York ought to have done, and it will benefit New York. It will benefit the country as well. It will even measurably relieve international finance through the exchange market. In particular the example of New York may be commended to those American banking centres that are drawing gold from banks and the Treasury, and remitting emergency currency upon their obligations to New York. The Clearing House has protested against this practice, and its results are justification of the protest. If New York is to pay it must be paid, unless a dislocation of domestic exchange is to be invited. Until the Federal Reserve system is started this city's banking reserves are the nation's, and their restoration is an object of concern and of advantage to every other banking centre.

GERMAN DEMOCRACY.

In his very able apology for the German Government in the present crisis Dr. DERNBURG places much emphasis on the fact that the Reichstag voted unanimously the necessary laws and credits, as he is clearly entitled to. The action of the Reichstag throws a good deal of responsibility on the party leaders. But when he says that "the German people are represented "as directly and democratically in the "Government as the American people "are in theirs" he neglects one important element.

Though the suffrage is based on the principle of "one man one vote," and "is universal, direct, and secret," the value of some votes is many times greater than that of others. The present distribution of seats dates from 1871, when the unit of representation was fixed at one member for 100,000 inhabitants. The population was then 40,000,000, and the number of members was 397. That number remains the same, while the population is now 66,000,000. In the forty-three years' interval great changes have taken place; manufacturing has largely replaced agriculture; large towns and great cities have grown much faster than the farming districts. Some years since Mr. W. H. DAWSON called attention to the fact that 851,000 voters in Greater Berlin returned 8 members. The same number of voters in small constituencies returned 48. In the little State of Schaumberg-Lippe 9,500 electors chose one member; in Teltow-Buskow, near Berlin, twenty-six times as many voters had but one member. In 1907 20 Conservative members had an average of 10,500 constituents, while six Social Democrats had an average of 77,500. With such gross and unjustifiable inequalities it is hardly permissible to say that the German people—even within the narrow powers of the Reichstag—are represented "democratically."

THE OUTLOOK FOR MEXICAN PEACE.

In spite of the irreconcilable prophets of evil, who remain convinced that peace cannot be assured in Mexico without the iron rule of a dictator or the armed intervention of the United States, either one of which seems as reasonable now as the other, the authentic advices from the City of Mexico, not from the bureaus of the mischiefmakers, continue to encourage the belief that the Mexicans have ample capacity to work out their own salvation, to establish a workable Government, and to live peacefully. When CARRANZA has solved all the preliminary problems, which it seems he is taking up with prudence and understanding, the Government will be Mexican, and so will the manner of living. There will be no fat places for foreign adventurers, and there will be no dishonest traffic in concessions.

That honest foreign investors will always be welcomed there is no reason to doubt. The tale of bloody outbreaks at the capital has been disproved, the reports that VILLA was ready to take the field against his former chief have been shown to be without foundation, and the alarming rumors of the things ZAPATA intended to do disappear with the reasonable assurance that he will do nothing. The causes of ZAPATA's discontent will be removed with the passage of equitable land laws. The institution of a just land tax would soon restore Mexican finances and go far toward the solution of the agrarian problem.

HOW WE KEPT THE PEACE.

Why should the plan to celebrate a century of peace between the two branches of the English-speaking race be deferred on account of the war in Europe in which one of them is involved? Certainly the blessing of peace will not seem less because of the conflict raging. If that conflict be not stayed before next Christmas Eve—the centennial of the signing of the Treaty of Ghent—it will be all the more appropriate that we and our British brothers shall call the attention of the world to the wonderful benefits that have followed the long uninterrupted reign of peace between us, and, so far as may be, to its causes.

It cannot be denied that in that long interval there have been deep-seated differences, and most serious occasions for quarreling, or that we have approached to the very verge of hostilities. The two gravest crises arose out of the Alabama claims and the case of Venezuela. The settlement of the first was made possible by the courageous and wise action of President LINCOLN's Government in the Aukman of 1861 in the Trent affair, when, putting aside pride and passion, and disregarding the heated sentiment of the country, a high rule of the rights of neutrals was firmly established by the frank admission that we had violated it and were ready to make amends. Without that magnanimous concession, the peaceful adjustment of the Alabama question would, in all likelihood, have been hopeless.

In the Venezuela matter the position of our Government was not less unusual and impressive. Mr. CLEVELAND made a bold stand for the principle of arbitration. No interest of our own was advanced beyond that which we had in securing justice for a neighbor country within the legitimate sphere of our influence. Nor was any claim of that neighbor indorsed. We simply insisted that her claims and her rights should not be decided by Great Britain alone, but should be submitted to impartial arbitration. In the light of previous history it was an amazing demand, and was at first so treated by the British Government. But in the end that Government recognized its essential justice. By the settlement that followed the bonds of peace between that nation and our own and the cause of general peace were greatly strengthened.

The celebration of the peace centenary will assuredly lead to the eager discussion of these and other like elements in the history of the last hundred years and cannot but make a profound impression upon all candid minds throughout the civilized world.

PEACE IN EUROPE

Should Be Conditioned on the Creation of an International Court.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The President has invited us to pray for peace, but, fortunately, he has given us well on toward a month to get our prayers ready. By that time perhaps the nations will have reached a point in their blood-letting where pity, even self-pity, will have displaced the choler that plunged them into war, and perhaps then by a concert of weaknesses they can agree to a constructive programme. Let the United States do all it can to bring about peace, but let the good offices of this nation be conditioned upon the willingness of the quitters to quit for good and all. The immeasurable horrors and destruction that come from readiness to fight are so vivid to the whole world just now that the making of peace offers an opportunity for a masterstroke, if the peacemaker is ready to lay down the terms.

The world cannot afford to pay the awful price of this war without getting the benefit of it. If the surviving soldiers are sent to the farms and factories, and the standing armies disbanded, the economic losses of the war can soon be made good and the countries all become richer than ever. So let peace be conditioned upon the establishment of an international federation supported by an international court and a land and naval police. Peace is hardly worth while if the nations are to go sulking back to their camps and fortresses to recuperate as best they may and begin the fight all over again at some future time.

DELOS F. WILCOX.

New York, Sept. 13, 1914.

War's Industrial Effects.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Curious how far-reaching are the effects of the war. For instance, I was told by a man who furnished hundreds of bales of salt hay, cut on the marshes along the Jersey coast and used for packing bottles for foreign shipment of a certain product in large casks, that not a blade of salt hay is now wanted. And in a remote region of Kentucky a wood alcohol distillery is shut down because one of the by-products—acetate of lime—has all been sent to Germany in the past. Now it is loaded on cars and they can't be moved. And this is probably the case with all wood alcohol factories in the country. They can sell the charcoal here, but acetate of lime has been practically all taken by Germany.

"White Papers" Used in Schoolroom

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Kindly accept my congratulations on your publication of the "White Papers" of England and Germany. From my educational point of view I value them not only because they afford a source of study for placing the responsibility for the outbreak of this war, but also because they reveal so clearly the manner of diplomatic intercourse between nations. I have in my school a room fitted as a private study where the boys may wait before the morning and afternoon periods. On a large table in this room are things of interest to a boy at such intervals, such as large photographs of foreign scenes, stereoscopic pictures, illustrated magazines, &c. I also have a scrap book of war news, mostly from THE NEW YORK TIMES, and a large portfolio containing your Sunday Illustrated Supplement war pictures, and your two-week pictorial war sets. Through these means the boys unconsciously enlarge their horizon. I am glad now to add to these the "White Papers."

Widowed Mother Lacks Rent.

When their father died of pneumonia after an illness of only two days, three little children, two, six, and seven years of age, were left to the sole care of their mother. Five months after his death another little girl was born. The mother had been a steady worker and a good husband, but they had saved nothing. The funeral expenses and accumulated debts consumed all but $120 of the insurance, and the balance is now exhausted. The room was filled as well among his fellow-employes that $60 was collected among them of his decease. Relatives assist a little with clothing, but are unable to do more. The woman is working regularly now at a nursery in a child's hospital doing laundry work, at which she earns $20 a month and is given two meals a day. This income provides for all of her needs but the rent. The society now asks for $60 to cover this item during the coming year.

Gifts may be sent to the office of the society, 105 East Twenty-second Street.

The society acknowledges with thanks the following contributions sent in response to previous appeals in THE TIMES:

A Wagner, $1; Mrs. Lily L. Bank, $2; "A Sympathizer," N. Y., $2; $2; Mrs. L. H. Gray, $5; "C. H.," $1; "Mrs. M. S. D.," $50; Henry Bischofsheimer, $1; "Mabel and Baby," $5; "Widow's Sum," $11; "Cash," $1.

THE KAISER'S POWERS.

Constitution Gives Him a Deciding Voice in All Military Affairs.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Dr. Dernburg's clever article in THE TIMES was remarkable chiefly for what he subtly omitted to say. He stated, for example, that the Kaiser may not declare war without the consent of the Bundesrat except where German territory has been attacked. He neglected to state that the Kaiser is himself the judge in determining whether such an attack has been made. Hence the report that a French aëroplane had dropped bombs on Nürnberg would legally justify the Kaiser in declaring war without reference to the Federal Council. As a matter of fact, the Federal Council throughout its entire history has been the creature of the Kaiser. Appointing and controlling twenty (rather than seventeen) of its members, he needs but ten more votes to secure the absolute majority. Such a majority the present Kaiser has never failed to obtain. The fact that only fourteen votes in the Federal Council are necessary to defeat an amendment to the Imperial Constitution is indicative of the powerful control of the Kaiser over the political growth of Germany.

Again, Dr. Dernburg states that under Article 66 of the Constitution the powers of appointment and promotion in the German Army belong to the heads of the several States, and that consequently the absolute disposition of the army passes on to the Kaiser only in case of war. Dr. Dernburg evidently overlooked Article 64 of the Constitution, which reads as follows:

> The chief commanding officers of a division, as well as all officers who command troops of more than one division, and all commandants of fortresses shall be appointed by the Kaiser. The appointment of Generals and of officers performing the duties of Generals is in each case dependent on the consent of the Kaiser.

Article 66, to which Dr. Dernburg refers, gives to the heads of the separate States the right to appoint the officers of their divisions "subject to the restrictions of Article 64." This Dr. Dernburg evidently overlooked. In other words, Article 66 relates only to inferior officers.

As a matter of fact, the Kaiser has absolute command over the forces of the entire German Army, both in peace and in war. Article 63 of the Constitution specifically so states, and adds:

> The Kaiser shall determine the numerical strength, the organization, and the divisional contingents of the imperial army as well as the organization of the national guard.

Under this section it is further made his right and duty to see that "the divisions of the troops are in full muster and fit for war throughout the whole German Army. To this end the Kaiser has the authority to satisfy himself at any time, by inspection, of the condition of the several contingents and to order the abolition of any defects thereby found."

Hardly less accurate is Dr. Dernburg's reference to the Reichstag as a "modern legislative assembly. It is true that suffrage in Germany rests on a comparatively broad basis. At the same time the system of "rotten boroughs" obtaining in Germany is fairly comparable with the system existing in England a hundred years ago. Since 1871 there has been no redistricting of the empire, and the populations comprising the various constituencies have been grossly uneven. Berlin, with more than 2,000,000 people, is entitled to but six seats, and the proportion in other great cities, and particularly in the more radical industrial centres, is as flagrant. A comparison of twelve of the most populous districts represented in the Reichstag with twelve of the least populous shows that 170,000 voters elect as many representatives as 1,950,000 voters do. The long fight for the redistribution of seats has been defeated by the Kaiser's Government because of its fear of a radical element in the Reichstag.

Similarly, Dr. Dernburg is inaccurate in the impression that he gives as to the freedom of the Reichstag to pass legislation. It cannot assemble on its own initiative or take up its work on its own motion. Under Article 24 of the Constitution the Kaiser may dissolve it at any time or for any reason, an action which has frequently been taken since 1871. Twice it has been dissolved for refusing to pass bills increasing the size of the army. In every case in which it has been dissolved the new Reichstag succeeding it has obediently supported the plans of the Kaiser.

NO "RACE TREACHERY."

England's Kinship with France More Close Than with Germany.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

One of the main grievances of the German sympathizers in this war seems to be the "race treachery of England." England has betrayed her brother the Teuton!

The Germanophiles, with characteristic historical inaccuracy, seems to neglect the fact that England and France are almost identical as far as race is concerned. The basis of both countries is the Celt, whom we still find in England in Wales and in France in Brittany. The Celt was next blended with the Roman, during the Roman conquests of Gaul and Britain—then with the German, during the Germanic invasions. True, the Roman conquest had but little effect in England, but to counteract this we have the Norman conquest, which laid an indelible stamp on the British people and language. The Teuton is scarce more than a second cousin to the English, whereas the French is a brother in race, language, and ideals.

Let us have done with this talk of "race treachery!"

A Way to End Militarism.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you please be kind enough to explain in your paper to the American people why it would be better for the human race to have England win this war than to have Germany win?

I read your paper every day, but can't make head or tail out of the situation, nor does anybody else seem to know. All you hear people say is, "I hope Germany wins" or "I hope England wins." Why not have some reason?

To my mind it would be a good policy if Sir Edward Grey of England should declare that no peace treaty would be signed unless it contained the provision that all compulsory military service must be abolished. A statement to this effect would sweep the sentiment of the world in his favor. No peace treaty will be or any value that does not limit the huge standing armies of Europe.

The Times's War Rotogravures.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wish to express my appreciation of the fine rotogravure supplement of war pictures issued last Wednesday, particularly the excellent reproduction of "The Conquerors." Just after you first issued this in the Sunday TIMES, I wrote expressing the hope that you would repeat the picture in the rotogravure process and, while my suggestion may have had nothing to do with it, I am very much gratified to have such a fine copy.

ZAPATA WANTS ARMISTICE.

If Granted He Will Send Delegates to Treat with Carranza.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 14.—An envoy from Gen. Zapata, now in this city proposes an immediate armistice. If this is granted, Zapata agrees to send three delegates to the capital, amply empowered to conclude an arrangement with the Government.

The death of Rosendo Pineda, who belonged to the so-called Cientifico group, occurred in this city last night. Pineda was staying at the house of friends.

Acting Foreign Minister Favela called at the Brazilian Legation this afternoon and conferred at length with the Brazilian Minister, who represents American interests in Mexico. It is believed the American occupation of Vera Cruz was discussed.

The newly appointed acting Minister of Justice, Manuel Escudero y Verduco, did not take the oath of office today. It is expected the ceremony will take place tomorrow.

Ricardo Romero Valencia, the chauffeur who drove the automobile containing President Madero the night he was assassinated, has been arrested, not as a principal but as a witness, as it is believed he can throw new light on the crime.

ADMIRAL FUJII SENTENCED.

Japanese Officer to Prison for Four Years for Bribery.

TOKIO, Sept. 14.—Vice-Admiral Kaichi Fujii, who was accused of bribery in connection with the naval corruption case, has been sentenced to imprisonment for four years and six months.

He was at one time Naval Attaché at Berlin and was ordered before a court-martial last February. It was alleged that he received illicit commissions for influencing the allotment of Admiralty contracts in favor of a German firm.

BICHLORIDE OF MERCURY.

New York's Successful Law Will Be Introduced in Other States.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Deaths from bichloride of mercury poisoning have been steadily decreasing as a result of the enactment of the ordinance prohibiting the sale of the tablets without a doctor's prescription. The records which I have collected from the Coroner's offices of the five boroughs from June 1 to Sept. 1, 1914, show an encouraging decrease. During this period there were nine deaths in New York City due to mercury poisoning, eight of which were suicides and only one accidental. This is three less accidental deaths than occurred during the same period last year. Four of the suicides were in Manhattan, three in the Bronx, and one in Brooklyn. The one accidental death was in Manhattan.

I expect the number of deaths to be still lower during the next three months, because when the regulation took effect many persons had a supply of bichloride in their homes, and when this stock is exhausted the danger will be lessened, as the drug cannot be obtained easily under the new law. The satisfactory result of this regulation in New York will prompt many States to take action, and bills will be introduced at the next session of the Legislature in New Jersey, Massachusetts, and Illinois.

Bichloride of mercury tablets must now be made in a distinctive shape and color, and it is almost impossible for any one to take them by mistake.

War Editorial Articles.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

To one who, as a lecturer on current events, must read a number of journals every day, there is great satisfaction in the high tone with which you are discussing the European situation. I wish that even a larger number of Americans might avail of the educational value of your editorials, especially such an one as that on "The Peril of German Militarism" or on "The Truth About Germany."

JOHN J. HALSEY.

Lake Forest, Ill., Sept. 9, 1914.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I cannot refrain from sending a word to express my deep satisfaction in your chief editorial in THE TIMES of Sept. 7 in reply to the book written by Germans "explaining the war" to Americans. Your editorial is so strong, forcible, clear, and just that if any eyes are yet blinded as to the causes of this war they must, if they see this article, be opened.

What the Germans never succeed in "explaining" is why, if Russia was such a great danger, they turned their backs upon that country and went with speed to invade Belgium and France.

This was shown the world Germany as she is, and the world can be deceived no longer. Your paper is our mainstay in this time of trouble.

LILLA C. WHEELER.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I cannot resist thanking you for your editorial on "The Truth About Germany" in your issue of Sept. 7. It is simply perfect, as was also one recently on "A Scrap of Paper," and many others too numerous to mention.

Soft Hats vs. Derbies.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your suggestion favoring "a society for the restoration of the 'derby hat'" has a strong dissenter in myself. As a young man of twenty-seven, with prematuring hair, I will always cling tenaciously to the good soft hats with drab bands and bows and bolls of the gentleman not disinclined to "mutt" I am told.

Your editorials about the war are universally praised and will always be remembered. It is surprising to see you fall down on the subject of hats.

THE NIGHT OF THE DOG.

That night the moon was pale,
Pale as with death or fear;
And hush, not sleep, prevailed.
Yet all the skies were clear,
Save for a million stars—
A host of camp fires on a mighty field.
Where Strife howled all night, till Mars
Arose in madness mailed!

That night the moon grew red,
Reflecting distant fire.
Low on the horizon flashed
Chain lightning, mounting higher,
Outlining one great cloud,
Shaped like a hideous beast with bloody jaws;
From whose hoarse throat, sudden and loud,
A roar like thunder crashed!

That night's despairing moon
Hid her pure face from shame.
Her brow with cloud-drift stained.
Each star-fire's twinkling flame
Dimmed and went out, as though
Powers of Darkness conquered Legions of Light!
And in the bloodshot heavens—lo!
The war-dog was unchained!

No more the lovers' moon,
Nor e'en the sun's frank light!
The red-eyed fury's pace
Finds dawn a leprous white,
Reddened the rare green sod;
Trampled the flow'rs that glowed as fall'n stars:
And each destroyer claims his cause for God.
Where God hath turned His face!

PRESIDENT LEAVES CORNISH

Leaps for Moving Train When It Starts Without Him.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Sept. 14.—President Wilson was forced to jump on a moving train to keep from being left at Greenfield tonight on his return trip from Cornish, N. H., to Washington. He got off the train to take a walk and the train started before he could get on. He caught hold of the railing and jumped aboard the observation platform. Secret Service Operative Sloss helped him.

The President's return trip was turned into an almost continuous ovation by large crowds that gathered at all stops to shake hands with him. He was in excellent health and spirits.

Mrs. Sayre, the President's daughter, and her husband left Cornish today for Williams College, where Mr. Sayre is assistant to President Garfield. The college opens in a few days. They made part of the trip with Mr. Wilson. Miss Margaret Wilson accompanied the President to the train.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 14.—Because of a long delay of the President's train here, Mr. Wilson walked through the streets of the city for more than thirty minutes. Few people recognized him.

CORNISH, N. H., Sept. 14.—Before departing for Washington today President Wilson played a round at golf with his physician, Dr. C. T. Grayson. Dispensing with the customary escort of Secret Service men, the President and Dr. Grayson left the Summer White House before 7 A. M. and motored to Hanover, twenty miles away. The ground was covered with frost, and Mr. Wilson had to bundle himself in a big coat to keep warm.

As the President drove through Hanover he was cheered by Dartmouth College students, to whom he waved his hand in reply. Several followed him to the edge of the golf course and watched him drive off from the first tee. He left here at 9:20 P. M. for Washington, where he will arrive at 5 o'clock tomorrow morning.

URGES COMMISSION DE LUXE

Mr. Lubin Wants a $5,000,000 Man on Market Board.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Urging the passage of a bill which would authorize the creation of a national marketing commission as a semi-official body to arrange for the distribution of farm products, David Lubin, Director of the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, told the House Agricultural Committee today that the proposed commission should be composed of men able to command salaries of $50,000 to $5,000,000 a year in private employment.

"We don't want any hired men at $1,000," said Mr. Lubin. "We want men who are worth and who can get from $50,000 to $5,000,000 a year. I would say that a great railroad genius like James J. Hill would do, for instance. Then we would need an expert Patrol Post Commissioner, ex-Postmaster General. I would say, and we would also want three or four good merchants of the kind who do $80,000,000 or $100,000,000 business a year."

Mr. Lubin appeared before the committee in support of the Goodwin bill, which provides for a commission of fifteen farmers and fourteen men eminent in commerce, law, finance, and transportation, with power to act informally or by affecting individuals and organizations that shall elect to become a part of the national marketing system."

BOND OFFERING WITHDRAWN

No Porto Rican Issue Now — War Time Considered Unfavorable.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Secretary Garrison announced today that the War Department had decided to withdraw the offering of $2,400,000 of Porto Rican Government 4 per cent. bonds, for which bids were to be opened tomorrow. Mr. Garrison had nothing to say about the withdrawal other than that it was not considered wise to put the issue out at this time.

It was learned that the Porto Rican Treasurer, who was here last week, as well as officials of the War Department, after discussing the proposed issue, came to the conclusion that this was not the best time, on account of the war, to try to sell such bonds. The issue contemplated was not an urgent necessity. The proposed issue was divided into three groups—one for the completion of irrigation work, another for refunding certain small issues of municipal bonds, and the balance for public harbor works.

FULFILL MRS. WILSON'S WISH

House Passes Bill to Abolish Alley Slums in the Capital.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Mrs. Woodrow Wilson's dying wish that Congress abolish the alley slums in the national capital was fulfilled today when the House passed the Senate bill which prohibits the use of dwelling houses in Washington alleys after four years from the date of the legislation. The bill now goes to the President for his signature.

A few hours before Mrs. Wilson died she told the President that she could "go away" happier if she knew the alley slums would be wiped out. Word was sent to the Capitol and the House District Committee promptly reported a bill carrying a large appropriation to clear the slums. The House did not pass the measure as reported because of constitutional objections. The Senate, however, passed another bill carrying out an old plan providing for abolition of the slums, but cutting the time limit from eight to four years.

The House accepted this as a substitute, acceptable to the White House, and it will become law.

RESERVE BOARD SECRETARY

H. Parker Willis, Author of Original Act, Is Unanimously Named.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—H. Parker Willis, the author of the original draft of the Reserve Bank act, was appointed today Secretary of the Federal Reserve Board. Sherman Allen, ex-Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, who was chief of the White House secretaries in the Taft Administration, was made Assistant Secretary to the Federal Reserve Board.

Mr. Willis was the unanimous choice of the board. He is a native of Massachusetts, 40 years of age, and was educated in the Western Reserve and Chicago Universities with post-graduate work in the Universities of Leipsic and Vienna. For several years he was Professor of Economics and Political Science in Washington and Lee and George Washington Universities.

NO ACTUAL HOME RULE YET.

Bill to Become Law This Week, but Its Operation to be Delayed.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Both the Home Rule bill and the Welsh Disestablishment bill are to be placed on the statute books this week.

In announcing this fact in the House of Commons this afternoon Premier Asquith said that he would introduce a bill tomorrow providing that no step be taken to put either act into operation for a year, or any event.

In announcing in the House of Lords today the Government's intentions in regard to the Home Rule bill, the Marquis of Crewe, the Government leader, somewhat amplified that statement made in the House of Commons by Premier Asquith. He pledged the Government to introduce a bill to amend the Home Rule bill and promised that it would be dealt with before the Home Rule measure became operative.

The amending bill would not necessarily exclude Ulster or any part of Ulster, Lord Crewe said, as the whole temper of Ireland had changed greatly for the better since the outbreak of the European war.

The Marquis ventured the opinion that when the Irish bill was placed upon the statute books there would be a rush of Irishmen to enlist in the army. He recalled the objections that were raised to granting self-government to South Africa, and pointed to the part that the Union of South Africa and the Dutch element there was now playing for the Empire.

WAR FREIGHT TAX ON BRINK OF DEFEAT

Opposition Strong in Senate as Well as House—Plan May Be Abandoned.

DEMOCRATS WILL CAUCUS

Meeting Called for Tonight—Some Other Special Tax Likely to be Decided Upon.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Confronted by a situation which is becoming more and more bothersome in its political aspects, Democratic leaders in the House tonight, under pressure of bitter opposition, were about ready to abandon the plan to push to passage the Emergency War Tax bill agreed upon by the Ways and Means Committee. Even should the President give it his unqualified approval on his return to Washington tomorrow, and should this approval be a sufficient impetus to put it through the House, there is still grave doubt as to the success of the legislation in the Senate.

The House Democrats who have lined up against the bill in its present form succeeded today in obtaining the required number of names to a petition for a caucus on the war tax. The caucus is to meet tomorrow night, but Representative Underwood hopes to delay consideration of the matter until the President has had an opportunity to examine into the different phases of the controversy.

The bone of contention is the proposal of a tax of 2 per cent. on freight charges. Very little is being said of an unfavorable nature in so far as concerns the proposed tax on stamped proprietary medicines, chewing gum, and beer. Among the rank and file of the party in power in Congress has gone up a hue and cry against what they term a tax on commerce, and, regardless of the merits of the campaign they are making, they have succeeded in driving their leaders almost to their wits' ends.

While it is admitted that the freight tax would furnish the widest possible distribution of the burden of taxation, the general feeling seems to be that the levy should be made upon such articles as do not come under the head of necessities. For instance, many members already have begun receiving inquiries from their constituents as to why there is to be no additional tax on whisky. The argument of those who succeeded in having stricken out from the bill as agreed to by the Ways and Means Committee was that an additional burden on whisky would encourage the illicit distilling of liquor and would tend to adulteration.

The satisfaction that the proposed tax is not confined alone to the House, Senator Robinson of Arkansas today suggested a new plan for raising the needed revenue. He proposed to tax automobiles, certain soft drinks, beer, and cigarettes. Senator La Follette has suggested the probability of avoidance of the tax by cutting the Rivers and Harbors bill to about $10,000,000 and by suspending all public building operations for a year.

In view of the widespread fight against the freight tax there is a possibility that a new plan will be devised by Representative Underwood. Representative Underwood in conference tomorrow may be submitted to the caucus at the Capitol tomorrow night. Mr. Underwood is of the opinion that unless the President gives unreserved support to the freight tax idea, it would be useless to attempt to force it through Congress.

DEFEN

CENTURY KEEPS ITS BETTER OPERA VOW

Opens with "Romeo and Juliet," with Improved Chorus, Orchestra, and Ensemble.

WELDON WINS SUCCESS

His Voice of Great Volume and Sonorousness—Lois Ewell and Orville Harrold in Title Roles.

The Century Opera Company began last night the second season of its presentation of operas at popular prices at the Century Opera House with a performance of Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet." There was a large audience, presumably larger than any that has yet visited the playhouse, since there were few vacant seats visible, even though the capacity of the Century has been increased by a thousand seats during the summer remodeling. The size of the audience may have been influenced by the fact that the performance had been organized in aid of the Red Cross relief work, with Mayor Mitchel and other officials present in honor of the special occasion.

As far as last night's performance affords a basis of judgment, the promises of betterment at the Century Opera House made last Spring at the end of the first season have been lived up to. In several important respects the company seems to have been made over for the better. This is most noticeably so in the case of the chorus, the orchestra, and the general ensemble. The chorus has apparently been reorganized, especially in the male section, and now sings with a good degree of precision, considerable life and vigor, and a volume of tone that has balance and carrying power. Formerly the chorus was one of the company's weakest points.

Another former weak spot, the orchestra, was last night without reproach; indeed, it had positive merit. While one felt last year as though a conductor was hampered in obtaining his desired effects from it, that feeling is no more present. It is now a fluid malleable unit in the conductor's hands and adds greatly to the enjoyment of the performance. There were a few little rough spots, as in the horns during the "balcony" scene for a moment or with the tone of the oboe during following scenes, but these will undoubtedly be eliminated after first-night tension has disappeared.

Just as gratefully, perhaps more so in a certain sense, was the improvement in the general ensemble, the better handling of the stage crowds, the better lighting, and the more felicitous co-operation of the various forces that made up the performance. Where the discriminating observer might formerly have had a subconscious feeling of worry lest little things go wrong, he is now enabled to sit back in his seat comfortably with perfect confidence in the stage manager.

It is true, of course, that the production of "Romeo and Juliet" last night and that of "Carmen," which will be heard tonight, may have received a maximum of attention because of the lack of rehearsal before the house opened have been available. However that may be, if the management has devised a way so that future productions will be made with as good effect as those of last night, the season of opera at popular prices" will be served with dignity and worth.

With the important exception of Henry Weldon as Friar Laurence, the cast was a familiar one to those who saw Lois Ewell was Juliet; Orville Harrold, Romeo; Thomas Chalmers, Mercutio, and Alfred Kaufman, Capulet. All of them were equal to performing their rôles much as at that time, with some higher distinction. Miss Ewell and Mr. Chalmers were especially effective. As for Henry Weldon, his success was perhaps more pronounced than has been the case with any singer who has made a first appearance at the Century. His voice is one of great volume and sonorousness and he has a stage presence that speaks of dignity and authority. He was a little nervous when he began, and at a subsequent appearance will doubtless exhibit more resource in legato than he displayed last night.

The new conductor, Agide Jacchia, showed that he will be a most valuable acquisition for the company. He possessed of authority and force that hold and direct his charges, and his readings are vital and varied. A good share of the success of the performance is to be laid at his door.

The parts of secondary importance were very acceptably done by singers who include Stella Ricardo, Hardy Williamson, Frank Mansfield, Gilbert Wilson, George Everett, John Mercer, and Elizabeth Campbell.

The text used last night was specially prepared for the Century company by Algernon St. John-Brenon and represents a worthy contribution to the cause of rescuing English versions of operatic librettos from the sad straits into which they have fallen.

OPEN NEW ROSE GARDENS.

Dancing, Dining, and Deep Sea Pictures in a Theatre de Luxe.

The private opening of the Broadway Rose Gardens last night was attended by a large assembly, which saw the deep sea pictures in a theatre de luxe and a special programme of dances in the gardens, which were festooned with thousands of roses. The gardens will be opened tonight to the public.

The combining of dancing and dining formed the festivities of the Danse de Pierrette, the spectators passing from the theatre into the gardens. Soft, warm tints in the scheme of decoration and lighting have turned the building formerly given over to roller skating into an artistic amusement centre.

The audience liked the submarine motion pictures, which were taken at the bottom of the sea in the West Indies by the Williamson Submarine Expedition, and were thrilled by a combat between a man and a man-eating shark in the deep sea.

Those who took part in the entertainment included Miss Anna Clover Morgan and Speed Gaynor, Miss Aline Williams and Spalding Hall in modern ballroom and pierrette dances; Mlle. Marcelle Albus, coloratura soprano; Duryea Van Bensel, and Mlle. Mone and Ray Roberts, whirlwind dancers. The Rose Garden orchestra played.

Commissioner Katharine B. Davis was among the guests of the evening, also Miss Florence Guernsey and other prominent clubwomen.

"THE STRONGER MAGNET."

New Drama by Howard Hall Varies the Eternal Triangle.

The De Kalb Theatre, Brooklyn, inaugurated its regular season last night with a play which was presented for the first time on any stage. "The Stronger Magnet," a drama by Howard Hall, which, following its Brooklyn "try-out," is to move over to Manhattan.

"The Stronger Magnet" is a play of the eternal triangle which is slightly varied by Mr. Hall presenting a fourth side to that figure in the person of a daughter of the woman in the case. The first act presents the side of the wife, the second shows the other woman, the third presents the side of the daughter, while the last act sums up the entire case and leaves the punishment of the offending man to the audience.

The play was staged by Edward Emery, who plays the rôle of John Darcy, a politician who is a victim of the wiles of Alberta West, a music teacher, played by Helen Holmes. Dorothy Dorr was the wife, while the rôle of the daughter fell to Adele Rolland. Howard Hall, the author of the play, appeared as an attorney. Others in the cast were Annie Ashley, Otto Kruger, Thomas Irwin, and Hal Perkins. The production was made by the Shuberts.

THE ATLANTIC CITY IN PERIL.

Passengers Removed, but Ship is Still Rolling on Sand Bar.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 14.—The thirty-one passengers on the stranded steamship Atlantic City, which went aground yesterday afternoon on the West Bar, were brought ashore this morning by the Federal Coast Guards in the presence of hundreds of people who lined the beach. Capt. Townsend and his crew of thirteen remained on board. Included among the passengers were N. C. Goldstein and P. E. Marshall of New York City and Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Hubner and their two children of New Brighton, Staten Island.

At 8 o'clock tonight the Atlantic City was rolling heavily owing to a strong east wind and heavy seas. She was in a more dangerous position, according to the men at the life-saving stations, than when she went on the shoal yesterday morning.

"The Dragon's Claw," the new play which came to the New Amsterdam Theatre last evening, is a dramatization of the defense against the Boxer uprising, which drew the eyes of the world to the Far East fourteen years ago. It is a dramatization of those hours of peril when the yellow men of the red sashes were rising throughout China, and the men and women from Europe and America were fighting for their lives from the walls of the Embassy compounds. It converts to the uses of the theatre something of the suspense of those hours when the fate of the white folk within the walled city hung in the balance as the rescuing forces of the allies came marching from the coast.

The play is from the pen of Austin Strong, and to the many fine qualities of the manuscript Henry Miller, as director, has brought a high intelligence to bear. A deal of thought and unreckoned hours of patient labor with the least of the details must be part of the history of a production so exceptionally satisfying. "The Dragon's Claw" is an interesting play, expertly presented.

There is a thrill in the thing, a continuous undercurrent of suspense that gives really remarkable force to the thrust of the scene which is reserved to bring down the final curtain of the play. The defense of the British legation that has been the centre of interest it is dawn of the last day that the defenses can possibly hold. Many of the men are wounded. An exploded mine has torn an ugly hole in the wall of the compound and the approaching daylight will show the enemy the gap without the weakness of the legation's position. None know what new peril is to be read into the sound of distant firing which has come at intervals since the first red sunrise.

The women and children have been ordered to the cellars and what is left of the men is lined up before the hole in the wall with guns leveled for the last stand. Then comes the intervention of Russians, Germans, English, and Japanese. An old Asiatian Army cook is in the forefront and a young West Pointer is leading them. It is under his command that the attack is to be made. He has told them briefly what is before them, the positions are taken, and then, over the indistinguishable hum of the advancing forces, sounds a bugle note. The oncoming host is no enemy, but the forces of civilization. The message of the allies, the news of relief come in the nick of time. The effect is as old as the theatre, but it is and always will be electrical. And the curtain goes down with the beleaguered folk swarming cheering to the wall and over their heads and over that wall you see the tip of the American flag floating along with the banners of the army of the allies are married past the legation.

In its tug at those heart strings that are wont to respond to what is martial on the stage anything more potent than this final scene does not come often in a theatrical year.

And "The Dragon's Claw" is largely martial. It is, in chief, a dramatization of the Boxer uprising. Here the horror of the Ancient Order of Fists and Harmonious Fists is the protagonistic force. Its thread of romance, its story of the Captain, the Captain's wife, and the other man is just a sub-plot—a sub-plot to the tremendous climax at the close of the first act.

It runs a most tenuous thread through the events of the second act, and yet while it has the stage it possesses that heightened interest which it draws from its connection with the main theme. It gains that peculiar intensification which is gained by any story of Western folk told with the mystery and immensity of an alien people as its background. It is the sense of fate staged so many of his romances under the decodars.

But the story of the Captain and the Captain's wife is made subordinate to the story of the siege. The second act is slow-paced, for the meeting and parting successfully the intolerable waiting which is the rôle of the besieged. It seems to have been the aim of both Mr. Strong and Mr. Miller to see that this act should picture faithfully the long, unremembered things of such an ordeal. It is as though the act recorded such observations as a sensitive witness might have recalled and told about long afterward. Its construction is of the quality, almost entirely without dramatic force, and yet deeply interesting to watch.

That it is deeply interesting is in no small measure attributable to the infinite pains that have been taken in the staging. It has clearly been the producer's belief that no part was too small to be well played. The beauty of the settings is considerable, but it is in the entire and unusual adequacy of the cast that the production is remarkable. The very entrance of the guests gathering for the dance at the Captain's in the first act is an example of expert staging. It is worth studying as the achievement of something that must be difficult because it is usually so badly done.

There should be acknowledgments not only for the effective playing by Gladys Hanson and Charles D. Waldron, but for the exceptionally finished work done in lesser rôles by Frederic de Belleville and Ida Waterman. For doing just the right thing in still smaller parts, there must be appreciation for Robert Hudson, Bertram Marburgh, and Emmy Oswald—particularly Emmy Oswald. But the heartiest applause of all should be, and doubtless will be, reserved for Henry Miller.

MANAGER HELD FOR THEFT.

Bundle He Said Was Soiled Linen Found to Contain Furs.

Joseph H. Roth of 60 West 117th Street, manager for Harry Berger & Co., dealers in furs at 48 West Thirty-eighth Street, was held in $2,500 bail yesterday by Magistrate Marsh in the Yorkville Court on the charge of stealing furs worth $5,000 from his employer.

Police Detective Phelan stopped Roth as he was leaving the shop with a bundle which Roth said was soiled linen. Detective Phelan examined the package and found furs.

Couldn't Remember Her Address.

A woman who gave her name as Mary Grogan, but who appeared unable to remember her address, was found wandering in South Oxpse Park, Queens Borough, last night. She was sent to the Kings County Hospital, as both her memory and speech seemed to be impaired. The woman is 30 years old, 5 feet 3 inches in height and weighs 180 pounds. She has auburn hair and blue eyes. There was a gold ring on her left hand in which was inscribed "J. M. G. to M. S. 7-1-14."

CONEY TURNS PATRIOTIC.

Uncle Sam and Miss Columbia Lead Mardi Gras Parade.

"The King is dead, long live Uncle Sam!"

With this cry Uncle Sam and Miss Columbia, sitting in the places of honor occupied in years past by a "King" and "Queen," were welcomed at Coney Island last night at the opening of the twelfth annual Mardi Gras.

Abandoning their former policy, the directors of the carnival have made this year's Mardi Gras an American patriotic celebration, and red, white, and blue, Old Glory, and incidents of American history are the material for display.

The subjects of the floats that passed through Surf Avenue last night were chiefly historical. After the first float, on which Uncle Sam and Miss Columbia rode, came "The Landing of Columbus," "The Landing of the Pilgrims," "The Boston Tea Party," "Washington Crossing the Delaware," "The Signing of the Declaration of Independence," "The Birth of the American Flag," "Emancipation," "The Blue and the Gray," "President Wilson Declaring Neutrality," and "Peace."

At the head of the parade was the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company's band of sixty pieces, and behind it marched 250 marines from the battleship Utah, who saw service in Vera Cruz, and as many soldiers from Fort Hamilton. It was the first time that soldiers and marines had taken part in a Mardi Gras, and they were cheered throughout the march.

In spite of the cold weather more than 400,000 persons jostled and crowded and laughed in Surf Avenue. They were a good natured lot and gave the 500 policemen and detectives on duty little trouble. They did not seem to mind the chill. The carnival spirit was there, and the crowd, being out for a frolic was bound to have it.

The carnival really began in the afternoon with ceremonies in Luna Park, at which 1,000 school children sang patriotic songs and saluted when the American flag was raised. Former Alderman Lewis M. Potter, President of the Mardi Gras, presided, and Congressman Daniel J. Griffin of Brooklyn delivered the oration.

The police last night were in charge of Inspector Thomas H. Murphy, and the firemen were under Battalion Chief Rogers. Extra precautions against fire were taken, and 2,000 extra men were stationed at every plug with a hose attached ready for use.

The carnival will continue through the week with nightly parades and displays. The last parade of Saturday night will come with the end of the Mardi Gras next Saturday night.

THE WEEK IN THE THEATRES.

The plays which began another week of their runs in the theatres last night were "On Trial," at the Candler; "It Pays to Advertise," at Cohan's; "A Modern Girl," at the Comedy; "Under Cover," at the Cort; "Innocent," at the Eltinge; "The Prodigal Husband," at the Empire; "Twin Beds," at the Fulton; "Cordelia Blossom," at the Gaiety; "Wars of the World," at the Hippodrome; "The Dummy," at the Hudson; "The Girl from Utah," at the Knickerbocker; "The Argyle Case," at the Longacre; "Peg o' My Heart," at the Lyric; "The Story of the Rosary," at the Manhattan; "The Bludgeon," by Maxine Elliott's; "The Rise of Lovings," at the Maxine Elliott; "Miss Daisy," at the Shubert; "The Third Party," at the Thirty-ninth Street, and "The Passing Show," at the Winter Garden.

At other theatres where the bills are changed weekly: Within the Law" is shown at the Standard, "The Yellow Ticket" at the Grand Opera House, "Peg o' My Heart" at the Bronx Opera House, "The Star and Garter" burlesque at the Columbia; "The Passing Show of 1914" at the Murray Hill, and "The Globe Trotters" at Hurtig & Seamon's.

Sylvester Schaffer, remains the starliner at the B. F. K. M. this week with a new American headliner. The featured musical act was that of Cecil Lean and Cleo Mayfield. Sam and Kitty Morton, who maintain the three-time record for their present "Back to Stays Where They Started" which shows the early ideas of song, dance, and comedy. Rose Crouch and Victor Vaughn, as the forces of civilization in the message of the allies, the news of relief come in the nick of time. The effect is as old as the theatre, but it is and always will be electrical. And the curtain goes down with the beleaguered folk swarming cheering to the wall and over their heads and over that wall you see the tip of the American flag floating along with the banners of the army of the allies are married past the legation.

CARNEGIE, SPONSOR OF A PEACE DRAMA

Will Furnish Money for Belasco to Stage a Symbolic Spectacle, 'The Prince of Peace.'

UNFOLDS WORLD'S HISTORY

Cartoonist Macauley's Play Will Show the Tragic Devastation Following in the Train of War.

Andrew Carnegie, in an effort to spread the idea of world-wide peace at a time when most of the European nations are at war, has become a theatrical "backer," and is to furnish the money for David Belasco, the theatrical manager, to produce a symbolic spectacle to be called "The Prince of Peace," by C. R. Macauley, a well-known cartoonist and writer.

Mr. Belasco announced last night that he had completed the first plans for the production at Mr. Carnegie's direction, and that "The Prince of Peace" would be staged at an early date in a New York theatre. Mr. Belasco said that the production would be made on a large scale, and that one of the largest stages in the city would be necessary for the play.

Mr. Carnegie is now on the ocean on his way to America, according to Mr. Belasco, who says that when he arrives here the final plans for the production will be announced.

In "The Prince of Peace" a history of the world will be epitomized and unfolded in a series of stage pictures that will be realistic in their revelations of bloodshed, of tyranny, of selfishness, and of the tragic misery and devastation following in the train of wars. The drama shows Christ as the first apostle of peace, and is woven together and made human by the use of the character in legendary lore, Cartaphilus, the Roman doorkeeper for Pilate, who struck Jesus as he came out of the Hall of Judgment. This character is made the Dante that wanders with sadness through the world, the philosophic observer of all that occurs in the centuries down which he traverses.

Mr. Macauley, who is the author of "The Red Tavern," has always been an advocate of universal peace. His cartoons on the subject attracted the attention of Mr. Carnegie, who, through his desire to use the stage as a forum from which to preach the gospel of universal brotherhood and justice, conceived the idea of presenting a huge spectacle. Mr. Belasco was approached on the subject and several conferences were held. Since then the play for production were well under way before Mr. Carnegie sailed for Scotland.

JAMES B. HAGGIN BURIED.

Aged Financier's Body Placed in Mausoleum in Woodlawn.

James B. Haggin, financier and retired racing man, was buried late yesterday afternoon in Woodlawn. His body arrived in this city at about 3 o'clock from Newport, where Mr. Haggin died on Saturday night after an illness of a month in his ninety-second year. The funeral was private, and the body was taken directly from the station to Woodlawn and was accompanied only by members of the family, including Mrs. Pearl Voorhies Haggin, his widow; his son, Louis B. Haggin; his grandson, Alexander Hamilton Rice, Jr., and Mrs. Henry Pierpont Perry, and several other members of the family. At Woodlawn the party was joined by a number of Mr. Haggin's late employes, who in later years had been the mausoleum which was built by him a few years ago.

The body rested in a mahogany coffin, with a heavy outside case, and upon the top was a cover of American Beauty roses, with numerous floral pieces and offerings from the family and Mr. Haggin's intimate friends in Newport. Upon the plate of the coffin was engraved "James Ben Ali Haggin, born December, 1822. Died Sept. 12, 1914."

After the funeral Mrs. Haggin and the other members of the family returned to Newport, where the estate will be settled as soon as convenient.

OLD CONDUCTOR DROPS DEAD

Quarrel Over Ticket on Jersey Central Flier Fatal to J. E. Hess.

Special to The New York Times.

RED BANK, N. J., Sept. 14.—As the Jersey Central Shoppers' Express left Long Branch this morning the passengers, who included many well-known New York women, witnessed a violent quarrel between a man who presented a worthless ticket and J. Edward Hess, the train conductor. The passenger finally tore the ticket in pieces and threw them in the conductor's face. Hess opened his mouth as though to speak, clutched at his heart, and fell dead in the aisle.

Mr. Hess was born at Easton, Penn., sixty-three years ago and has spent more than forty years in the service of the Central Railroad. He was married coupling freight cars many years ago, and limped slightly, and one hand was nearly gone. For nearly a quarter of a century he had run Train 201, the Coast Mail, to all Jersey Coast points, leaving New York at 4 A. M. with mails, newspapers, and express goods.

Horace Hale Stanton, Artist, Dies.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Sept. 14.—Horace Hale Stanton, a landscape painter and a member of the Royal Academy of Artists, (England,) died of nephritis last night at his residence, 18 Park Avenue, New Rochelle, in his seventy-first year. He is survived by his wife, two sons and three daughters. Mr. Stanton won the gold medal in the Royal Academy exhibition in 1861. One year ago he removed to America.

Girl a Suicide After Quarrel.

Blanche De Villon, 22 years old, a cashier in a jewelry establishment, was found dead in her room, which was filled with gas, at 616 West 154th Street, early yesterday morning when her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. George Boulson, returned home. A handkerchief had been stuffed in the keyhole and the crevices of the doors and windows filled with paper. Mrs. Boulson said that her sister had threatened to commit suicide because she had quarreled with a man to whom she was engaged to be married.

EX-SENATOR FELTON DEAD.

California Representative, a Native of New York State, Was 82.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 14.—Charles N. Felton, former United States Senator from California, is dead at his home in Menlo Park in his eighty-third year.

Senator Felton was born in Erie County, N. Y., in 1832. He joined the great gold rush in 1849 at the age of 17 and crossed the continent to California with one of the first wagon trains. Placer mining first attracted him and he worked claims in Yuba and Placer Counties. Senator Felton, however, was not fortunate in mining and opened a store at Downieville in Sierra County in 1852. In 1856 he moved to Marysville and soon became one of that city's most prominent citizens. At this time Mr. Felton was what was then known as a Douglas Democrat.

Shortly after the outbreak of the civil war Mr. Felton changed his political faith and became a Republican. In 1863 he removed to San Francisco and for six years was United States Subtreasurer and Treasurer of the Mint, and in 1880 was elected to the Assembly from San Mateo County, in which his country home at Menlo Park is situated. In 1885 he was sent to Congress, and after his term expired was sent a second time. His second election was contested by Frank J. Sullivan and the fight lasted during the whole two years and eventually was decided in favor of his opponent. In 1891 Mr. Felton was appointed to the Senate to fill the vacancy that had occurred and served until the end of 1892. In 1893 ex-Senator Felton was voted for in the California Legislature for Senator again.

Ex-Senator Felton is survived by a son and a daughter, who was married to William L. Elkins at Washington in 1889.

BOER WAR HERO DEAD.

Rockefeller Bible Class Teacher May Be Buried in Potter's Field.

John Green, who was praised by the late King Edward of England for bravery in the Boer war and had taught a Bible class under John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, will be buried in Potter's Field unless a sister, who is believed to be living in New York, claims his body. Green died on Sunday night in the Self-Masters' Colony, in Union Township, New Jersey.

Born outside of London sixty-three years ago, Green served many years in the English Army. In one of the engagements during the Boer war the color bearer of Green's regiment was killed, and Green, grasping the union jack, ran to the head of the troops and swung the battle-scarred flag in front of them. The English won the fight, but the encouragement Green's right foot was shattered by a shell and was amputated in a field hospital.

At the close of the war Green came to New York and obtained employment as a chef in the old Astor House on Broadway. He later taught Sunday school under John D. Rockefeller, Jr. A year ago he made application at the local Colony, and was made head chef at the institution.

Rev. William H. Miller.

The Rev. William H. Miller, aged 51 years, for nearly twenty-two years pastor of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, North Plainfield, N. J., died at the rectory yesterday. He was born in South Amboy. He entered St. Francis Xavier's College, this city, and continued his studies at Seton Hall College and Theological Seminary, South Orange, and St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore. He was ordained by Cardinal Gibbons Dec. 17, 1887, after which he was assistant to Msgr. Cleary in New Brunswick and Vicar General Kelley, South Amboy. Father Miller was sent to St. Joseph's Church April 17, 1898, and during his pastorate erected the present $90,000 edifice. Besides his parents there survive a sister, Miss Mary Miller, and a brother, Frank Miller.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Favorable Effect Expected to Flow from Gold Shipments —Wheat Drops.

Ever since the war in Europe threw the markets of the world into disorder one of the great questions has been whether or not this country, where specie payments have not been suspended, where no moratorium has been declared or is declarable, and where the burdens consequent upon the war have fallen more lightly than on any other great country, should or should not meet its obligations abroad in gold if our creditors desired gold. That question has now been answered practically in a way which must be highly gratifying to all who are desirous of seeing our credit fully maintained and of seeing proof given of the commercial and financial strength of the United States. Yesterday there was engaged for shipment abroad in payment of obligations falling due on the other side $8,000,000 gold, and bankers now stand ready to follow this up with other large shipments if they are needed. There need now be no further discussion of the question whether or not we will pay our debts in gold. We are doing it.

The significance of these gold shipments will be fully appreciated in Europe, and thereby our credit abroad will be strengthened. Great as is our supply of gold we naturally do not want to see any more of it go out than we can help, but in sending out gold as we now are we are adopting the surest way of keeping as much as possible of our gold. The shipments now being made and those which will follow them cannot fail to convince Europe that we do mean to pay our debts in gold. Once that fact is sufficiently borne in on the holders of our obligations on the other side they will become increasingly willing to retain these obligations in the comfortable assurance that if gold is wanted for them later they can get it. Theoretically, every one wants gold to every debt. Practically, very few debts are paid in gold so long as there is no doubt that gold could be had. Until now there has been some doubt abroad among those holding maturing American obligations whether they could get gold for them. There will no longer be room for that doubt. The mere fact that we are sending gold out will greatly lessen the probable European demand for our gold. That is the great gain from a practical point of view to which yesterday's gold shipments point.

Apart from the investment demand in this country for the one, two, and three year obligations bearing 6 per cent. interest which New York City has put out, it is considered probable that London will be inclined to invest a considerable amount in these issues. With discounts being made there only a little above 3 per cent. a 6 per cent. investment in New York City obligations looks very attractive providing the English holders could convert them into gold if gold were needed. And here again the fact that the maturing obligations are being met in gold will greatly increase the willingness of London to take these obligations of the city.

The conspicuous event of the day apart from the gold shipments was a very sharp decline in wheat which broke at the maximum over 8 cents a bushel. How far the idea that the way may be opening to peace in Europe influenced this movement is uncertain. It may have had some influence, but the excessive violence of the recent advance undoubtedly paved the way for the reaction which had been under way for some days, and which was most pronounced yesterday. Peace is wanted by all, but the peace that is wanted is one that will give reasonable assurance of lasting. Even the financial community, keen as it is for the restoration of normal conditions, would hardly care to have peace concluded on any other terms than those which would make it possible to look forward to a long period of tranquillity.

NATIONAL BANK DATA.

August Bulletin Shows Twenty-four Applications for Permits.

The latest bulletin of the Controller of the Currency shows that in August 11 applications for conversion of State banks or reorganization of State or private banks were filed, and 13 applications to organize national banks. In the same month 16 applications were approved, 5 of these being for conversion of State banks or reorganization of State or private banks; 15 banks, with a total capital of $1,835,000, were authorized to begin business, of which 7, with a capital of $168,000, had individual capital of less than $50,000, and 6, with a capital of $1,850,000, had individual capital of $200,000 or more.

On Aug. 31 the total number of national banks organized was 10,605, of which 2,095 had discontinued business, leaving in existence 7,981 banks with an organized capital of $1,073,594,175, and circulation outstanding, secured by United States bonds, $725,551,880, and by other securities, $126,241,760. Circulation to the amount of $18,447,185, covered by lawful money deposited with the Treasurer of the United States on account of liquidating and insolvent national banks and associations which had reduced their circulation, is also outstanding, making the total amount of national bank circulation outstanding $877,540,281.

COTTON GROWERS ASK AID.

Governors of Southern States Call Meeting to be Held in Atlanta.

Gov. Emmet O'Neal of Alabama and Hartwell Douglas, President of the Convict Board of that State, arrived at the Waldorf yesterday, partly on a mission to inquire into the raw cotton situation here and partly to learn about the demands of the manufactured cotton market. Alabama has a cotton factory in which the operatives are convicts, and as the product is considerably bigger than is needed in the State prisons, there is a possibility of the State's selling cotton goods to the trade.

"A meeting of the Governors of the cotton-growing States called by Gov. Trammell of Florida," said Gov. O'Neal yesterday, "will be held in Atlanta Sept. 23 and 24. I am going to Washington to confer with Secretary Bryan and Secretary McAdoo. I have had a telegram from Senator Hoke Smith indorsing the meeting and insisting that the Governors should co-operate with the Federal Government in selecting the best means of meeting the present situation.

"So many unpractical plans have been proposed for helping the cotton growers to cope with the enormous shrinkage in the demand for cotton caused by the great European war that some sane method must be adopted, and that soon, in order to reassure the growers that they will be able to get money to take care of the cotton.

"Business in Alabama otherwise is normal. The banks seem to have plenty of money. The cotton crop is coming in and being stored in bulk. Of course, there are a few growers that have to sell at any price they can get. Naturally everybody down our way is hoping for an early end to the war.

"I have had a great deal of information from the Prison Board of New York," said Mr. Douglas, "and it is my belief that prison authorities ought to adopt uniform rules for the care of convicts. Gov. O'Neal and I are looking into the cotton goods market here, because the State is interested in disposing of the output of its cotton mills. You see, the Convict Board owns and operates a good-sized mill at Speigner's, Ala., only twenty miles from Montgomery. Of the raw cotton needed for this mill, about one-half is raised on State farms by convicts. The other half is purchased. In the mill we manufacture the striped suits the convicts wear, and the surplus goods we sell. We make sheetings and osnaburgs. Here in New York we want to ascertain the future prospects for selling. Also the partisans of the idea of humane best and whether conditions have been much changed by the war.

"Our State mill has 200 convict employes. My friends on the Prison Boards of other States have considered this employment in this way. Our convicts in the mill have certain easy tasks which they perform daily. They are allowed to work overtime, and for this they are paid. This enables the convict to make money, which he may send to his family."

ST. PAUL'S INCOME LESS.

Annual Report Shows Reduction of $2,301,368 in Earnings.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway earned $21,782,690 in the year ended on June 30, a decrease of $2,301,368 from the preceding year. Operating expenses were $61,880,081, which was $1,552,906 less than in 1913, and the net receipts of $20,452,628 were $747,467 less than in the preceding twelve months. After meeting taxes, fixed charges and the dividend on the preferred stock $7,327,042 was left for the common stock. The usual disbursement of 5 per cent. on the common shares left a surplus of $1,404,272.

The annual report says that the revenue from freight traffic was $66,280,420, or 74.13 per cent. of the aggregate income, and $2,097,740 less than in the previous year. The freight carried was 32,007,277 tons, a decline of 5.2 per cent. Passenger traffic brought in $18,961,224, or 20.66 per cent. of the gross revenue, and an increase of $504,060 over 1913.

The company's property investment increased $24,494,351, of which new equipment accounted for $3,976,316 and double tracking $10,578,229. The funded debt on June 30 was $486,681,154, an increase of $30,000,000, due on bonds sold to buy additional property and provide for property betterments.

President Earling tells stockholders that work on new lines and extensions had been active throughout the year. Poles were set along thirty miles of Puget Sound Lines to make ready for electrification, which is expected soon.

TO END COTTON 'STRADDLE.'

Exchange Managers Confer on Means to Settle with Liverpool.

The Board of Managers of the Cotton Exchange, at a long meeting yesterday, considered means for closing out the outstanding "straddle" interest between this market and Liverpool, which amounts to about 300,000 bales.

The result was not made public, but it was reported that the tentative plan calls for a syndicate to assist in liquidating open contracts. The basis, it was said, would be the arbitrary fixing of the price at 9 cents a pound, and a syndicate would be formed strong enough to carry the load until the straddle has been adjusted.

The Exchange authorities recently agreed with a committee representing the Liverpool Merchants upon a scheme for liquidating the interest between the two markets, which has made only slow progress.

FIRST GOLD SHIPPED FOR NEW CITY LOAN

Morgan Bank Sends $5,000,000 to Ottawa for the Bank of England.

NONE FROM SUB-TREASURY

City's Cash Statement Shows $124,099,805.99, the Largest in Its History.

Gold export in connection with the payment of the city's maturing obligations abroad began yesterday with the shipment of $5,000,000 by J. P. Morgan & Co. to Ottawa for the account of the Bank of England. This is the largest shipment made since $10,000,000 was sent out on the Kronprinsessin Cecilie just before the war began.

The gold sent yesterday was furnished to a substantial extent by J. P. Morgan & Co., and the rest was supplied by financial institutions here, none of it being withdrawn from the Sub-Treasury. It constituted in effect an advance in behalf of the syndicate of 124 banks and trust companies, J. P. Morgan & Co. and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. these two banking firms being subscribers as well as managers of the syndicate.

The members of the syndicate were called on yesterday to pay to J. P. Morgan & Co. tomorrow $8,287,400 to offset the amount shipped yesterday and to provide for other shipments that will probably be made soon. The $8,287,400 is the sum needed to pay off the obligations maturing in London up to Sept. 28. None of the loans obtained in Paris will be due until later.

The $8,287,400 is to be provided by the various institutions in the ratio of their subscriptions to the total loss of $100,000,000 to the city. J. P. Morgan & Co. will receive today from City Chamberlain Bruere the city's checks on these institutions for the respective amounts. The Morgan firm, instead of presenting these checks at the 124 banks and trust companies, has requested them to make payment at the Morgan office either in gold or gold certification.

The syndicate members also have the option of paying in London exchange at $4.86, the present cost as determined by the syndicate managers of shipping gold to Ottawa. Including expressage, abrasion, and three days' loss of interest, London exchange is ruling at $4.86 to 4.86, so that syndicate members paying in exchange would have to take a loss on the transaction. Some of them may do so, however, rather than release gold that they hold.

When the gold arrives in Ottawa the Bank of England will be advised to credit the amount to the city's paying agent in London. The agreement with the city provides that its paying agent in London shall be Morgan, Grenfell & Co., Drexel & Co., Morgan, Harjes & Co.

The first of the city's foreign obligations in London fell due yesterday, the amount being £160,000. Arrangements for this payment were made by Morgan & Co. last Saturday, when they transferred the sums by cable to Morgan, Grenfell & Co.

The corporate stock notes and revenue bonds issued by the city in return for the $100,000,000 loan will probably be offered for sale by the syndicate within a few days. The matter was under consideration yesterday, but the price was not determined.

The Chamberlain's weekly statement giving the city's cash position at the close of business last Saturday, which was issued yesterday, includes the $100,000,000 and shows the largest cash balances in the city's history, $124,099,805.99. This will be drawn upon for amounts due abroad between now and Jan. 1, as well as for other expenditures, but in November the city will receive about $60,000,000 more from taxes to swell its ordinary revenues.

PASSENGERS TO PAY MORE.

Railroads Expected to Act on Commerce Board's Suggestion.

It was thought by railroad officials yesterday that passenger rates would be increased as a result of the Interstate Commerce Commission's suggestion that the carriers should add to their income from passenger service. The rate between this city and St. Louis, it was said, would be increased around Dec. 1 to the extent of $3 one way, while an advance of $1 would be put into effect at the same time between Chicago and St. Louis.

These increases mark another step in the general rise of passenger tariffs which the Pennsylvania began with an advance of from 2 to 2½ cents a mile on its mileage books. Several roads are working on new schedules, and it is expected that many increases will be announced soon, especially over the lines which made the most urgent appeal to the commission for higher freight rates.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

The bull movement in wheat appears to have collapsed. Prices during yesterday's session broke 6¾ to 8½c., making a total decline of 15 to 20½c. from the top of the bull movement, which culminated a week ago last Saturday, and representing about one-half of the advance which took place as a result of the war in Europe. Prices yesterday declined fully as rapidly as they had advanced at any time during the recent upward movement and demonstrated the weakness of the technical position. There was heavy general selling in all the leading markets, and at the close of the session there were practically no offerings. The visible supply showed an increase of 1,765,000 bushels for the week. In the local spot market No. 2 red Winter wheat was quoted as $1.01½ f.o.b. here, $1.07½ c.i.f. Northern Duluth, $1.09¾, and No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $1.12½, all nominal. cost, insurance, and freight, Buffalo.

CORN.

The corn market felt the influence of the break in wheat, prices closing with net losses of 3¼ to 3¾c. The visible supply showed an increase of 468,000 bushels for the week. In the local cash market No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at 70c. c.i.f. New York, and strictly prime Argentine at 64c delivered.

OATS.

The oats market was weak and lower in the face of further reports of export demand, closing with net losses of 2½ to 4¾c. The visible supply increased 1,259,000 bushels. The local cash market was easier; standard white, quoted at 58@58½c; No. 3, 55¼@56c; No. 2, 56½@57c; No. 2 white, 57½@58c; clipped white, 54½@56c; fancy clipped white, 58@57c, all elevator.

COTTON.

There appeared to be a very much more cheerful feeling in the Cotton Exchange crowds here yesterday. Notwithstanding the comparatively large spot sales reported in Liverpool since the close of Friday, there was no further balloting for orders in liquidation of the straddle interests, but the feeling with regard to the ultimate outcome of this interest was greatly encouraged by reports that a syndicate had been formed to take over the New York contracts. Confidence in the more general adoption of the plan, and in prospects of a continued improvement in the tone of the Southern spot markets. The spot market as officially quoted at Savannah was ¼c higher at 8¾c for good middling and 7½c for middling, while Memphis, which reports official spot quotations yesterday, quoted middling at 8c, with sales of 450 bales. Liverpool reported sales of 10,000 bales, including 5,000 bales to American buyers.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The market for cottonseed oil was moderately active, and sales from the September position, which closed 9 points higher, values were lower, closing with net losses of 8 to 9 points.

The range of prices was as follows:

PROVISIONS.

The provision market showed some firmness during the early operations, due to covering and less pressure of liquidation, but the strength was not sufficient to prevent selling and toward the close the market developed an easier tone. Receipts of hogs today, 15,000; estimated for Tuesday, 15,000; Kansas City received 8,000 and Omaha 800.

COFFEE.

The most noticeable feature in the coffee market was a slightly steadier tone to the cost and freight market with sales reported of a moderate quantity of Santos 4s on the spot at 9½c. Mild descriptions in the cost and freight market are 1½ to ¾c lower, with a normal parity with local spot quotations, and on this account consumers are not inclined to buy to any extent, consequently the spot market was very dull. In the local spot market No 7s were quoted at 6¾c and Santos 4s at 11½c.

WESTERN BANKS NOT CALLING LOANS

Chicago and St. Louis Supplement New York with Reassuring Reports.

REQUIRE NORMAL MARGINS

Interest Charges Range from Six to Eight Per Cent.—Collateral Underlying Loans Not Disturbed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—The apprehension that, with the closing of Stock Exchanges because of the war in Europe, there would be an abuse of the calling of loans is groundless, according to the reports made by John Skelton Williams, Controller of the Currency, within the last few days. The report from New York banks, made public last night, showed conditions to be reassuring. Tonight the Controller gave out for publication similar reports from the Chicago and St. Louis banks. The reports result from inquiries sent out recently by the Controller as to the extent to which securities guaranteeing loans had been thrown out and loans called for payment since the closing of the Stock Exchanges. Controller Williams tonight issued this statement:

"The national banks of Chicago all report that they have not required the withdrawal of collateral of any class from loans since the closing of the New York Stock Exchange, and that upon none of their loans are they requiring a margin of more than 25 per cent. They also report that they have called none of their loans since the Stock Exchange closed.

"The amount of loans called for account of correspondents was $2,650,000, of which they report that $2,500,000 was paid. Of the loans which they had placed for correspondents they report having taken over $710,000. New call loans made since Aug. 31 on bonds and stocks, and now outstanding, amount to $2,192,000; time loans on bonds and stocks, renewed since Aug. 1, total $5,122,000.

"All national banks of Chicago report that they have neither called nor ordered sold any bonds or stocks held as collateral for loans because of omission of borrowers to pay for same. The maximum rate of interest charged by the banks of Chicago during the month of August is reported at 7 per cent.

"Of the national banks of St. Louis only one bank reports the elimination at any particular collateral from its loans. They report that they are not requiring more than 25 per cent. margin on any of their loans secured by stocks and bonds, and that they have called no loans for payment since the closing of the New York Stock Exchange. Time loans on bonds and stocks renewed since Aug. 1, $2,500,000.

"Only one bank in St. Louis reports selling out collateral because of omission of borrowers to pay call loans.

"The maximum rate of interest charged by the St. Louis banks in August was 8 per cent., this rate having been charged by three banks. The maximum of one bank was 7 per cent. and of the three remaining national banks 6 per cent."

Railroads Preparing Petition Against Interstate Commerce Decision.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—The application of the railroad carriers for a reconsideration of the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the advanced rate case is now being prepared and will soon be filed with the commission.

Daniel Willard, President of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, acting as spokesman for the Committee of Railroad Presidents, representing the carriers, called on members of the commission today and informed them that the railroads are preparing a petition to be presented to the commission at the earliest possible date asking for a reconsideration of the rate decision.

Mr. Willard is understood to have been informed that when the petition is filed the commission will give due and proper consideration to it.

King Promotes Masters of Liners.

Capt. J. T. W. Charles, commander of the Cunard liner Mauretania, and Capt. H. J. Haddock of the White Star liner Olympic have been promoted to the rank of Captain in the Royal Naval Reserve by King George. This is the first time that officers of the reserve have held this rank. In the merchant service of the United States and Great Britain the commander of a ship ranks as master, and is called Captain by courtesy only.

MEADOW LAND DEAL IN COURT INQUIRY

Complaint That Bankers Pooled Interests to Bid In and Control Jersey Property.

FUNDS DIVERTED, IT IS SAID

Action Brought by Bondholder Affects 4,000 Acres Which Defy Improvement.

Representatives of the banking firm of Harvey Fisk & Sons, the Knickerbocker-Columbia Trust Company, and the Guaranty Trust Company are expected to appear in the Supreme Court this morning to testify before trial in order that sufficient facts may be gleaned to frame a complaint charging them and others with defrauding bondholders of the Newark Meadows Improvement Company of their interest in the enterprise. The complainant is W. Russell Root, who is represented by John T. Hettrick and Francis J. Byrne. Mr. Root is the herder of a thousand-dollar bond, but his attorneys, it is said, represent many other investors in the company.

The complaint charges that Wilbur C. Fisk, Frederick C. Walcott, Albert A. Tilney, William C. Lane, Albert H. Wiggin, Charles H. Keep, and Ross A. Mackey, all of whom are connected with Harvey Fisk & Sons or with the trust companies, pooled their holdings in the Newark Meadow Improvement Company in order to force a foreclosure sale, and that this having been accomplished, the property was bid in by one of their representatives and then turned over to the Inter-City Land Company, which was organized for the purpose by the defendants.

The defendants are alleged to have "lost, dissipated, diverted, and misapplied funds and property both real and personal."

The tract of land involved in the proceeding consists of about 4,000 acres. Many attempts have been made to reclaim it for business purposes, but all of them have failed. The Newark Company was organized in the Spring of 1908 to take over all of the interest held by the Hackensack Meadows Company and the New Jersey Dock and Terminal Company, which had endeavored to improve the land but failed. The scheme of the Newark Company was to build a dike around the whole tract, that was worth about $1,000 an acre, fill it in at a cost of about $2,500 an acre, and then sell it for $4,000 to $5,000 an acre.

To raise money for this work the property was mortgaged on April 1, 1908, to the Standard Trust Company, since merged with the Guaranty Trust Company, to secure first mortgage bonds for $1,850,000 and second mortgage debenture bonds for $2,000,000, both issues to mature in 1938. About the same time more than 100 acres fronting on the Passaic River were sold to various corporations for $20,000 an acre.

It was not required that interest should be paid on the mortgages unless the work a sufficient surplus after the sinking fund had been provided for, and taxes and other necessary expenses met. Therefore the bondholders were certain, it was said, that there never could be any foreclosure proceedings that would deprive them of their holdings. But in May, 1913, the Guaranty Trust Company began a suit in New Jersey to foreclose on the first mortgage income bonds. It is contended that the company, at the time it began this suit, was the trustee of the second mortgage debenture bonds, and that the proceeding was instituted on a demand made by Harvey Fisk & Sons, who held $75,000 of the first mortgage bonds, and on 400 of the first mortgage bonds, and on that of Arthur W. Hutching, a clerk in the employ of the Columbia-Knickerbocker Trust Company, as the holder of $157,000 of the bonds.

Every effort was made to prevent the sale of the property, but it was sold for $1,000,000 on Aug. 27 last to Harry M. Durning, who is charged in the papers with representing Harvey Fisk & Sons. It is charged further that on Nov. 26, 1913, there was incorporated in New Jersey the Inter-City Land Company, under the control of Harvey Fisk & Sons, and that the property of the Newark Meadows Improvement Company passed into the control of this company, in other words, that it is now completely in the possession of Harvey Fisk & Sons.

The papers say that to make the foreclosure proceedings successful the participation and consent were required of Wilbur C. Fisk, a member of Harvey Fisk & Sons, who signed the demand for the foreclosure and owned $900,000 worth of the second mortgage bonds, and Charles H. Keep, Director of the Newark Meadows Improvement Company and Chairman of the Columbia-Knickerbocker Trust Company. Mr. Keep's clerk, Arthur W. Hutching, joined in the foreclosure proceedings by the holding $157,000 of first mortgage bonds and $340,000 of second mortgage bonds. It was necessary, the papers state, to get the participation also of W. C. Lane, a Director of the Newark Meadows Company and of the Guaranty Trust Company which acted as Trustee and appeared to have cut off $825,000 of second mortgage bonds which it held by itself, and Albert H. Wiggin, Director of the Newark Meadows Company, Director of the Guaranty Trust Company, and President of the Chase National Bank.

Mr. Wiggin's influence, the papers intimate, is increased by the fact that the securities clerk of the Chase National Bank is the registered holder of $226,000 of the second mortgage bonds which the foreclosure proceedings appeared to have cut off. It was deemed likely, it was said, that the bank clerk could not have any an interest, and that if he did the President of the bank which employed him would not desire to see him lose this property without making it up to him in some way.

To the attempt to prevent the foreclosure proceedings complaints were submitted charging that "the mortgage is being foreclosed under an unlawful, fraudulent, and collusive agreement, plan, or method between the Inter-City Land Company, the Newark Meadows Improvement Company, and the Guaranty Trust Company for the purpose of defrauding the holders of the $1,000 bonds, and for the purpose of selling the mortgaged premises at a forced sale. Among those said to be holders of the company's bonds are Cornelius Vanderbilt, Richard Croker, Walter Frew, President of the Corn Exchange Bank; Morton F. Plant, and H. R. Hollins & Co.

EQUAL PAY BILL COSTLY.

Salaries to Teachers Have Increased $3,000,000 a Year Since 1911.

The annual financial and statistical report by Auditor Henry R. M. Cook of the Department of Education, covering the years 1909-1913, has just been issued.

According to the report, the equal pay law for teachers, which went into effect in 1912, entails an additional annual cost to the city of more than $3,000,000. This is brought out by a comparison of annual per capita costs of day elementary schools, which shows an increase of more than $5 per capita for 1913 and 1912 over 1911.

Brooklyn Traffic Regulation.

Police Commissioner Woods, on the recommendation of the Brooklyn Committee of Public Safety and Third Deputy Police Commissioner Godley, has prohibited all vehicles from crossing Fulton Street, Brooklyn, except at the intersection of streets between Court Square and Bond Street. This has been done to reduce the confusion at this congested spot, which frequently results in collisions between vehicles or between vehicles and the pillars of the elevated railroad.

AUSTRALIA OFFERS MARKET.

Melbourne Engineer Says U. S. May Seize Germany's Trade.

According to Henry Williams, a construction engineer of Melbourne, Australia, who arrived at the Imperial yesterday, British steamers crossing the Pacific just now have to run with lights out and off their course, just as they have frequently done on the Atlantic of late. Mr. Williams intended when he left home to study manufacturing plants in this country, England, and Germany, and then continue on his way around the world. Now he thinks he will be able to get all the information he needs in this country.

"We left Melbourne July 27," said Mr. Williams, "on the Marama of the Canadian-Australian line. War had not been declared. We stayed at Honolulu for four days, as the Nürnberg or some other German warship was supposed to be lurking outside, but once we cleared the port, we lost no time in getting to Vancouver, and made the usual speed. The American steamship Sonoma reported at Honolulu that she had seen the American gunboat Princeton sinking near the entrance to the Harbor of Pago Pago, American Samoa, after having struck a rock, but that her commander had put on full speed, charged into the harbor, and kept his craft afloat until he had moored her.

"In Australia a big, undeveloped field awaits the American manufacturer. Out of every twelve manufactured articles sold there that do not come from Germany the United States probably makes six to the same number that come from Great Britain. But the Germans have been selling us ten for every one article the United States has sold us. In other words, the value of our manufactured imports from Germany is ten times that of British or American manufactures imported. All this tremendous supply of German goods has been cut off by the war. Here is your big opportunity. The feeling in Australia during and after the war will be such that it will be a long, long time before Germany can ever regain that trade. You see, the Germans have sold their goods so cheaply to us that we have bought tremendously.

"Business was good in Australia when I left. We are keenly interested in the opening of the Panama Canal, and there will be many visitors from the Commonwealth to the San Francisco Exposition. A new steamship line will be in operation before the opening of the exhibition which promises to cut the time from Melbourne to San Francisco from nineteen to sixteen days.

"I was very much interested in reading an article in a recent number of THE NEW YORK TIMES dealing with Australia's opportunity to become a republic. There are difficulties in the way. You see we have only six millions of people as yet, and the imperial feeling is very strong. What we really want is a lot of go-ahead Americans to come out there. We have had some benefit from the new tariff law, and the ship I came in brought a great quantity of beef and mutton, and 600 tons of butter.

"If it became necessary, Australia could put into the field a quarter of a million men to help Great Britain. You see we now have compulsory military training and target practice."

MARSHALL ON PROSPERITY.

Vice President Sees a Trade Boom and Wilson in 1916.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—Urging Woodrow Wilson as the only logical candidate for the Democratic nomination for President, declining to indorse Roger Sullivan for the Senate, predicting an era of unexampled prosperity for the United States, approving the convention system of nomination, and deprecating equal suffrage, militarism, and "foolish" impertinence by American legislators in resolutions on the European war, Vice President Thomas R. Marshall attending a conclave of Scottish Rite Masons here today, discussed at length his views on current events.

"Woodrow Wilson ought to and will be the nominee of the Democrats in 1916," said Mr. Marshall. "His policies were just started when the war put them in abeyance. His tariff and revenue laws should be tried to their finish."

"This country is entering a period of great prosperity," added the Vice President. "The European war has awakened our interest in South America and removed our most formidable competitors for its trade. The Mexican situation has demonstrated that we are not seeking to extend our territory by the expense of other American countries. This has removed the suspicion from the minds of the Latin-American republics which kept their trade from us.

"Of course, now we will have ships to carry trade to South America and new markets without much competition. But before we win this trade we must create a demand for the products of these countries.

"If we keep out of European troubles and improve our opportunities we shall enjoy the greatest commercial success in our history. But a national foolishness in the form of some resolution may involve us in the war. I have pigeonholed many resolutions offered in the Senate that would have plunged us into war. The strictest neutrality must be observed."

HELD IN MAIL REALTY FRAUD.

James Bottenus Alleged to Have Misrepresented Lots He Sold.

James Bottenus, President of the James Realty Company, was arrested yesterday by Post Office Inspectors at his home, 2,066 Webster Avenue, the Bronx, on the charge of using the mails to further a real estate fraud. Action was taken when word was received from Bluffton, Ind., that Mrs. Rose Stack, an alleged agent of Bottenus, had been arrested.

According to the inspectors, Bottenus organized in 1906 the James Realty Company, with $500 capital, and purchased thirty acres at the foot of the Watchung Mountains, which he advertised as Bound Brook Manor. Then Bottenus handled Grand View, within walking distance of Somerville, N. J. It was only three miles from the station.

It is charged that Grand View was advertised as having street cars and a fifteen-minute express service, which it did not even plotted. The lots were offered at $36 and then at $55.

One device was to advertise in country newspapers that a lot would be given for the solution of a palpable puzzle. The successful competitors, it is alleged, were told that they had won 20 by 100 foot lots, but that the municipality had imposed a restriction that no building should be put upon a lot less than 40 feet by 100. Consequently they must buy an adjoining lot.

Inspector Barber said that Bottenus had been in business since 1906 and had made a very good living. Bottenus was locked up in the Tombs.

ARREST BANKER MANDEL.

Proprietor of Private Institution Charged with Doctoring His Books.

Adolph Mandel, proprietor of a private bank at 155 Rivington Street, was arrested yesterday afternoon in the offices of the State Banking Department by Detective Armstrong of the District Attorney's office on a charge of forgery in the third degree. He was released by Judge Wadhams in General Sessions in $10,000 bail, which his wife furnished.

Mandel's arrest is the first to follow an investigation into the affairs of three East Side banks, which were taken over recently by the State Superintendent of Banking. The indictment was returned yesterday morning, and it charged Mandel with changing an entry on the books of the bank.

It is alleged that Mrs. Mandel, the wife of the banker, borrowed $2,500 from the bank and that she later returned $25. The original entry crediting her with $25 was changed, it is charged, by Mr. Mandel to make it appear that she returned $2,500.

STATE BOARD OPENS FIRE ON KINGSBURY

Investigates Hiring of 47 Examiners Who Had Not Passed Civil Service Test.

WON'T ADMIT HIS COUNSEL

Rumor Says Municipal Commission May Be Removed with Approval of Gov. Glynn.

When John A. Kingsbury, Commissioner of Charities, was called before the State Civil Service Commission yesterday to explain the employment by his department of forty-seven examiners who had not passed the civil service examination, yet had been approved by the Municipal Civil Service Commission, he was unable to obtain admission for Assistant Corporation Counsel Stover as his legal representative and a stenographer. The State commission apparently expected to show that the employment of the examiners was in violation of the civil service laws.

The members of the State board were reticent regarding the session, and would admit only that they had questioned Commissioner Kingsbury about the employment of the examiners, but were not ready to say whether they considered him to have been within his rights or whether he left the impression that he believed he was.

Mr. Kingsbury could not be induced to say what had taken place. The Commissioner, however, did say he believed he was entirely within his rights when he employed the special examiners. Furthermore, he was informed yesterday by the Controller that the money with which these examiners were paid was not transferred by the Controller's office to the Department of Charities with the specification that it should be used for the employment of examiners, but to meet contingencies. Consequently, the Commissioner held that he was justified in using it for the extension of the work of the clerks, who thus were employed without civil service examination, the same as any other employes would have been.

Mr. Kingsbury said that was the view expressed to him by the Controller also. Therefore he was confident that the State Civil Service Commission would be unable to attribute to him any part in a violation of the civil service laws.

It has been rumored that the examination of the Municipal Civil Service Commission, appointed entirely by Mayor Mitchel, may result in the removal of all the members of that body with the approval of Gov. Glynn. Some of the local Commissioners do not hesitate to say that this is the purpose of the investigation, inspired as a Tammany political move against the city administration. The State Commissioners say they have not sounded the Governor. However, counsel for some of the members of the Municipal Civil Service Commission point out that, in case of their removal, the State Civil Service Commission will not have the power of appointment, while the Mayor may reappoint the deposed members.

The Municipal Civil Service Commission is composed of Dr. Henry Moskowitz, President, a Progressive; Darwin R. James, Jr., of Brooklyn, a Republican, and Alexander Keogh of Manhattan, an Independent Democrat. Much of these members is expected to pay a visit this morning to the State Civil Service Commission, sitting on the fourteenth floor of the Municipal Building. The sittings are conducted by Jacob Nau of Brooklyn, as president, with whom are associated Dr. Mayer Wolff, a Tammany Democrat of Manhattan, and James A. Levery of Poughkeepsie, a regular Republican.

When members of the State Commission were questioned about the significance of the examination of the members of the municipal body they made light of it, explaining that every two years the State Commission made an examination of the records of the Municipal Commission.

Commissioner Kingsbury is not doubtful about the wisdom of his employment of the special investigators. In the first month of their work, his records show, more than 200 dependents were cared for in municipal and other charitable institutions were returned to their homes, where their parents were able to support them.

"There were five cases typical of most of the others. Four years ago a mother applied to the city to care for her four children, asserting that her husband had deserted her and she was without means. The children were kept in one of the city's institutions for four years. At the end of two years agents of the Department of Charities made an investigation and reported that the parents were "not found." A second investigation resulted in a similar report. Recently one of the special expert examiners found that the mother and father were both living in a California city where they were prospering. The children were returned to them.

Three years ago another mother reported to the Department of Charities that she and her six children had been abandoned by her husband. The children were kept in a city institution until two months ago. At that time one of the examiners of the department found the father and mother living in Jersey City, where two children had been added to their family. They had successful business and their children were sent back to them.

BUSINESS WORLD

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday...6@7 per cent. for the best names.
Saturday...6@7 " " " " "
The quotation is for six months' paper.

Ribbon Demand Easing Up.

The demand for ribbons shows some indication of easing up, but manufacturers find conditions very satisfactory. Salesmen on the road visiting customers who did not reach this market are booking substantial orders. While Roman stripes continue good, there seems to be a growing tendency toward plaids. Dark warp prints are also gaining in popularity. Wide goods are required for the girdle and basque effects. Black is an easy favorite in the staple line, and it is sold mostly in wide satin and moire. Navy shows strong tendencies in the color field.

***

Customs Collectors Convene.

The second annual convention of Collectors of Customs was opened yesterday at the Custom House by Collector Malone, who welcomed nearly 100 Collectors and Deputies from all parts of the country. Addresses were also made by Andrew J. Peters, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and F. M. Halstead, Chief of the Customs Division of the Treasury. J. O. Davis, Collector at San Francisco, was chosen Chairman of the convention. During the week the officials will discuss many questions of customs procedure, practice and regulations.

***

Anthracene Oil Free of Duty.

The Treasury Department has put an end to the diversity of classification under the present tariff law of anthracene oil by issuing an order to officials of the customs that when the oil is of a specific gravity of from 1 to 1.12 and yields distillate of 50 per cent. or more, from 270 degrees to 400 degrees Centigrade, it is free of duty under Paragraph 452. Assistant Secretary Peters, in a circular letter to Collectors and other officers of the customs, says that coal tar oils possessing the properties of the specimen mentioned are entitled to duty exemption. Such oils may or may not contain crystallized anthracene.

***

Fall Dress Goods More Active.

The mails brought good business to secondary distributors of Fall dress goods here yesterday, following the cooler weather last week. Spot trading, however, was none too active. Broadcloths and serges continued to head the list of best sellers, with black and navy blue the most popular colors. The growing scarcity of certain dress goods, especially broadcloths, makes it imperative that orders for the balance of the season be placed as soon as they can be. Wash goods are moving in a fair way, and most of the jobbers' salesmen will leave for their respective territories this week with Spring lines.

Benefit in Protocol Extension.

Coat and suit manufacturers in this city see, in the signing of a peace protocol between the Philadelphia Manufacturers' Association and the union, something that will directly benefit this market. The protocol in the local trade was inaugurated four years ago, and some manufacturers claimed to be at a disadvantage here in comparison with other coat and suit centres for the reason that prices provided for by the protocol were higher and the hours shorter than obtained elsewhere. Now that there seems to be a well-founded opinion that the agreement will be extended to three other centres, there is not so much ground for the belief that competition will continue unequal.

Spring Openings of Dress Goods.

The American Woolen Company yesterday opened its line of suitings, cloakings, and skirtings for the Spring of 1915 season. Prices on repeat numbers are based on present quotations for the Fall. The range of prices is from 57½ cents to $2.12½ a yard, and the variety of styles offered sets the widest in the history of the company. A broadcloth sponged and shrunk is priced at $1. Beach cloths are offered at a range of from 65 cents to 75 cents a yard, with an all-worsted fabric priced at $1.07½. Quotations on a complete line of serges, including French and mannish serges, run up to $1.50 a yard. Wilson & Lawrence also opened their Spring line for the women's wear trade yesterday, their prices ranging from 87½ cents to $1.50 a yard.

Imports Take a Jump.

Not since hostilities broke out in Europe have such large consignments of merchandise of all kinds been received at this port as arrived on Saturday and Sunday. Eight steamers docked in the period of forty-eight hours with the result that yesterday importers besieged the docks and Appraiser's Stores in the effort to hurry the customs examination in order that the goods might be taken to the warerooms of their own-ers. Collections of duties reported at the Custom House are beginning to reflect normal conditions. Yesterday's receipts aggregated $682,888.71, of which $256,676.67 represented duties on goods withdrawn from bonded warehouses. Customs officials gave it as their belief that the worst has been passed and that from now on a marked improvement may be expected in importations here.

Will Take Cotton as Money.

According to a local wholesaler, the head of a well-known dry goods concern in Mississippi which does both a jobbing and a retail business will soon begin taking cotton as money in the business transactions of his establishment with the growers. It is said that he will take this cotton on the basis of 8 cents a pound. He will hold it until it is definitely known whether a higher price can be got for it. If a higher price is had, he will credit the grower, per pound, with whatever the cotton will bring above 8 cents, presumably with the necessary reduction for storage charges, and possibly, interest. In other words, it is not the merchant's intention to make a profit for himself on the cotton, but to combat pessimism and dull business by taking it in lieu of cash. Just how he will finance his own business while the cotton is in storage was not disclosed.

***

Tariff Rebate Evidence Wanting.

It is apparent from current decisions of the Board of General Appraisers that many importers, when making claims in their protests for the 5 per cent. rebate provided for when merchandise is imported in ships of American registry, fail at the trials of the cases to submit adequate testimony in support of their contentions. In other cases, while sufficient evidence is presented as to the classification of the goods under the tariff, none at all in behalf of the rebate is submitted. It thus happens that, while many protests for lower classifications are sustained by the board, the claims for the rebate are overruled. It was said yesterday at the offices of the board that importers will further their own interests by backing up their claims for the rebate by evidence. The test case in the 5 per cent. matter comes up for argument this month before the Customs Court at Washington. Should the decision be adverse to the Government, only importers' claims sustained by the board will become liable to refunds.

About Spring Underwear.

The complaint made by the mills and selling agents a few weeks back that the advance buying of Spring lines by the jobbers was subnormal, is being echoed by the jobbers, who now have men on the road. In other words, the retailers are going very slowly in their commitments for the new season. No reason was given yesterday for the holding off of the retailers beyond the general condition of the business world, but it was said that the holding off of the jobbers was due to the belief that better prices could be obtained later by showing conservatism now. The fact that certain lines of low-end Fall underwear have dropped about 1½ per cent. since February, coupled with the seemingly inevitable coming of lower cotton, is said apparently to substantiate the belief of the wholesalers. Current underwear business with the jobbers is only fair. A feature of it is said to be the gradual taking up of men's union suits by the Eastern retailers. While the change from separate garments is said to be very slow compared with the West, there are plain signs that the tide has turned.

***

Gray Goods Quiet Down.

Buying was good in the local print-cloth market yesterday, but it was hardly as active as in the closing days of last week. Trading was hampered somewhat by the unwillingness of the mills to contract for long deliveries at the prices reached late last week. There was, however, a nice business done on 39½-inch 64-60s on contract at 4 cents, with 64-56s in the same width moving in a fair way for near-by delivery earlier in the day at 3 15-16 cents. Thirty-nine-inch 68-72s sold on contract for 4¾ cents, but later the mills wanted 5 cents; 80 squares in that width received large bids of 5¾ cents on contract. Some sales of this construction were made at 5½ cents, but the mills wanted 6 cents at the close. There was a good movement of 38½-inch 60-48s at 3½ cents for delivery in the next three months, but some mills refused this figure. Fall River prices were firmly held and it is a notable feature that values of Southern goods are gradually getting back to levels at which Eastern fabrics have been held. The movement of sheetings was hardly more than fair. The day's closing prices follow:

39-inch 80-80s	6c	36½-inch 64-56s	4½c
38-inch 72-76s	5½c	39½-inch 60-52s	4¾c
39-inch 68-72s	5c	39½-inch 60-48s	3½c
36-inch 64-64s	4¾c	37-inch 64-60s	4¼c
38½-inch 64-60s	4¾c	37-inch 60-52s	3¾c

City Loses Tunnel Engineer.

Frederick C. Noble, who was to have had charge of the construction of the East River tunnels of the new subway system, has resigned his place as division engineer of the Public Service Commission and his successor is expected to be appointed this morning by the commission. Mr. Noble had a high reputation as an authority on work under compressed air, as he was in charge of the construction of the present Brooklyn tunnel. It is understood that he has left the service of the commission to take up some of the consulting engineering practice which belonged to his father, Alfred Noble, who died a few months ago.

Evelyn Thaw Out of Bankruptcy.

A discharge in bankruptcy was granted yesterday in the Federal District Court to Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, wife of Harry K. Thaw. No creditors objected to the order. Mrs. Thaw filed a petition on Aug. 2 last year, stating that her liabilities were $8,054, and that her assets were only $250. At that time Mrs. Thaw gave her address as 130 West Forty-fifth Street.

LARGE MEAT SUPPLY IS IN COLD STORAGE

Witnesses Testify in Brooklyn Food Inquiry That There Is No Shortage.

TEACH BUYING IN SCHOOLS

Butchers and Grocers Will Volunteer to Instruct Children in Food Shopping.

While the packers are talking of the law of supply and demand as regulating meat prices, the amount of meats in cold storage in this city continues to grow in volume. According to testimony brought out at the inquiry into food prices before Justice Benedict in Brooklyn yesterday there is at the present time practically three times the quantity awaiting a market in this city and vicinity that there was last year.

Harry H. Lewis, Secretary of the Merchants' Refrigerator Company, which has storehouses in Manhattan and Jersey City, testified that his firm had stored in its cold storage plants on Sept. 8 over 777,000 pounds of meat, compared with 234,765 pounds of beef on the same date last year. Thomas A. Adams, President of the Union Terminal Company, declared that on May 1 last his company had 1,582,000 pounds of beef, and on Sept. 1 there was stored 2,889,763 pounds. He said that nearly all of this beef came from Argentina.

Louis Stern, President of the Star Beef and Provision Company, declared there was no shortage of beef unless it was caused by the export of meat to Europe. He said he heard that the Armours shipped more than 3,000,000 pounds of beef to England for the British Army last week. Eugene W. Lewis, Treasurer of the National Cold Storage Company of 66 Furman Street, Brooklyn, testified that in one storehouse of the company there are stored 2,104,000 pounds of beat. He said this meat belonged to the packers who operate in the local markets.

It was reported that the food inquiry conducted by United States District Attorney William J. Youngs in Brooklyn had reached the stage where he is prepared to go before the Federal Grand Jury and ask for indictments. Col. Youngs when asked about this rumor refused to discuss it.

The Mayor's Committee on Food Supply, of which George W. Perkins is the Chairman, met yesterday, and today the first steps will be taken to introduce the study of how to buy properly in the public schools. President Churchill of the Board of Education has notified Mr. Perkins that the course will be begun in small groups of schools and will be extended to other schools, if practical, as fast as possible. The studies are to be under the supervision of ten retired butchers and an equal number of grocers who have volunteered their services.

The study of how to shop properly will be taken up after the regular school hours. Attendance will not be compulsory, but it is expected the course will hold sufficient interest to keep the children in after school, as it is contemplated using cuts of real meats and real provisions for the purpose of demonstration.

As a result of the interest awakened by the meeting in New Hyde Park, L. I., on Saturday night, when Borough President Marks explained the plan and purpose of the new fiefs, the truck farmers of that part of Long Island are arranging a co-operative organization to handle their shipments and distribute them in a systematic way.

Borough President Marks said yesterday: "In my talks to the farmers of Long Island I have presented the free markets to them as a business proposition. I do not find them particularly interested in the city's poor or the question of food supply. I did not expect them to be. As President of the borough, I am naturally interested in getting the largest and best food supply to the people at the lowest possible prices. These markets are needed, and they are appreciated by the people. The only question still unsettled is the probability of securing constant and sufficient supplies of fresh farm products at reasonable prices."

The general outlook so far as foodstuffs is concerned is rather optimistic today, as the drop in wheat will bring a corresponding drop in flour. Sugar is a shade lower and the tendency is the same in other commodities is toward lower prices. D. W. Cook, Vice President of the Erie Railroad and a member of the Transportation Committee of the Mayor's Committee, who has been making an investigation into conditions in various parts of the country, is of the opinion that the downward movement in wheat will be sustained. One of the big concerns putting oatmeal in packages has sent a circular to the trade announcing a rise of 10 cents on crates of 25-cent packages on Sept. 28. Oats, the notice says, have gone up 45 per cent.

The meat market moved up a cent a pound yesterday on beef, which sold at 13 cents. Choice native sides brought from 12 to 16 cents in the wholesale market.

William P. Bonbright & Co., bankers of 14 Wall Street, are reported to have contracted for 10,000 pounds of canned beef for the British Government. It is also reported that Armour & Co. have purchased 12,000 head of Texas steers for shipment to England. This shipment, it is said, is already in the process of being put on board ship. Shipments of wheat to Europe, including those from Canada last week were large. The total was 7,460,000 bushels, which included 3,000,000 to the United Kingdom, 774,000 to Holland, 2,179,000 to France, and 1,407,080 to other Continental ports. There were no shipments to to Belgium or Germany.

GRAIN MARKETS DECLINE.

Many Operators Think That Hostilities Will Shortly End.

The grain markets suffered a decline yesterday which verged on a collapse of prices because of heavy offerings from interior points and news from the European battlefields that indicated a possible early ending of hostilities. Wheat dropped 9 cents a bushel on the Produce Exchange, following a decline in Chicago which extended from 6¾ to 8¼ cents in the future options.

Many buyers of recent weeks who had taken on future contracts with the belief that the war would be prolonged, let their holdings go on the strength of the news that the Germans were retreating. Prices were unsettled, too, by early weakness in the Liverpool market, and sentiment here was further inclined toward the selling side by cables from British centres which stated that the United Kingdom was already well stocked with grain of all sorts.

Declines in corn and oats options were heavy, the latter being affected by an increase of more than 2,000,000 bushels in the visible supply over the week end. Corn made an average recession of 2¾ cents a bushel in the September, December, and May options, while oats was down at the close from 4½ to 4¾ cents.

WAR ON INDUSTRIAL ILLS.

A Campaign Is Under Way for Sickness Insurance in This Country.

War has been declared on industrial sickness by the American Association for Labor Legislation. Following the successful campaign for accident compensation which now has captured the principal States, a committee of the nation's experts who have been working quietly on plans for a year and a half declares that sickness insurance must be established, with emphasis on medical care, in order that it shall lead to a campaign of health conservation similar to the "safety first" movement resulting from accident compensation.

The committee includes such men as Henry R. Seager, Miles M. Dawson, Edward T. Devine, and Dr. I. M. Rubinow of New York; Charles R. Henderson of Chicago University, Henry J. Harris of the Library of Congress, and Carroll W. Doten of Boston, and has the co-operation of expert legislative draftsmen and leading representatives of workmen and employers. The Association for Labor Legislation called the first American conference on occupational diseases in 1910 and on social insurance in 1913, and announces it is now drafting bills for a vigorous legislative campaign to initiate the movement for sickness insurance in the United States.

Heavy Calendar for Surrogates.

The first call of the Fall calendar in the Surrogates' Court today will show a list of 150 cases, the same number listed upon the same day last year. This proves, according to Assistant Clerk of the Surrogates' Court Nagle, that there is more litigation over estates in Manhattan this year than there was last, as last year's calendar included cases from the Bronx, which is a separate county now. The first day of the new term of trial by jury in the Surrogates' Court will be Oct. 5.

THE UNITED SERVICE.

Army Orders.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—1st Lt. C. A. Spaulding, Q. M. C., U. S. Fl. Mantra, S. C., to home and relieved from active duty. The retirement of Col. A. C. Sharpe, Inf., unassigned, announced.

Maj. A. H. Sanders, Adjt. Gen., from detail in the Adjt. Gen.'s dept. He will remain on his present duties until further orders.

Maj. W. F. Truby, M. C., from duty Ft. Mason, Cal., to proper station at Ft. Winfield Scott, Cal.

RAISE RADIO RATES AT TUCKERTON PLANT

Government Orders Lieut. Gygax to Charge 25 Cents a Word Instead of 17 Cents.

MODIFIES SOME RULES

Commercial or Private Messages Are Limited to 25 Words and Forwarded at Sender's Risk.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—New instructions for the operation of the Tuckerton Wireless Station were issued by the Navy Department today to Lieut. Felix X. Gygax, the naval officer in charge of the station.

Instructions were given to Lieut. Gygax on Sept. 7 to charge 17 cents a word, cable count, with a ten-word minimum. The regulations issued today provide for station charges of 25 cents a word, cable count, without a minimum charge. It was the original intention to establish at the Tuckerton Station rates similar to the cable rates to Germany and England. It was ascertained after the rate had been fixed at 17 cents that 25 cents was the cable rate to Germany. The rule covering paraphrasing has been modified also. It read originally:

No messages shall be transmitted or delivered until they have been first paraphrased by the censors as may be necessary to insure their neutral character, whether they are received or are to be sent in plain language or in code, cipher, or foreign language.

This rule has now been modified to read:

No messages will be transmitted or delivered until they have been first paraphrased by the censors as may be necessary to insure their neutral character, whether they are received or are to be sent in plain language or in code, cipher, or foreign language.

Here are the instructions to Lieut. Gygax:

In addition to complying with the provisions of the executive orders of Sept. 5, 1914, you will be guided by the following instructions relative to the operation of the Tuckerton radio station:

1. The station shall be used only for transmitting to or receiving from shore stations in Europe and the United Kingdom.

2. Naval officials at this station assure themselves that the messages handed are strictly neutral in character. No commercial message will be permitted to be handled.

3. No messages in cipher or code shall be transmitted or received for delivery unless the United States naval officials are supplied with translations of such messages in the English language and such official translations be satisfied of the bona fides of the translations.

5. Official radiograms from officials of the United States Government or diplomatic officials of foreign Governments on official (State) business will have priority over all other messages, and will be forwarded in order of sequence of their receipt at the station.

6. All commercial or private radiograms must be limited to twenty-five words, including the "address" and "signature," and such radiograms must be in plain language. No code or cipher messages for this class of radiograms will be received for transmission. They will not contain any arbitrary terms or unintelligible matter which has not been explained to the officials.

7. Radiograms involving press dispatches will not be in any way different from commercial or private radiograms.

8. All commercial or private radiograms or press radiograms will only be accepted at the station for delivery when presented in the order of receipt at the station, and, furthermore, there can be no guarantee given for their delivery in foreign points.

9. All addresses must be in plain language, and must consist of at least four words, and all radiograms must be accompanied by the signature which will consist of at least two words.

10. All messages must be in the form of radiograms and shall apply to calls of twenty words without a minimum and shall not be transmitted unless fully prepaid at office of origin.

11. No messages will be transmitted or delivered until they have been first paraphrased by the censors as may be necessary to ensure their neutral character, whether they are received or are to be sent in plain language or in code, cipher, or foreign language.

12. No messages shall be sent or delivered until countermanded by the senior officer present at the Tuckerton station will be twenty-five (25) cents a word cable count without a minimum charge.

14. Accounting returns will be made monthly on the regular forms to the office of the Superintendent of Radio Service, Radio, Va.

15. Cipher and code books furnished as well as the contents of all messages handled will be considered as confidential.

16. The call letters for the Tuckerton station will be WWU.

Rules 3, 5, 7, 8, 9, and 10, as set forth in today's letter from the Navy Department to Lieut. Gygax are all new and were not covered in the original instructions. The original instructions to Lieut. Gygax said:

You are authorized to make such arrangements for schedules with radio stations in Europe or the United Kingdom as will serve best to clear the radio traffic involved.

The new instructions sent today cancel this.

CITY BREVITIES.

Three hundred and fifty girls employed as fur stuff lining makers on strook on Saturday, agreed yesterday to go back to work upon being granted a forty-nine-hour week, recognition of their union, pay for ten legal holidays in the year, and a minimum wage scale.

The strike of the alteration painters and paperhangers against the contractors, involving 12,000 workers, was settled yesterday afternoon by the Board of Mediation and Arbitration, the wages of the strikers being raised from $16.70 a week to $19.25 a week.

Louis Harburger, nineteen years old, son of ex-Sheriff Julius Harburger, was fined $25 in the Men's Night Court last night for speeding on a motor cycle in Fifth Avenue, between Sixty-seventh and Sixty-eighth Streets.

Gustave Zanzel, four years old, of 523 East 148th Street, Bronx, pushed a baby carriage containing Florence Keating, three months old, of the same address down the stone steps of a deep cellar that night. The baby was probably fatally injured.

Major Gen. Leonard Wood, former Chief of Staff of the United States Army, will be the guest of the Army and Navy Club at the twenty-fifth anniversary of the club's founding on Sept. 25.

The fortieth annual session of the German Synod of the East of the Reformed Church of the United States will convene on Wednesday at St. Paul's German Evangelical Reformed Church, 605 East 161st Street, the Bronx.

Edward "Gunboat" Smith, the heavyweight prizefighter, was fined $5 by Magistrate Folwell in the Flatbush Police Court yesterday for threatening Detective John Veary.

The tugboat Florence, catching fire through overheated pipes from the engine room, at the foot of Quay Street, Greenpoint, L. I., was burned to the water's edge yesterday morning.

County Judge Roy in Brooklyn had just suspended sentence on Harry McNulty, twenty-three years old, of Jersey City, in order to free him to support his wife and three-months-old baby, when it was announced that the child had died that morning.

William Carpenter, nine years, of 300 West Forty-first Street, fell into the North River at the foot of West Fiftieth Street yesterday and was rescued by John Baker.

The annual convention of the State Association of Civil Service Employes will be held in the City Hall on Saturday and Monday next with Dr. Joseph O'Connell, chief clerk to the chair. Gov. Glynn and Mayor Mitchel are expected to give addresses.

The tentative code of city ordinances prepared by the Board of Aldermen's committee was received yesterday from the printer. Alderman Feeley revised the work in the Summer while he was on his honeymoon in Maine, assisted by Assistant Corporation Counsel McNulty.

The Efficiency Society of New York will meet on Sept. 17 and the three following days at Lake Placid. William R. Willcox, ex-Chairman of the Public Service Commission, will preside.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Pressure continues high over the States east of the Mississippi River and is low over the Plains States, the Rocky Mountain and plateau region, with the lowest pressure over the Western Canadian Provinces.

There were showers during the last twenty-four hours in the upper lake region, the Upper Mississippi Valley, the Plains States, and the Northwest. The rains were heavy in parts of Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa, Illinois, and Wisconsin. In other parts of the country the weather remained generally fair.

Temperatures continue low for the season throughout the East and over the Rocky Mountain and plateau regions, and they remain above normal in the great central valleys, the lake region, and the Western Gulf States.

Generally fair weather with moderate temperatures will continue Tuesday and Wednesday throughout the East and South, the Ohio Valley, and the lower lake region, while over the upper lake region, the Upper Mississippi Valley, and the Northwest the weather will be unsettled, with probably showers.

No important temperature change is indicated for any section, although cooler weather is probable Wednesday in the Northwest.

Winds along the North Atlantic Coast will be moderate variable Tuesday and Wednesday; Middle Atlantic Coast, Northeast and South Atlantic Coast, fresh to strong northeast.

FORECASTS: TODAY AND WEDNESDAY.

New York, New Jersey, New England, and Eastern Pennsylvania—Generally fair Tuesday and probably Wednesday.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours, ending at the Weather Bureau, from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

BANKRUPTCY NOTICES.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, Southern District of New York.—In the matter of BUCHNER & FISCHER SILK MFG. CO., Alleged Bankrupt.

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy having therefore been filed against the above-named alleged bankrupt on or about the 6th day of August, 1914, and Jacob J. Lasser having been duly appointed receiver and having duly qualified as such, and the said receiver having received an offer for the sale of all of the assets of the above-named alleged bankrupt on the terms and conditions set forth in the said offer annexed to the petition herein and marked Exhibit "A."

Now, upon reading the annexed petition of Jacob J. Lasser, the receiver herein, sworn to the 12th day of September, 1914, and the said offer dated September 6th, 1914, and upon motion of the said receiver, it is

Ordered, That the alleged bankrupt herein and all its creditors be and they hereby are directed to show cause at a stated term of this court, to be held on the 23d day of September, 1914, at the United States District Court, in the Post Office Building, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, in said Southern District of New York, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon of said day, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, why all the assets of the above-named alleged bankrupt, including all property of every nature and kind which have come into or now are in the possession of said receiver, and particularly including all assets mentioned in said annexed offer, should not be sold, transferred, conveyed, assigned, and set over pursuant to and in accordance with the terms and provisions of said offer, or in accordance with such conditions and further directions and modifications as this court may fix, and the said alleged bankrupt, and each and every one of its creditors, are directed then and there to show cause why said offer should not be accepted in part or in whole, or why such other or further order should not be made for the sale, transfer, or disposition of any or all of the assets of the alleged bankrupt as to this court may appear just, proper, and advisable, and why an order should not be made directing said receiver to make, execute, acknowledge, and deliver such instruments as may be necessary and proper to vest in good and lawful title in and to any and all of the assets of the alleged bankrupt sold, transferred, or assigned by order of this court, and why any and all of such orders in part or in whole as are prayed for in the annexed petition should not be granted, and why such other and further relief in the premises as may seem to the court just, proper, and necessary should not be granted; and it is further

Ordered, That due, sufficient, and complete service of this order and of the aforesaid petition and offer may be made as follows:

By serving a copy on one of the officers of the alleged bankrupt on or before the 18th day of September, 1914; and

By mailing a copy of this order and of said petition and offer to each of the creditors of the alleged bankrupt, known to the receiver, whose address appears on the books of the bankrupt company, at the address so appearing, such mailing to be made on or before the 18th day of September, 1914, from the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York; and

MASSA

FIRST CHINESE GIRLS HERE ON U. S. BOUNTY

Ten Young Women to be Educated from Remitted Boxer Indemnity Fund.

ALL READY FOR COLLEGE

Were Chosen by Competitive Examination in English—Y. W. C. A. Their Guardian.

Ten Chinese girls, the first to be sent to the United States on what is known as the American Indemnity Fund, will arrive in New York today under the chaperonage of the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association. They will be taken to the training school in the National Board Building, at Lexington Avenue and Fifty-second Street, where they will remain until schools are chosen for them.

When the United States, in 1908, remitted $14,000,000 of the indemnity due from China for damages incident to the Boxer troubles, the Chinese Government formed the American Indemnity Fund, with the money. An American Academy was built and endowed in Peking with part of it, and in the last five years many Chinese boys have been educated in the United States with proceeds from the remainder. But until this year Chinese girls have not shared in the advantages of the fund. The ten arriving today will receive college educations in America at the expense of the fund, and they will then return to China and give three years to the service of the Government.

The girls were chosen by competitive examinations held in English in Peking. They are Christians, and eight of them are daughters of Chinese Christian clergymen. This is considered significant as indicating that Christianity and missionary influence in China afford material advantages to the natives.

The girls landed in San Francisco last week and started at once by rail across the continent. Dr. Tsur, the director of the Tsinghau Academy, the Indemnity Fund school in Peking, came over with them and will accompany them to New York. T. T. Wong, director of the Chinese Students in America, who has headquarters in Washington, will arrive here in time to meet the girls and escort them to the Y. W. C. A. building.

All the way from China officers of the Y. W. C. A. have had friendly oversight of the girls, and the National Board in New York will assist in selecting the schools they will attend. Although all of the girls speak English and have taken college entrance accomplishments, they will enter preparatory schools first, so that they may become accustomed to American ways before beginning college work.

HOSE CHECKS "MOVIE" RIOT.

200 Actor-Soldiers Subdued at Mouths of the Nozzles.

Two lines of fire hose reinforced the police of Edgewater, N. J., yesterday when 200 men who had been engaged to act as soldiers in a moving-picture scene rioted because of a dispute over wages.

The soldiers participated in "The Siege of Quebec Heights," their part being to climb the steep sides of the palisades for four hours while regular actors took up commanding positions before the camera.

When the climbing of the heights was over each soldier claimed $2 and a meal, but the meal and $1.25 was the compensation offered. The riot, more realistic than anything offered in the battles staged before the camera, followed.

The Edgewater police, with the help of the fire hose, drove the rioters off the battlefield and herded them together at the Fort Lee Ferry.

CARMAN DENOUNCES MAID.

Hears She Testified Mrs. Carman Told Her of Slaying.

Dr. Edwin Carman of Freeport, L. I., yesterday visited his wife, Mrs. Florence C. Carman, who is in the Mineola Jail awaiting trial upon a charge of first degree murder for the slaying of Mrs. Louise Bailey of Hempstead.

"But for Celia Coleman no indictment would have been found," he said later. "I have been informed she told the Grand Jury she heard Mrs. Carman exclaim, while holding a revolver in her hand a moment after the shooting, that she had found a woman in my office and had shot her. If she told any such story, it was a lie made out of whole cloth. She couldn't have been present at such a scene, because there was no such revolver in the house, and Mrs. Carman therefore did not use it. I intend to get the Grand Jury minutes to learn if Celia really so testified."

Mrs. Carman was reported to be much more nervous than during the previous three since her latest arrest.

MOTHER AND CHILD KILLED.

Bodies Found in the Woods—Theory of Murder and Suicide.

Special to The New York Times.

ELIZABETHTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 14.—After scouring the country all night a searching party yesterday morning found the bodies of Mrs. Charles Newland and her daughter, Elisabeth, five years old, in a strip of woods a short distance from Elizabethtown. A stocking tightly wound around the woman's neck had strangled her, and the child had also been strangled. Coroner Reed of Morian said it seemed evident that Mrs. Newland had strangled the child with the stocking, and then killed herself in the same manner.

Mrs. Newland was thirty-two years old, and is said to have been a member of a wealthy Philadelphia family. She and her daughter had been staying at their Summer home in Elizabethtown. Her husband, it is understood, is in Texas.

Mrs. Newland and her daughter left their home Saturday afternoon, presumably for a stroll. When they failed to return at night their friends became alarmed, and a searching party was organized. The searchers went over all the roads and through the woods, and about 8 o'clock yesterday morning the two bodies were found.

Brooding over family trouble is said to have been the cause of the tragedy.

TO be accepted in the best society, a man must be "there."

To be accepted by the smartest dressers, a hatter must be "there" with the style.

You will be accepted as a Goodresser if you seek out Truly Warner. The new styles are here and they're "there."

The Cutaway will go down in hat history as the most becoming hat ever designed.
The crown is cut away in a new and original way, giving more grace and style than was ever put into a soft hat.
